FRANCE SNUBS LLOYD GEORGE

WAVE OF CRIME AS INSURANCE RATES MOVE UP

Premiums Advance 50 Per Cent.

While police blotters were recording an unusual outbreak of holdups, automobile thefts and minor roberries, and the arrest of more than 100 robber suspects, insurance companies last night announced that in view of prevailing criminality the rates for burglary and theft insurance in Chicago, as well as in other principal cities of the country, were to be increased 50 per cent.

According to H. L. Cluff, president of the Burglary Insurance Underwriters' association, most of the present policies on street robberies are combined with household burglary insurance, for which rates are $4 for the first $1,000 and $3 on each additional $1,000. Policies issued against holdups and losses from pickpockets alone carry a premium of $10 per $1,000. The new rates will increase the burglary policy from $4 to $6 and from $10 to $15 on the holdup and pickpocket risks.

Negro Band Taken.

Perhaps the paramount feature in police circles for the night lay in the capture of the four colored persons, whose activities in the last three weeks have resulted in more than fifty holdups and $15,000 in loot, and their white leader.

They were arrested at 51st and La Salle streets by a squad of men from the detective bureau in command of Lieut. David Schwartz after a half mile chase down Michigan boulevard.

Chief Fitzmorris, Chief Detective Hughes and more than a hundred extra policemen were in the south side police districts to hunt the quintet down. A dozen flivvers and a battalion of motorcycle men reinforced them. Their quarry was sighted first at 47th street and Michigan avenue.

Have Guns and Masks.

At the detective bureau the men said they were Samuel Miller, 26 East 23d street; James Lee, 24 East 38th street; James Boves, 823 42d place; James Revels, 3136 State street, and Daniel Kinnard, 3120 Rhodes avenue. Three guns, several masks and considerable money was found on them.

In other raids made by the bureau men more than a hundred were seized. The majority of these came from the south side districts and were mainly Negroes, suspected of holdup activities.

South Halsted street in the 200 block saw four vice raids and the unearthing of a small but flourishing vice trust. Twenty men and nine women were arrested here. The police found the earth below the buildings a network of communicating tunnels. A patron would enter a saloon on the corner and in a trice be transported into a disorderly house in the middle of a block.

Held for "Show-up."

The men arrested were all held at the bureau or at the Desplaines street station for a "show-up" this afternoon. Long after midnight, with Chiefs Fitzmorris and Hughes and their squads still touring the south side, their numbers were being constantly augmented.

Despite these maneuvers, however, the list of holdups rolled in unusually fast. These also, were centered on the south and west sides. Three drivers of grocery and laundry wagons fell victims to four men in an automobile. Another gang specialized on groceries and tailoring establishments.

Still others specialized on lone pedestrians walking quiet streets. There were two instances of women victims, one on the north side, one on the far south side.

Auto Deaths Increase.

Deaths in automobile accidents—with many consequent arrests and trials of careless drivers—received the attention of the National Safety council in a meeting in Chicago yesterday. An estimate based on comparison of 1920 figures with reports already received from several cities and states gaves a total for the nation of between 12,000 and 15,000, an increase of from 1,000 to 4,000 over 1920.

Of the figures so far received Chicago showed a gain of from 540 in 1920 to 660 in 1921. New York City, with its more than double the population, had only 638 deaths in 1921, as against 555 in 1920. New York state as a whole reported for last year a total of 1,981.

The officers of the council began a three day session here yesterday. Methods of prevention of accidents are to form the basis of the discussion.

Abraham Simon of 519 Rush street was held up at Michigan boulevard and Grand avenue by three men and robbed of $337.

EVANSTON MAN IS HELD UP IN HOME; FAMILY LOOKS ON

Edmund Carrington, western manager for the Butterick Publishing company, was held up in his home at 1139 Elmwood avenue, Evanston, last night by a bandit who took $70 from Carrington's pocket, but returned a watch, which was a gift, at the request of Mrs. Carrington, who entered the parlor as her husband was being searched.

Two small children witnessed the scene, gazing through the banisters from upstairs as their father was held up without creating a disturbance.

Mr. and Mrs. Carrington were playing cards when the doorbell rang. They thought it was their son, Eugene, 19 years old, returning. Mr. Carrington answered the doorbell. As he opened the door a gun was pointed at him.

"Throw up your hands and back up," was the command of the robber, who appeared to be about 20 years old.

GOV. SMALL MUST PLEAD SATURDAY

Loses Fight to Knock Out Specific Charges.

Waukegan, Ill., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Gov. Len Small today lost his last chanace of escaping trial on indictments charging him and Verne Curtis with conspiracy to defraud the state out of interest on state funds.

Judge Clair C. Edwards overruled Small's motion to strike out important sections of the bill of particulars filed by the state. He then ordered that Gov. Small and Curtis shall be arraigned for plea to the indictments on next Saturday morning at 10 o'clock.

At that time, the judge announced, he will hear arguments on the motion for separate trials of Small and Curtis.

Judge Loses No Time.

The decision of Judge Edwards came as a surprise, for it was expected he would take some days to rule on the motion of the defendants, by which they made a general assault on the main structure of the state's case. Instead, as soon as the arguments of the governors' lawyers were completed he announced his decision, without giving the state an opportunity to reply.

In their arguments against the bill of particulars Gov. Small's lawyers fought their hardest for a decision that would exclude from the trial all evidence concerning the interest money that he and his co-defendants are accused of withholding from the state.

With such a victory in their grasp the attorneys for the defense would have faced only the problem of meeting the charge that the alleged conspirators had taken and retained funds actually removed from the state treasury.

Find Offense Is Charged.

This, they contended, was not alleged by the state and they appeared somewhat taken back when counsel for the state pointed out that one paragraph of the bill of particulars does charge this specific offense in addition to the charge that interest was pocketed. This paragraph alleges that the defendants or some of them took $535,000 of state funds and bought securities which are still in their possession.

In spite of this direct pointing out of this charge, the defense continued to argue that all evidence concerning interest on state funds was "scandalous, impertinent, incompetent and irrelevant" and had no part in the case. In other words, they contended that the whole structure of the state's case should be excluded from the trial.

Attack Twenty Paragraphs.

The defendants' motion was to strike out twenty paragraphs from the bill of particulars, to strike out parts of five other paragraphs, to particularize fully some other paragraphs, and to give still additional information which, it was contended, should have been but was not included in the bill.

On this motion Attorneys C. C. Le Forgee and Alexander Beaubien argued almost the entire day. The state was represented by Assistant Attorney General Thomas Marshall.

CASINO CLUB RAIDED AGAIN; RESULT 1 PINT?

Society Tea Party Is Interrupted.

Federal prohibition agents yesterday swept up North Michigan avenue to the fashionable Delaware place area that was once Streeterville, and captured the Casino club, rendezvous of society.

MRS. W. C. WINTER.

Official records show there were but thirteen of the invaders. Guests at the club say there were at least forty in the army and an equal number of reporters, photographers, and movie men.

Official records reported the seizure of a gallon of burgundy, a quart of recently made champagne, and half a truckload of empty jugs and bottles. Officials of the club say the raiders got only a pint bottle of sherry wine purchased on prescription yesterday morning by Edward Ballantyne, steward of the club, for his wife and which stood on a dresser in his bedroom, that all the rest of the bottles discovered contained nothing worse than water and ginger ale.

A Nice Little Tea Party.

Federal officials and clubmembers agree that instead of a bacchanal jamboree the invaders stumbled on nothing more exciting than a pleasant little tea party of seven society women in an ante-room and that instead of resistance or attempts at evasion the raiders were received with open arms.

In the last two months the exclusive name of the Casino club has appeared often in public prints. First was an election in which the "bone dry" element appeared. Then came a police raid and a subsequent arrest. Recently there has been a quiet federal investigation. By whom that investigation was made federal officials do not disclose, but the investigator somehow discovered and reported the presence of an empty demijohn in the basement.

Armed with this evidence, Prohibition Agents Mark Potter and Roy A. Niehoff went before United States Commissioner James R. Glass last Wednesday. They asked for a search warrant for the club.

Empty Demijohn His Evidence.

"Have you evidence that liquor was sold there?" Potter was asked.

"No," he replied—then he told about the demijohn. The writ was granted at once.

Yesterday Agents Potter and Niehoff and eleven others marched in semimilitary order from the Transportation building to waiting automobiles outside. They clambered in. The cars purred away.

MRS. J. M. CUDAHY.
[Lewis Smith Photo.]

Just before they reached the club they stopped for momentary conversation. Then the charge. One car with its squad dashed smartly down Delaware place, east of Michigan avenue, to the front door. The other car debouched to the rear of the little pink club house.

The six men in the front walked to the door, opened it, walked in, and removed their hats. The seven in the rear charged across the intervening space, hurdling fences and aiming for a rear door. There the squad split. Two went to the French windows on the east and west sides to guard against escaping occupants. One was posted near the servants' quarters. The remainder, under Agent Niehoff, battered down the kitchen door.

A Babel of Tongues.

The first squad, under Agent Potter, found the ballroom empty. From the anteroom behind heavy curtains came only a diffused murmur of small conversation, with the tinkle of a little laugh interspersed now and again. The agents headed for the kitchen.

They had just arrived there when the rear door flew open with a crash and Agent Niehoff and his squad appeared. There was commotion and near panic among the servants. Questions flew about in French, German, and Italian—they were unanswered. Steward Ballantyne, in his rear apartment, heard

Love Hegira Ended; Girl Dies of Poison

Dorothy Monell, 17 years old, only daughter of a wealthy St. Louis family, who ran away with her mother's chauffeur last Monday, took poison when torn from him here yesterday and died in her mother's arms.

Police are searching for the chauffeur, Thomas J. Claussens, or Clarkson. He is married and the father of a 2 year old baby.

Mrs. Elsie G. Monell, 701 Arsenal avenue, St. Louis, mother of the girl, is prostrated at the home of her brother, A. F. Gerak, 1353 Wilson avenue, sales manager for the Todd Protectograph company, with offices in the Continental and Commercial National Bank building.

Mother Finds Couple.

The girl and the chauffeur were found by the mother yesterday morning in rooms at 2518 Prairie avenue.

"What do you want?" the girl cried out as her mother entered.

"I want to speak with Claussens first, dear," the mother told her.

"Claussens," she said, turning on the chauffeur, "you broke your promise to me. You are vilest thing in the world to steal this young girl away from her home. You are not fit to live."

"But I love her," the chauffeur said.

"You are supposed also to love your wife and baby," the mother lashed him. He slunk from the room.

Then she turned to her daughter.

"Come, dear," she begged. "I want you to come home with me."

"I Love Him."

"I love him, too, and I don't want to leave him," the girl sobbed.

For five minutes the mother pleaded with her daughter.

"I'll come, mother," the girl finally agreed.

A taxicab was called and they started for the railroad station, stopping at a restaurant for a hasty breakfast. For a moment Mrs. Monell left the girl, while she went to the telephone to all her brother.

"I'll be at the station as quick as I can get there," he told her.

As the mother returned to the table, Dorothy was just finishing a glass of water. They entered the taxicab again and before it had gone a block the girl was suffering from convulsions.

"I have taken poison, mother, and I'm going to die," she sobbed.

Terrified, the mother besought the driver to make top speed to the station. There Dr. Edward C. Holmblad, 20 West Jackson boulevard, was summoned and the Harrison police were called. A police ambulance picked up mother and daughter and raced against death to the hospital, but in vain. When the hospital doors were reached the poison had done its work.

What poison the girl took will be determined by an examination by Coroner's Physician H. G. W. Rheinhardt and an inquest will be held Jan. 27.

Tells of Elopement.

The story of the daughter's elopement with the chauffeur was told by the broken-hearted mother to police.

"I noticed that my daughter liked to take long drives into the country, and I saw that she seemed to fascinate Claussens," she said. "It worried me, and I spoke to him about it ten days ago. He told me he would quit my service and go to Portland, Wash. He was to have left St. Louis last Monday.

"That day my daughter disappeared. I could find no trace of her here. I suspected that she might have gone with Claussens, and so went to his aunt. She told me he had written asking her to send him $20 in care of Bob Turner, 2518 Prairie avenue.

"I reached Chicago early yesterday morning and went at once to that address. I asked for Claussens, then for Clarkson, then for Paul Potter—all names he might have used—and finally for Mr. Turner. Then I found my little girl—and lost her."

Trip Here Well Planned.

Claussens apparently had carefully planned the elopement. Police learned that several days before leaving St. Louis he wrote to W. F. Wittenberg of the Sterling Motor Truck company, 2709 Michigan avenue, stating that he was 25 years old, an expert mechanic, married, and the father of one child, "steady, sober, and industrious."

"His letter impressed me so that I wrote to him to come on and he could have a job," Mr. Wittenberg said. "He reported for work one day, worked four hours, and has not been seen since. There is $2.40 coming to him.

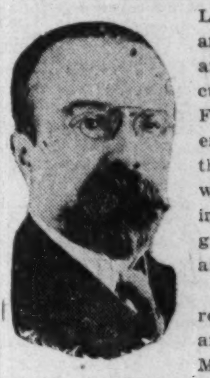
BRITISH CHIEF GETS NO BID TO SEE PRESIDENT

Millerand Angry at Treaty Offer.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Jan. 14.—President Millerand refused to summon Prime Minister Lloyd George for an interview this afternoon to discuss the Anglo-French differences regarding the conditions which England imposes for a guarantee alliance.



LOUIS BARTHOU.

M. Millerand's refusal to request an interview with Mr. Lloyd George bears out the French president's reported displeasure at the terms of the Anglo-French alliance, which, the French say, provides that France place its naval and foreign affairs in the hands of Great Britain.

Poincare Discusses Alliance.

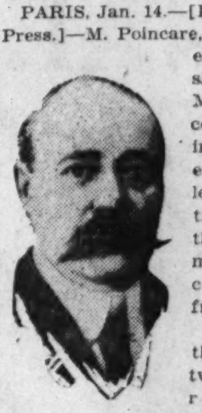
M. Poincare, who completed his new cabinet tonight, discussed the Anglo-French alliance with Mr. Lloyd George, but did not detail the objections or provide a new basis on which to work owing to his unofficial capacity pending acceptance of the cabinet. The Genoa conference was not mentioned as the French cannot combat the Cannes decision until the government is organized and the chamber expresses confidence in its ability to care for French interests.

ALBERT SARRAUT.

Well informed rumors announce M. Millerand's bitter objections to the British conditions for the guarantee alliance and they indicate that the president of France will never permit the new premier to acquiesce in the British demands. M. Millerand believes the British should offer an alliance without reservations, pointing out that one was offered France at the peace conference in 1919 unconditionally when former Premier Clemenceau abandoned the Rhine frontier for guarantees and no one has a right to make further stipulations now.

ALLIED COUNCIL MAY DIE

PARIS, Jan. 14.—[By the Associated Press.]—M. Poincare, who has accepted the premiership to succeed M. Briand and completed his cabinet at midnight, engaged in a lengthy conversation today with the British prime minister, who came to Paris from Cannes.



M. LE TROCQUER.

What conclusion the heads of the two governments reached is not known, but M. Poincare, in a statement to the correspondents this evening, declared "international questions henceforth will be settled, as heretofore, through ambassadors."

This, in the expressed opinion of the premier designate, would mean the virtual disappearance of the supreme council, although he added: "There must be one final meeting of the supreme council, to which all the allies should be invited, should the French viewpoint prevail, and I have good reasons to believe that it will so far as Great Britain is concerned. Let us have our ambassadors settle these questions for us."

Wants "Old Fashioned Way."

M. Poincare thought there had been too many meetings of the supreme council, to various accompaniments, and he desired a return to the old fashioned way of dealings between nations.

"My meeting with Mr. Lloyd George," he said, "was most amiable. We got along finely together."

The conference turned out to be quite a success for the new French premier, according to the French view, as he apparently convinced Mr. Lloyd George that it would be construed by the French nation as unfortunate, and by himself as inimical to him personally should Mr. Lloyd George meet ex-Premier Briand and Dr. Rathenau, the German representative.

Poincare Opposes Moratorium.

In consequence of this, M. Briand's visit to the British embassy was merely a social function. He had a cup of tea with Lord Hardinge, the British ambassador, and a brief informal talk with the British prime minister. Mr. Lloyd George did not meet the Germans.

The Britsh premier came to Paris with ratification of the policy of a moratorium for Germany tentatively granted by the reparations commission, but met with strong opposition from M. Poincare, who argued that Germany had not paid to the limit of her capacity and that some reason must be found fo lightening France's burden. He told Mr. Lloyd George that Germany should be called upon to impose heavier taxation, equivalent per head to the French, otherwise there could be no talk of a moratorium.

The conclusion in Belgian circles, which have rallied to the British and Italian views, is that France stands alone on the reparation problems.

Announces New Cabinet.

After a conference with M. Barthou and other supporters, lasting until midnight, M. Poincare announced that his cabinet had been definitely formed as follows:

Premier and minister of foreign affairs—M. Poincare.
Justice and Alsace-Lorraine—Louis Barthou.
Interior—M. Maunoury.
Finance—Charles de Lasteyrie.
War and pensions—Andre Maginot.
Marine—M. Raiberti.
Agriculture—Adolph Cheron.
Labor—Alexandre Berard.
Instruction—Leon Berard.
Colonies—Albert Sarraut.
Public works—M. Le Trocquer.
Commerce—Lucien Dior.
Liberated regions—W. Reibel.

The first meeting of the ministers will be held at M. Poincare's home at 9 o'clock Sunday morning.

The fact that M. Poincare gave three of the most important portfolios, after foreign affairs, which he takes for himself, to men of little experience in political affairs is regarded as significant that he intends to have his own way so far as French policy is concerned.

Belgium Gets Treaty.

Foreign Minister Jaspar of Belgium announced this evening a tentative agreement for a British-Belgium pact in which Great Britain promises her aid to the full against an attack upon Belgium or the violation of her territory.

M. Jaspar said the draft of the pact had been completed and that the terms agreed upon required the approval of the British and Belgian cabinets.

M. Jaspar said the pact also was dependent upon the consummation of the Franco-British agreement. "Geographically, we are so close to France that her interests are ours," he said.

Wirth to Go to Genoa.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

BERLIN, Jan. 14.—Chancellor Joseph Wirth will attend the Genoa conference in February, inasmuch as Prime Minister Lloyd George expressed a wish that each nation be represented by its prime minister, as well as other officials, it was learned in official quarters today. Dr. Walther Rathenau will accompany the chancellor.

PEARL NECKLACE MYSTERY IN SUIT OVER $380,000

Perfect String of 389 Will Figure in Vivid Story.

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The mystery of the gorgeous pearl necklace sold by Cartier, Inc., to some unnamed millionaire last summer is agitating jewelers' row on 5th avenue as nothing has done since it first became known the Russian crown jewels were being peddled around London and Paris by representatives of the bolshevist régime.

Cartier's acknowledge they sold the necklace, with its five rows of exquisitely matched pearls, weighing 4,305 grains, for $825,000.

Vitall and Leopold Benguiat, who commissioned Cartier, Inc., to sell it, assert it was sold for more than $1,500,000. Litigation is pending between the two firms over the actual profit involved in the transaction.

Who? That's the Mystery.

But what jewelers' row wants to know is:

Who bought the necklace? Who gave up either $825,000 or $1,500,000 in cold hard cash these times for 389 pearls fastened together with an enamel miniature of the celebrated Empress Catherine of Russia?

Knowledgeable men in the business say they can count on the fingers of their hands all the good "prospects" for such a sale. Speculation has centered about each of half a dozen millionaires, and in the clubs and hotel lobbies the subject of the "Catherine" necklace, as it is being called, is a favorite topic.

Famous Spenders Say No!

One or two spenders, who, in flusher times than these, would not have stopped at even $1,500,000 for a woman's bauble, have already laughingly denied the soft impeachment that their bank accounts have been depleted by such an investment in pearls.

Nobody in society has startled the rest of the Four Hundred by emphasizing her charms with the Catherine rope.

Bankers have looked askance on the story of the lawsuit, wondering if somebody has converted assets that might be better employed into a few strings of pearls.

Wall street has vainly canvassed itself to locate any one who has cleaned up enough during the stock depression of the last year to buy the trinket. Even the bootleggers are looking at each other suspiciously.

But echo still answers "Who?" to every query.

Cartiers Decline to Talk.

The Benguiat firm says it does not know who bought the necklace from Cartier, and the latter firm declines to say who its customer was. But unless there is some settlement out of court of the suit of $380,075 profits brought by the Benguiats, the name of the real purchaser of the necklace will probably be revealed during the legal proceedings.

The Benguiats won't tell who sold them the necklace, but they assert they commissioned Cartier to sell it for $500,000 or more, with all above that sum to be split fifty-fifty after commissions and expenses were deducted. The Cartier firm has offered an accounting showing a sale to the mysterious unknown for $825,000, net cash, with "traveling expenses and commissions" amounting to $41,000 and other deductions aggregating $82,850.

The statement that the traveling expenses were considerable has led to the suggestion that perhaps some western millionaire or some South American money magnate has decorated his lady fair with the pearls. But jewelers' row say those spenders usually have press agents with them who see that everybody knows just how many millions they are spending.

Uncle Sam May Know.

Uncle Sam ought to know who paid the luxury tax of 10 per cent on the purchase, for it isn't everybody that pays either $82,500 or $1,500,000 in one lump as a luxury tax these days. But if he does know Uncle Sam isn't telling.

The sale was effected some time between May 14, 1920, and Nov. 18, 1920. It is apparent by comparison with the reputed values of other famous collections of pearls that the sale, if announced at the time, would have created a sensation in art circles and among lovers of rare gems.

In 1914, at the time of the death of Dudley Fletcher, one of New York's "unknown millionaires," it became known that his wife possessed what experts had pronounced to be the finest pearl necklace in the world, consisting of 300 perfectly matched, light colored pearls and valued at $1,250,000.

Ten years were required to assemble the pearls for the necklace. After Mr. Fletcher's death it was divided and half of it was sold for $600,000 to Joseph D. Widener of Philadelphia.

TACKLING JANITOR PROBLEM

Tomorrow, Jan. 16, is the second anniversary of the birth of prohibition in the United States, and the Woman's Christian Temperance union will celebrate the day by launching a campaign to mark every home and place of business in the country where liquor is never used.

The "Star in the Window campaign," it will be called. Its object is to see that in all places where liquor is never touched by the occupants a blue flag with a white star in the center shall hang in a window.

Beneath the star will be the words, in white, "We are Americans. We support the constitution."

Announcement of the campaign was made yesterday through the Union Signal, official publication of the W. C. T. U. headquarters in Evanston.

'HEAD JANITOR' SYSTEM ROUSES IRE OF JURIST

"Emancipation" for Chicago's "downtrodden" flat janitors was promised yesterday.

Judge Bernard P. Barasa, selected by the Flat Janitors' union and the Chicago Real Estate Board to arbitrate differences in wages which threatened to bank thousands of fires in Chicago apartments last December, announced yesterday at the conclusion of the first day's hearing that "slavery among the flat janitors must stop."

"There have been too many cases where one janitor has hired other competent janitors to work for him for a niggardly wage. He has been enabled to do this because he controlled several buildings. In some cases the head janitor received $500, while his hireling got $100 or less."

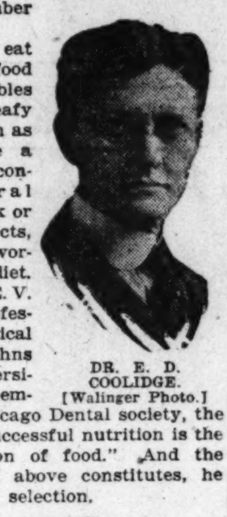
The judge announced that he would fix the number of apartments which any one janitor could handle when he announced his wage award.

William T. Quesse, president of the flat janitors' union, appeared for the union and P. W. Jones, secretary of the Chicago Real Estate board, for the board. In a bill of particulars filed by Mr. Jones the charge was made that the janitors in hundreds of cases are receiving 50 per cent [illegible] salary.

WANT TO BE WELL, HAPPY TOO? THEN SCRUTINIZE DIET

A Cabbage a Day Keeps Doctor Away.

If you are a dyspeptic and don't want to be; if you're not, and don't want to be, remember that, if—



DR. E. D. COOLIDGE. [Walinger Photo.]

You will eat some raw food and vegetables each day, a leafy vegetable, such as cabbage, once a day, and daily consume a liberal amount of milk or its by-products, you need not worry about your diet.

For, as Dr. E. V. McCullum, professor of chemical hygiene at Johns Hopkins university, will tell members of the Chicago Dental society, the "keynote of successful nutrition is the proper selection of food." And the menu outlined above constitutes, he says, a proper selection.

Convention Opens Thursday.

The Dental society will hold its fifty-eighth annual clinic and meeting in the Drake hotel, Jan. 19-21. Dr. E. D. Collidge is president of the association.

"When such a selection of food is observed," he continues, "the rest of the diet may be made up of milled cereals, tubers, meats, and other foods which appeal to the appetite. The deficiencies of the latter, from the standpoint of nutrition, will be made up by the milk and leafy vegetables which are included.

Following is a correctly balanced menu to be served during the annual clinic and meeting of the Chicago Dental society:

BREAKFAST.
Grapefruit.
Cereal with cream toast, butter.
Liver and bacon.
Coffee. Chocolate.

LUNCH.
Cream of pea soup.
Croutons.
Scalloped corn with bacon.
Celery.
Creamed asparagus on toast.
Waldorf salad. Wafers.
Coffee. Tea. Milk.

DINNER.
Broiled steak, mashed potatoes.
Creamed carrots.
Brussels sprouts.
Cabbage and celery salad.
Bread, butter.
Date pudding with whipped cream.
Coffee. Tea. Milk.

Winter Diet Condemned.

The appetite, according to Dr. E. V. McCullum, has led to the establishment of a craving for sweets, an overconsumption of meats, and a habit of demanding a never ending variety of flavors.

CIVIC TRAINING OF WOMEN IS URGED BY MRS. HARDING

Sees Best Service in Party Work.

New York, Jan. 14.—Fifteen hundred women attending the anniversary luncheon of the Women's National Republican club, received a letter from Mrs. Warren G. Harding today urging "effective and unremitting effort at organization, education and civic training among women."

MRS. WARREN G. HARDING. [Copyright: Harris & Ewing.]

Mrs. Harding was prevented from attending by exhaustion following the diplomatic reception. Her place was taken by Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, wife of the Vice President.

"Women," Mrs. Harding wrote, "have come suddenly into a mighty responsibility for the national interest.

Parties Serve Best.

"It is a responsibility which must be discharged in a larger than merely partisan way, and yet I feel very sure is best to be dealt with through the instruments of party, loyal to conviction and emotion.

"These are times when the tendency to disintegration of old institutions warns us on all sides of the need to hold fast to those who have established themselves as sound, reliable, confidence inspiring. For these things the Republican party has always stood and stands today."

Speakers at the luncheon included Alice Robertson, congresswoman from Oklahoma; Mrs. Eleanor Franklin Egan of the American advisory committee to the arms conference, Mrs. Medill McCormick, and Mrs. Arthur Livermore, the club president.

Assail Women Voters' League.

Both Mrs. McCormick and Representative Robertson assailed the League of Women Voters. Mrs. Egan said the women of the advisory council of the arms conference were called upon to solve questions including "everything from universal prohibition and the doing away with footbinding in China to tattooing in India." "There were other questions probably of vastly more importance facing the world today," she said, "than universal prohibition."

CHICAGO LAWYER BEATEN BY MOB SEEKS HOSPITAL

H. S. Mulks Is in Dallas After Kidnaping.

Dallas, Tex., Jan. 14.—Flogged, after being kidnaped by masked men from the lobby of a Shreveport, La., hotel lobby last night, Harold S. Mulks, a Chicago attorney with offices at 111 West Monroe street, arrived here today and went to a hospital for treatment of injuries. He plainly showed the marks of the flogging.

Mulks was placed aboard a west bound Missouri, Kansas and Texas passenger train by the band of men who had carried him twenty miles in a motor car and then whipped him. They directed the conductor not to let Mulks off "this side of Dallas."

The lawyer told the police here he had been warned to leave Shreveport several days ago, but had not heeded the threat.

Chicago His Goal.

"That gang said I was not to stop this side of Dallas," Mulks said. "But I am certain I will not stop this side of Chicago."

He had gone to Shreveport to defend Claude Irwin and W. M. Hickey, alleged I. W. W. organizers, who are under ninety day sentences on charges of vagrancy. They appealed today to the District court in Shreveport to keep them in jail "for their personal safety."

Irwin's appeal was to have been argued today by Mulks, who also was to represent Hickey in habeas corpus proceedings. It was recalled today that W. M. Carney, an Oklahoma City lawyer, disappeared from Shreveport mysteriously on Thursday after beginning a study of Hickey's case.

Investigation Demanded.

Immediate investigation of the alleged mistreatment of Mulks was demanded today of Gov. Parker of Louisiana by the American Civil Liberties union of New York. The union charged that Attorney Carney had received a similar flogging.

The I. W. W. workers had been arrested for alleged vagrancy at the Standard Oil company's camps, despite the fact they were on the camp pay roll, the union asserted.

BURCH JURY IS LOCKED UP TILL 9 A. M. MONDAY

Judge Goes Home After 25-Hour Deadlock.

BY EDWARD DOHERTY.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—At the end of their second day of deliberating as to the guilt or innocence of Arthur Courtnay Burch, accused of murdering J. Belton Kennedy, the jury of ten women and two men found itself still unable to agree and was locked up for the night.

It will probably be Monday when a verdict is returned, if at all, according to reports trickling out of the jury chamber.

Earlier in the evening the jurors sent word to Judge Sidney Reeve that they were hopelessly deadlocked and asked to be discharged. The judge went home without replying to their request, but he told the court clerk he would return Monday morning at 9 o'clock and that he could be reached by telephone at any hour should a verdict be reached.

The jurors will report at 10 o'clock tomorrow evening for further deliberation.

Many Rumors of Deadlock.

There are plenty of reports concerning the dozen. One is they are still ten to two for conviction, another has it they are seven to five for conviction, with Mrs. Eva De Mott, business woman, heading one faction, and Mrs. Mrs. Nellie Graham, club woman and social worker, heading the other—and that there is an additional split in the ranks of the seven. Five, it is said, are for hanging, two for life imprisonment. Nothing is certain.

The courtroom was well filled during the day. Men and women sat in various attitudes, Judge Reeve spending the morning and afternoon in disposing of appeals in other cases.

Both Fathers Are Nervous.

The Rev. W. A. Burch, father of Arthur, came and went quietly in and out of court. He could not sit still for long. He must walk. He has lost his ruddy complexion. His skin is sallow. His cheeks are hollow. He has aged. Yet when he talks his voice is firm and rather cheerful. He is still hoping for a verdict. He does not want a hung jury. He does not see how anybody could believe Arthur guilty of such a foul murder.

John D. Kennedy, father of Belton, sat with the prosecutor and his deputies, quiet, red-faced, saying nothing, bending his head now and then to catch some whisper from his companions. He was not impatient, but he looked at the jury room door, waiting.

Paul Schenck, Burch's chief counsel, went about from group to group, telling stories, repeating rumors.

Wonder Why Jurors Smiled.

The jurors came out at noon, putting on their wraps. The spectators eyed them intently. The jurors were smiling. Nobody knows why.

The courtroom clears after a time, the fans speculating on the jurors' smile. At 2 o'clock the crowd came back. They brought newspapers and magazines. They intended to stay in the stuffy courtroom all afternoon—all night, if need be.

It was warm outside. The sun was shining brightly, the air sweet. Birds sang. The pepper trees and the fan palms waved. There is the smell of eucalyptus everywhere. And there are the mountains not far away.

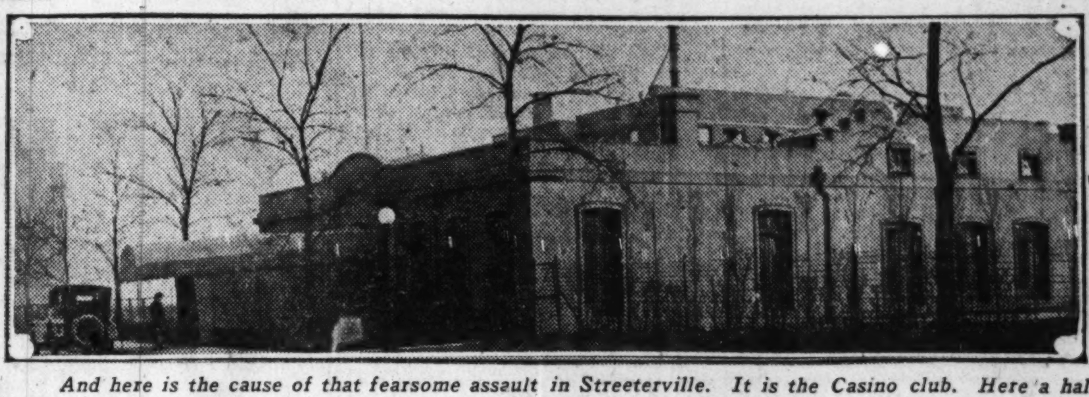
Yet the stuffy courtroom was filled, and people who had never seen Arthur Burch were waiting for the jury to come in and hang him or set him free.

And then they all went home when the judge did, disappointed and talking.

THE GRAND SMASH ON THE CASINO CLUB

Snappy, men! The Volstead legions swooped in and out of the placid little Casino club bearing jugs, demijohns, and magnums. Nothing left in them now but that delectable perfume that once identified humanity with the color and atmosphere of life. Into a truck these shells of ancient exhilaration were jammed and went their way.

At the left we have the thrilling spectacle of Wallace Winter paying off a taxicab chauffeur. Mr. Winter has responded to a summons that Kubla Khan and his Mongolian hordes were descending on the Casino club. At the right is seen Joseph M. Cudahy settling a similar obligation, having also been summoned in all haste.



And here is the cause of that fearsome assault in Streeterville. It is the Casino club. Here a half dozen women were quietly sipping their tea when the Volsteaders crashed the gates.

[TRIBUNE Photos.]

This once was a dandy little place in the Casino. Glittering glassware, rare wines, fine old liquors—but O dear, nothing now but ginger ale and table water! The Volstead sleuths glanced at the array and passed along to the steward's bedchamber, where they confiscated a pint of sherry.

the commotion. He hurried out, meeting Potter in the doorway.

In a low tone Potter read the warrant to him. The agents meanwhile spread about the clubhouse. Sounds of hurried search filtered through the air. Potter finished.

"I'm sure I don't know why you've gone to all this trouble—there's no liquor here," Ballantyne replied. "You're welcome, though, I'm sure." He took the warrant from Potter's hands and began to reread it.

From a corner where the employés have their lockers a voice bawled out: "Hey, steward, come here with your keys and open up these things!" The steward went. Of all the lockers, only two were occupied. No booze.

Just "Near Champagne."

A pair of agents walked behind the bar. There, nestling cozily in a bucket of cracked ice, were three slim, brown bottles.

The agent's exultant shout was heard outside the house; one of the window guards came to see what it was all about. The agent pulled the cork from one of the bottles; a stream of bubbles gurgled up.

"Champagne!" he gasped. He tasted it. Just "Near Champagne." No booze.

Meanwhile the tea party in the anteroom had heard the commotion. Mrs. Wallace C. Winter of 1447 Astor street, the hostess, marshalled her guests out to the drawing room.

None was curious enough as to the unusual noises in the other rooms to inquire as to their source until one or two of the agents came their way. Then, of course, all were a-flutter. No sign of annoyance was perceptible, however, until——

One of the servants started out of the door.

"Come back here!" a voice rasped peremptorily. "No one is allowed to leave the building!"

He Was "Too Busy."

Mrs. Winter, Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy and Mrs. James Ward Thorne jumped to their feet. Mrs. Winter asked to see Agent Potter or "whoever was in charge."

Mr. Potter was in the kitchen, with knitted brow perusing the housekeeping records of Steward Ballantyne. He wished to know if there were any records there of liquor purchases. He sent word back to Mrs. Winter that "he was too busy."

She stepped to a telephone. So did Mrs. Cudahy. A few moments later Messrs. Winter and Cudahy were enroute from downtown to the clubhouse as fast as automobiles would bring them. Once arrived they heard a summary of the situation from the women and dashed to the kitchen.

"You have no right to hold these women here!" Mr. Cudahy told Mr. Potter. "They have violated no laws—they haven't done anything!"

"Me hold them? We're not holding them!" returned Mr. Potter in surprise. "Why—I specifically gave orders that they be not disturbed a particle. No one has molested them or said anything to them. They're free to go if they want to. The servants, though, that's different——"

Women Leave Club.

"O!" said Messrs. Cudahy and Winter and departed to reassure the women. A moment later, to the accompaniment of a barrage of cameras, the women were loaded into waiting cars and disappeared.

Meanwhile the agents had torn boards from the wall siding in their search for hidden storage places, had tapped walls, floor, and ceilings with tiny hammers for hollow sounds which might reveal a secret room or cranny in which John Barleycorn might be hidden.

The basement, ransacked even to the coal piles, revealed a score of jugs which may or may not have been of ancient make. There, too, they found the demijohn and a pint flask.

Then into the steward's quarters. There they found the only evidence gathered during the day. As before stated, the official United States records show it was a quart bottle of champagne and a gallon of burgundy.

The search of house and records over, the liquor confiscated—there came the next question—the arrests.

"We're going to have our regular Saturday night affair tonight—it would discommode us terribly if you should arrest me," said Steward Ballantyne.

Cart Jugs Away.

"All right—you're well known—come over to the office of Prohibition Director Charles C. Gregory Monday morning without fail," quoth Mr. Potter. "Good day!" said Agent Niehoff, and the party filed away to their cars. A summoned truck followed with the empty jugs and demijohn, the champagne and burgundy.

"Why, it was awful!" one of the women in the Winter tea party exclaimed last night in recounting the affair. "You never saw so many men in your life—there must have been at least forty of them there! And photographers! And movie men! You'd think they'd come to capture Tommy O'Connor or some notorious criminal. Why, they must have notified every film company in the country of the raid.

"The reporters had more automobiles than the raiders—the whole road was just lined with them. They certainly didn't want the papers to miss that raid—I'll tell you!

"And all they found was us poor seven women enjoying a little informal tea party—we have them every day or so, just to chat away the hours. Forty men to us seven women! Can you imagine it?

"And to raid the Casino club for liquor? Imagine that! Just as if we were a saloon or something! And after we've been in the newspapers so much—it's disgraceful! And then to hold the servants there—poor things—they must have been frightened half to death. Why, one man could have raided that place easily—they didn't have to bring the whole regiment!"

Club officials were even more deprecatory.

"The only thing they got was a pint of sherry wine that Steward Ballantyne, on the advice of his physician, purchased for his wife, who is about to become a mother," one declared. "And then because she sat in a rocking chair all the time they were there they made her move and tested the floor underneath because they thought she was sitting on a trapdoor to a hidden cellar.

"There hasn't been any liquor in there—the property of the club—for ever so long. This raid, coming on top of our recent unpleasantness with the police, seems to be devised merely for the purposes of publicity."

GRAVE OF GLORY FOR OLD WARSHIP TO MARK TREATY

Kentucky to Sink with All Its Colors Flying.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[By the Associated Press.]—Suggestion that one of the American battleships to be scrapped under the naval limitation program be escorted to sea by the Atlantic fleet and sunk with flags flying and full naval honors has been received with approval by high naval officials.

The oldest of the second line battleships is the Kentucky, commissioned May 15, 1900. It went out of commission May 29, 1920, after twenty years and fourteen days of continuous service.

Might Select Old Kentucky.

If the ceremonial sinking is carried out, it seems likely that the Kentucky would receive these honors, intended to represent the pride of the navy and of the American people in the work done through the years by all of the old battleships that now are to be destroyed.

The Oregon is an older ship and the only veteran of actual battle in the Spanish-American war in the battleship list of the navy. It has long been stricken from the roll of active or second line craft, however, and is carried on the unclassified list, along with such veterans as the sailing frigates Constitution and Constellation, the old corvette Hartford, once Admiral Farragut's flagship.

To Keep Iowa and Oregon.

The old Iowa, built in 1893, also is on this list, and is a veteran of the Spanish-American war, but is now used as a target ship under radio control. It is expected that provision will be made for retention of the Oregon as a historic relic and of the Iowa and the old Indiana for experimental purposes.

The ceremonial sinking would be made as impressive as possible. Probably the ship would be kept intact, painted, and its brass work shined for the last time and put to sea under its own power. At the selected point it would be dressed from stem to stern with signal flags and with its battle emblems flying from the masthead its seacocks would be opened and as it sank the fleet would fire three salvos and the national salute of twenty-one guns in honor of the passing of a loyal comrade.

NEW GOVERNMENT OF IRISH HALTS BIG RAIL STRIKE

DUBLIN, Jan. 14.—[By United Press.]—The threatened general railroad strike in Ireland, scheduled for midnight, was deferred tonight, and the truce between the workers and operators extended for another month. Mediation by the newly elected provisional government, headed by Michael Collins and chosen at a meeting of the South Ireland parliament this morning, brought about the extension of the truce and averted a tieup of all the railroads in the country.

L. V. L. SUMS UP SMALL'S REGIME IN LEGISLATURE

Finds Last Session Almost Total Loss to State.

Gov. Small's administration at Springfield, charged with coöperation with the Thompson-Lundin Chicago machine, is marked up by the Legislative Voters' league with the responsibility for substantially a total loss to the state of Illinois during the 1921 session of the general assembly.

A summary of the work of the last legislature was issued yesterday by the L. V. L.'s executive committee.

Three important factors stand out in the report, checked up by the significant roll calls in senate and house. The first is the Wheeler anti-civil service bill," which, the league asserts, was intended to remove more than 4,000 state positions from the protection of the merit law and place these jobs within the appointive power of the Lundin-Small machine. This bill passed the senate, 28-16, and was beaten in the house, 66-66.

O. Ks. Repudiated Platform.

The second was the indorsement of the Small-Thompson so-called "platform" that was repudiated by the Illinois Republican state convention in 1920, and again by the Republican national convention at the Coliseum, and which resulted in the Thompson-Ettelson bolt from the convention that nominated President Harding. Early in the legislative session, indorsement of this repudiated platform went through the senate by a 27-10 vote and passed the house 77-56.

The third essential is the bill that proposed to give to the Chicago Board of Education unrestrained privilege to sell the school lands belonging to the City of Chicago. This bill was passed by the house, 79-56, and was killed in the senate committee on education. These three propositions are established as the record roll calls upon which the L. V. L. formulates its judgment of the records of the retiring members of the last legislature.

Calls Session Retrogressive.

The report makes this general charge:

"The 1921 session of the Fifty-second general assembly of Illinois was distinctly retrogressive in comparison with the two preceding biennial sessions. Not only did it produce little important constructive legislation but until nearly the close the legislature was controlled by forces that appeared to be mainly engrossed with schemes to get additional patronage by exempting hundreds of state positions from the operation of the civil service law.

"The spectacle of a new state administration which seemed to be bent primarily upon job-grabbing and to have few conceptions above that level did much during the first six months that it was in power to destroy an atmosphere of efficiency in the state government, which had been gradually created by painstaking effort during the preceding four years."

Heavy Increase in Expenses.

The report sets forth also a 30 per cent increase in state expenses; a total disregard for the budget for the state that was offered by the retiring administration; a "padded" omnibus bill that nobody attempted to justify, and a general smashup at the end of the session of anything that might have been figured as constructive legislation.

The report, in part, says:

"In no way was the slump at Springfield more clearly shown than in the virtual abandonment of the state budget system, one of the really great reforms in the conduct of the state's business which had been accomplished under the leadership of Gov. Lowden as a feature of the administrative code act of 1917. . . .

"Appropriations to meet state expenses for the biennial beginning July 1, 1921, total $81,438,267, as compared with $62,109,030 appropriated at the 1919 session. This increase of $19,329,237 is a jump of more than 30 per cent, the largest percentage of biennial increase in the recent history of the state."

Recalls Meteoric Finish.

"The session which ended in June," the report continues, "was memorable mainly for its meteoric finish, in which the legislature was aroused from a state of obedience to political bosses to unexpected assertion of its independence and self-respect. After suffering themselves to be controlled for five months by the Thompson Small state organization, many legislators became deeply disgusted with the crudely objectionable methods of the organization leaders and rebelled with such effect that the most cherished administration measures failed of enactment.

"Through the united efforts of the Chicago city hall and statehouse leaders one of the adherents of the combine was made speaker of the house at the beginning of the session and a safe margin of machine control was established in both branches.

"These results were accomplished partly by utilizing the good will which many reputable downstate Republican members naturally felt for a newly elected Republican governor, and partly, it is alleged, by promises of committee chairmanships and the lavish use of state patronage.

Early Measures Easily Passed.

"Such administration measures as were brought to an early vote were passed through both houses with little difficulty.

"Among these was a joint resolution calling upon the President and congress to put into effect 'policies' advocated by Mayor Thompson and Gov. Small during the last state campaign and subsequently set forth in the governor's inaugural message. These included opposition to compulsory military service or conscription, and favored the exemption of incomes less than $5,000 per annum from federal taxation.

"Although members argued strenuously against these doctrines on the ground that they were calculated to render the nation defenseless in time of war and to stir up class hatred, the resolution was put through both houses. This action of the machine in requiring legislators, as a test of 'loyalty to the governor,' to vote for distasteful proposals, helped bring about revolt two months later."

Last Minute Program.

Further on in its report, the L. V. L. says:

"Two weeks before the end of the session the Thompson-Small combination launched an intensive campaign to bring about the enactment of certain measures which were the principal features of their announced program. All of these had been introduced late in the session. Among them were:

"1. The tax commission bill amending the 1919 act regarding the assessment of property so as to give the state tax commission complete control over all local assessors and full authority to reassess property, such reassessment not to be subject to revision by boards of review. A companion measure increased the membership of the tax commission from three to five.

"The tax commission bill was bitterly opposed on the ground that the proposed power of reassessment was liable to gross abuse as a political weapon.

Mayor's Traction Bill.

"2. Mayor Thompson's Chicago principal traction measure providing for the creation of transportation districts in contiguous territory wholly within one county, to be directed by a board of election trustees, vested with authority to acquire street railways by purchase, lease, or condemnation, and to operate them.

"3. Gov. Small's pet measure to amend the state civil service act so as to remove nearly 2,000 state employés, including all employés of the department of public works and buildings and the department of agriculture, from the protection of that law. Friends of the governor who were spokesmen for this bill made no secret of the fact that it was intended as a death blow at the merit system in the state service. In a special message urging support of the bill, Gov. Small himself attacked the state civil service system as impracticable.

Grab at Prohibition Jobs.

"4. The prohibition commissioner bill creating a prohibition enforcement department apart from the attorney general's office. This bill was attacked as a spoils proposition aimed to get extensive new patronage.

"About June 6 Mayor Thompson arrived in Springfield accompanied by Frederick Lundin and by Dr. John Dill Robertson, health commissioner of Chicago. Their coming was ostentatiously heralded and in coöperation with the governor they began a systematic canvass of the members of the house and senate for the purpose of putting over their favored measures, making their headquarters in the governor's office and in the speaker's room.

"Reports became prevalent that state patronnage was being freely promised in the effort to win votes and that members were being given to understand that the fate of their pet measures depended upon whether they 'went along' with the administration.

Shanahan Gets Busy.

"At about the same time the administration forces began their final 'drive,' former Speaker Shanahan, who had taken little part in legislative affairs during five months of the session, responded to appeals from his associates and thereafter shared with Representative John P. Devine of Dixon the floor leadership of the opposition in the house. With only a few exceptions, the Democratic members followed the guidances of Mr. Devine.

"The administration measures were given the right of way in both the house and senate and were rapidly advanced. The anti-civil service bill, introduced by Senator Wheeler on June 7, was passed by the senate a week later. Its consideration on second reading in the house on June 16 precipitated one of the most tense and stormy scenes ever witnessed at Springfield.

MacNeil Bares Schemes.

"Representative John A. MacNeil of Olney, a Democratic member of high standing, took the floor and angrily related how he had been offered a favorable decision in a case then pending before the public utilities commission, through a well known state employé whom he named, if he would vote for the tax commission and anti-civil service bills.

"Mr. MacNeil's indignant and dramatic speech was listened to with the closest attention by every member of the house, several of whom, including Representatives Snell, Searcy, Barber, and Kauffman, related somewhat similar experiences in support of Mr. MacNeil's charge that improper and unlawful methods were being used to pass those bills."

The L. V. L. cites a warning it issued on the measure on June 17, which was followed by decisive defeat of the measure next day, and continues:

Small Sends Message.

"At Gov. Small's request Representative MacNeil put his charges of attempted bribery in writing and the governor sent a special message to the legislature before the vote was taken in the house on the anti-civil service bill or on the tax commission bill, disavowing any responsibility for attempts to influence votes by unlawful means and promising a full investigation. At the same time the resignation was announced of the state employé named in that connection by Representative MacNeil and other members."

The report details the successive votes by which the change in legislative sentiment was reflected in the defeat of the tax commission, traction and prohibition bills, and recalls Gov. Small's threat to call a special session to take tax commission and traction measures up again.

No Report by Small.

"As Gov. Small made no public report on his investigation of the charges preferred by Representative MacNeil and others," the report resumes, "and as the state employé whose name was mentioned in those charges was given another appointment carrying an increase in salary, by the governor soon after the legislature adjourned, the Legislative Voters' league on July 7 called the above mentioned charges to the attention of Attorney General Brundage, as the chief law officer of the state, with the suggestion that they be presented to the July grand jury of Sangamon county for full investigation.

"Early in July that grand jury returned indictments against Gov. Small and Lieut. Gov. Fred E. Sterling, charging conspiracy to defraud the state of interest earnings on state moneys which came into their hands while serving as state treasurer, which office both men had held. Investigation of this sensational matter so occupied the grand jury's time that it was unable to take up the MacNeil charges."

'ASSASSINATED?

MUSTAPHA KEMAL PASHA.

LONDON, Jan. 14.—[By the Associated Press.]—Mustapha Kemal Pasha, the Turkish Nationalist leader, has been murdered, says an Exchange Telegram agency dispatch from Constantinople today, quoting a report from Angora, the Turkish Nationalist capital.

Mustapha Kemal Pasha was sent from Constantinople to Sivas as inspector of the northern military district of Anatolia in 1919. Since that time he became head of the Turkish Nationalist army and virtual dictator of Turkey in Asia.

Soon after he went into Asia Minor his activities against the Turkish government at Constantinople became apparent, but he disregarded Constantinople's demand for his resignation, tore up the armistice, which the Turks alleged the Greek occupation had violated, and began collecting groups of nondescript soldiers which he made into the Turkish Nationalist army. With this army he had been resisting the Greek occupation of Asia Minor.

Mustapha Kemal's name is known throughout the near east, where he has been more powerful than the sultan cooped up in his palace at Constantinople.

He was born of an obscure family in Saloniki only thirty-nine years ago. He was schooled at the Turkish war college in Constantinople, but has traveled widely in Europe ad spoke French like a Parisian. He was always a Young Turk and commanded one of the two Turkish regiments which marched into Constantinople in the Young Turk revolution in 1908.

Do You Really Know Comfort?

Many women who have accustomed themselves to high heels and pointed toes say, "Oh, my shoes are perfectly comfortable!" As a matter of fact, they have forgotten what real comfort is. And they do not realize that the penalties of unnatural footwear may be felt in other parts of the body than the feet. The Cantilever Shoe provides such normal, absolute ease that discomfort and fatigue become as foreign to the feet as to the hands.

Not only are the lines natural and the heels built for perfect balance and support, but Cantilevers have a flexible arch which permits the foot to bend freely. This gives strengthening exercise to the muscles and eliminates any possibility of weak arches.

Call and try on a pair of Cantilevers—learn what comfort really is. You will be delighted with the wonderful feeling of comfort.

JOHN HENRY HAS TROUBLES, BUT A $100 LAUGH, TOO

His Inborn Cheer Wins Him Fourth Day's Prize.

John Henry Griesman, 2446 Grenshaw street, is an omnibus driver plying a route between a loop department store and the Northwestern station. He's an extra driver and doesn't always "get in a full week's pay" and he's the father of seven kids, and he's had sickness at home—but he's happy just the same.

He stands in cold weather and in comfortable at the rear of his bus, helping the women and children aboard, and he releases a broad and infectious smile with every lift.

About twenty or thirty times an hour a woman will run up to him and excitedly ask a foolish question.

And He Always Smiles.

"O, mister," she will say, "does this bus go to the Rock Island deepo?"

Whereupon it will transpire that John Henry will smile again and point to the big sign on the bus stating that it goes to the Northwestern "de-po," and politely tell her that she'll have to get the third bus back, or whichever one it may be.

And every now and then the horses hitched to the bus behind his will move forward and crowd him, and one of 'em will slobber all over his shoulder and try to nip him. Which, when it occurs, brings from him a resounding laugh, while he turns to admonish Dobbin and says:

"Fritz, cut that out Haw! Haw! Dang that black feller! He's always trying to play his tricks on me. Haw! Haw! Haw!"

On Trail of a Laugh.

When THE TRIBUNE smile detector started out yesterday to traverse hither and yon that busy Saturday afternoon arroyo yclept State street he didn't have the possibility of finding a happy omnibus captain in his mind.

It was near the corner from which John Henry Griesman plies to the railway station, that the smile detector first became aware of him. That hearty and resounding laugh rang out, and the detector set out at once to trail it to its lair.

He stopped on the corner and observed John Henry for quite a spell; so long, in fact, that the collector in charge of the omnibusers was about to call a policeman.

Says John Henry: "I'm 43 years old, and I've got seven kids—the youngest 4½—but my motto's always been the same's the old man's who said: 'I'm an old man and I've had many troubles; but most of 'em never happened.'"

A SMILE WORTH WHILE

John Henry Griesman, bus driver for a loop store, would seem to have enough troubles to excuse the most dour countenance, but he smiles away, and yesterday The Tribune's smile detector, catching up with him, handed him a $100 bill. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

MARY BAKER IS ENTERTAINED AT M'CORMICK HOME

Mary Landon Baker balances a long distance telephone call and an informal dinner party against a postponed wedding ceremony and a truckload of returned gifts. And the answer, she says, is: "I'm going to marry Allister McCormick."

Yesterday morning just before sailing for England on the Baltic, Mr. McCormick called Miss Baker on the long distance telephone from New York to bid her au revoir, until the spring.

She wished him "all the luck in the world."

Last night Miss Baker, whose nervous collapse has kept her away from social functions, dined informally at the home of her fiancé's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton McCormick, 631 Rush street. Later in the evening they attended the theater.

Miss Baker is leaving next week with her family for their Santa Barbara home. She will sail for England some time in February or March.

"I will be married to Mr. McCormick in the early spring," she said.

Ships and Planes Fail to Find Missing Flying Boat

Miami, Fla., Jan. 14.—Former subchasers and seaplanes searched in vain today for the flying boat New York which left here late today for Bimini with three passengers. Word was received here that it had not reached its destination and it is believed to be floating disabled at sea. The passengers were Clinton Leopold of Reading, Pa., and M. F. Kahn and H. C. Crenshaw of Montgomery, Ala., who had come here to attend a Shriners' installation.

HAYS DECIDES TO QUIT CABINET FOR 'MOVIE' POSITION

President Harding Voices Regret at Departure.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Postmaster General Will H. Hays will resign from the cabinet in the near future to accept the directorship of an organized group of American motion picture producers and distributors at a salary said to be $150,000 a year.

WILL H. HAYS. [Bretzman Photo.]

The postmaster general disclosed his intention to accept the flattering proposal, submitted to him several weeks ago, following a conference this morning with President Harding. Mr. Hays makes his acceptance of the movie directorship conditional, however, upon the possibility of his ability to negotiate a satisfactory contract.

Delays New Conference.

The postmaster general was to have conferred today with representatives of the National Association of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors, the organization which seeks his services, but, for some reason, the interview was postponed.

His intention to give up his cabinet post was made known through the issuance at the White House of the following statements, one by the President, and the other by himself:

"The postmaster general and I," the President said, "have been discussing the proposal made to him to become the head of a national association of motion picture producers and distributors. If the arrangement proves to be, when the details are worked out, what it seems, I cannot well interpose any objection.

Chance to Serve Public.

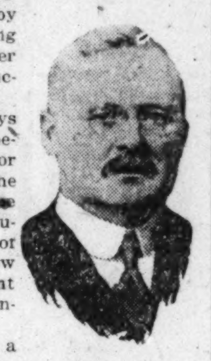
"It is too great an opportunity for a helpful public service for him to refuse. I shall be more than sorry to have him retire from the cabinet, where he has already made so fine a record, but we have agreed to look upon the situation from the broadest viewpoint and seek the highest public good."

"With the President's consent," Mr. Hays said, "I have decided to undertake the work suggested by the motion picture producers and distributors. No contract has yet been executed. I am assuming, of course, that a satisfactory contract will be possible and one which will make certain the carrying out of the high purposes contemplated for this great industry."

President Harding will have selected Mr. Hays' successor before the postmaster general retires. Numerous well known Republican leaders have been mentioned, among them William Boyce Thompson of New York, chairman of the Republican finance committee during the last campaign; A. D. Lasker of Chicago, chairman of the shipping board; Walter S. Dickey of Kansas City, Robert Beecher Powell of Omaha, Republican national committeeman from Nebraska; and others.

DICKEY MAY BE CHOSEN

According to information in Chicago, Walter S. Dickey of Missouri stands out as the probable selection by President Harding for postmaster general to succeed Mr. Hays.



WALTER S. DICKEY.

If Mr. Hays should retire before his successor is named the portfolio is to be filled by Dr. Hubert S. Work of Colorado, now first assistant postmaster general.

There may be a conference of Republican leaders in Boston next week and it is understood that George B. Lockwood of Indiana will be made secretary of the national committee to succeed Clarence B. Miller, who died recently.

It was reported that William Boyce Thompson of New York would not be named postmaster general because New York is represented in the cabinet by Mr. Hughes, and so the balance is likely to turn in favor of Mr. Dickey.

Upham Might Have It.

It is understood that Fred W. Upham, treasurer of the national committee, might have the place if he would say the word. However, he has stated that for business reasons he could not accept a cabinet post, and it is not believed he has changed his mind. Mr. Upham intends to go abroad for two months within two weeks.

Mr. Dickey has been a conspicuous figure in business and politics in Missouri and Illinois for many years. His business interests include important pottery manufactories in western Illinois. He is proprietor of the Kansas City Journal and was a candidate for senator in 1918.

DRESS GOODS DAMAGED BY FIRE.

Fire yesterday on the fourth floor of a building at 212-14 South Franklin street caused damage estimated at $25,000 to the stock of Alport Cutler & Co., dress manufacturers.

PLAN TO FINANCE BONUS WITH WAR DEBTS FAVORED

Sponsor Declares Legion Approves Scheme.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Approval of the plan to use bond of foreign nations to finance the soldiers' bonus was expressed today by Representative McFadden of Pennsylvania, chairman of the house committee on banking and currency. Mr. McFadden said he favored either the sale of the bonds to provide for cash bonuses or the distribution of the bonds themselves among the ex-service men.

Mr. McFadden advocated the use of the foreign bonds in this way in March, 1920, before the house ways and means committee.

Deems It "Most Sensible Plan."

"The use of the foreign bonds is the most sensible plan that has been advanced," said Mr. McFadden. "I would be opposed to a sales tax to raise the necessary funds. I believe the financial interests of the country would approve the use, in financing the bonus, of the bonds which we will obtain from allied governments when the refunding of the foreign loans is completed. Agreement on the refunding bill is expected Monday.

"Representatives of the American Legion have indicated to me that the plan to give the bonds to the ex-service men which I have advocated would meet with favor.

How Plan Would Work Out.

"Under this plan, the obligation to our soldiers and sailors is paid without an additional Liberty bond issue. This plan would obviate the levying of an additional tax burden upon the people, a portion of which would have to be borne by our soldiers and sailors. It will not interfere with financial equilibrium in the United States, but will simply furnish to investors an additional security investment at a favorable rate of interest."

SEIZE OFFICIALS IN MARTIAL LAW RAIDS IN TEXAS

Big Fire Adds to Thrills at Mexia.

Waco, Tex., Jan. 14.—County Attorney Eubanks and Deputy Sheriff Steele of Limestone county and thirteen other prisoners were brought here today from Mexia, Tex., which is under martial law proclaimed by Gov. Neff because of "indescribable lawlessness."

The county attorney, accused of conspiracy and violation of the prohibition law, was released on a $1,000 bond by a United States commissioner. The deputy sheriff is charged with knocking a revolver from the hand of a Texas ranger. With the other prisoners he was locked in jail.

More Prisoners in Mexia.

Twenty-five more prisoners, held by the state militia in the "Winter Garden," a Mexia dance resort converted into a detention camp, will be brought here tomorrow, a United States secret service man stated. Large quantities of liquor and gambling paraphernalia have been seized.

On top of its vice "cleanup," following martial law, Mexia, "wonder oil town of Texas," was threatened tonight by a fire which for a time imperiled the entire business section. The damage was estimated at $250,000.

Fire Spreads Rapidly.

The fire started in the business district near the railway station. It destroyed the Ross-Graham Oil exchange and the Southwestern Telephone building, cutting off communication with other towns. As a strong wind carried the flames toward the town, it was found the water supply was nearly exhausted. No damage was done to the oil fields.

The oil boom mushroomed Mexia from a farm village to a city overrun with prospectors. Thousands slept in tents at exorbitant prices. Gov. Neff charged that gunmen, bootleggers, highwaymen, and notorious women flocked to the place. To preserve order he established martial law and set state troopers and rangers to work ridding the town of disorder and vice.

BOY HURLS STONE INTO "L" WINDOW.

A stone thrown through a window of an Evanston elevated train by a boy at Hamilton avenue yesterday struck Mrs. Charles Lowry, 74 years old, of 1022 Grove street, Evanston, a passenger, in the face. Several passengers were slightly cut by the fragments of glass.

1,000 CLERKS IN CITY HALL SEEK WAGE INCREASE!

JAMES FLYNN.

Though most of their co-workers are confining their energies to an attempt to stem the tide of wage reductions, 1,000 city hall clerks announced yesterday that they will insist on wage increases running from approximately 10 to 17.5 per cent.

Twice during the period of pay boosts the clerks struck, tying up all municipal departments except police and fire.

The council financial committee has reduced the pay of several union groups 12.5 per cent in conformity with outside pay rates.

Here are the boosts which James Flynn, head of the clerks' union, has laid before the aldermen:

	Present pay.	Request.	Per cent inc.
Junior clerks	$1,680	$1,980	17 6-7
Senior clerks	2,100	2,400	14 2-7
Principal clerks..	2,580	2,880	11 3-5
Head clerks	3,060	3,360	9 4-5

The clerks declare the purchasing price of the dollar they get from the city is 57.04 cents and that, measured by the dollar's purchasing power, a junior clerk at $1,680 now is getting $242.40 less than he was in 1912 when the salary was $1,200. The three raises which clerks have received since 1912 have failed to keep pace with price increases, they assert.

TRANSPORT WITH TROOPS ABOARD IS SAFE IN PORT

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—In the gray of early morning the United States transport Crook came up the bay today under her own steam. Working long hours in a wild sea, her engineers had succeeded in temporarily patching up the holes in her hull with wood and cement, ending the danger of a plate being knocked out and the vessel sent to the bottom. Her coming was heralded by the transport St. Mihiel, which had gone to her assistance and picked her up after hours of search in a smother of snow.

There had never been any grave danger, Capt. Frank J. Reppa of the Crook said, but he was thankful that repairs had been completed before the transport, with 1,166 persons on board, ran into the southwesterly hurricane that wrought such havoc ashore before it swept to sea.

The Crook brought 968 enlisted personnel of the army from the Rhine and six naval casuals. In addition it brought 19 first and 22 second class passengers, 9 destitute former soldiers, and a crew of 142 men. Among the passengers were 18 women, 14 of them German war brides, and 8 children. There were also 663 bodies of soldiers aboard.

LUCY HAGENOW BARES CAUSE OF ABORTION WAVE

Legitimatize Child, Her Remedy for Evil.

"Fear of the loss of their jobs, even more than the terror of the social stigma attached to the unwed mother, leads women and girls to the annual harvest of Chicago's abortion parlors."

This was the statement yesterday of Dr. Lucy Hagenow, aged midwife, through whose office for the last forty years sorrowing women have passed, some to regain the bluebird of happiness and others—so grand juries have decided—to find death.

Dr. Hagenow has served time in Joliet penitentiary for murder by abortion. She has been indicted time and again on the same charge. She is reported to be over 75 years of age, but denies that she is that old. She is at present out on bond awaiting trial on a charge of having performed an illegal operation upon Mrs. Fred Albrecht, now seriously ill at the county hospital. Another alleged victim, Mrs. Frances O'Reilly, 6226 Greenview avenue, a patient at St. Joseph's hospital, is said to have signed an accusing statement against her.

Denies Illegal Operations.

Dr. Hagenow not only denied her guilt in these two cases but declared she never has performed an illegal operation in her life. Whatever the merits of her assertion in this regard, she probably knows as much if not more of the methods of unprincipled physicians and unscrupulous midwives and the secrets of the great army of women upon whom they thrive than any person in Chicago.

The TRIBUNE wanted to know what were the greatest contributing factors and aids of the abortion evil. What was the remedy? Did young girls or middle aged women, single or married, wealthy or poor, intelligent or ignorant comprise the majority of the victims?

These questions the aged midwife answered and in doing so turned over a sordid page of Chicago's life—a musty page, yellowed by years of heartaches, sickness and death.

Most of Them Unwed.

"Married or single?" she repeated. "That I can truthfully tell. They come here and tell me they have been married. Only a few have admitted their unmarried state but it is my opinion most of them are unwed. They do not give me their real names or addresses. Most make no explaination. They want medical aid and I attempt to give it.

"Their age? Most of them are under thirty—around twenty and even younger. Yes, they have come much younger than twenty. But the older ones come too—mothers of four and five children who are too poor properly to care for larger families.

"But none of them are ignorant. I tell you the girl of today is wise. They know every remedy. They have tried them all before they come to me. That is why the midwife gets the blame for it all. These girls first start out by taking pills—bushels of them. They go from drug store to drug store, buying patent remedies, medicines that ruin their health. In a very few instances, these drugs work, but more often they fail.

"Then they try more violent methods, swallow huge quantities of more violent drugs. Finally they try to operate on themselves. Blood poison is the inevitable result.

Finally Rush to Her.

"Finally, in desperation, they rush to a doctor, who often refuses to treat them. Then to a midwife who has little or no knowledge of medicine or surgery and who only aggravates their condition. Then to me. They come to me weak and fainting and miserable and pleading for me to help them, as a dope fiend appeals to a physician for opiates. I do what I can for them. Most of the time antiseptic solutions do the work and they recover, but sometimes they are past medical aid.

Dr. Hagenow stroked her white hair with her wrinkled hand and wept.

"I am getting too old to stand any more trouble," she said. "I have seen too much of it. And why do they come to me in the first place? Money, money—that's it. They don't want to spend any money. Of course, they do not want the stigma that attaches to the unwed mother—if society knew no such thing as the illegitimate child this cause would be removed—but greater than this social question is the economic one. They tell me: 'I can't afford to go to a hospital and have my baby. I'll lose my job. I'll lose my pay, and I have my mother to support.'"

Majority of Working Class.

"And are all who come to you of the working class?" she was asked.

"Most of them. The ones who have money take their troubles to their family physicians. Those are the cases you never hear of."

Back in 1915 Dr. Hagenow was interviewed while she was in prison. She described regular colonies of physicians in Chicago who made a business of illegal operations.

"My memory is not so clear now," she said, "but what I said then was true. What I have heard since I came back is only hearsay—stories my patients tell me. But I do know that more illegal operations are performed every day in Chicago now than there were ten years ago.

"How can they be stopped? They can't be. They can be materially reduced by legitimatizing every child, by providing retreats for the unwed mother, where she can give birth to her child without economic loss to herself and those dependent upon her, by impressing upon girls the necessity for consulting reputable physicians and educating them to the dangers of home remedies."

CRACK SHOTS, ALL

Back to Delafield, Wis., yesterday went six happy youths and one happy captain of St. John's Military academy. The rifle team, champions of Wisconsin, had again successfully invaded Chicago. Friday the boys outshot the team of Northwestern university's R. O. T. C. by a score of 372 to 358. Yesterday they beat a team picked from Chicago High school R. O. T. C.s by Capt. Frank Beals, 378 to 363. "We are considering a trip to Georgia to shoot against the infantry school at Camp Benning," said Capt. J. B. MacKenzie, instructor. "We challenge any school in the country." Left to right in the photo are: (Back row) C. R. Baker, F. K. Farmis, T. W. Proctor, and Capt. McKenzie. (Front row) W. R. Osborne, C. Van Deventer, and S. W. White. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

RED TAPE STOPS R. R. PROGRESS IS VIEW OF SCHWAB

Urges Repeal of Laws That Bar Initiative.

New York, Jan. 14.—A call upon the American people to repeal all the laws that repress initiative on the part of the men in charge of the railroads, restrict enterprise, and dampen their enthusiasm was made tonight by Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the board of the Bethlehem Steel corporation, in addressing the Ohio Society of New York.

CHARLES M. SCHWAB. [Copyright: U. & U.]

He asked that this be done as a measure to contribute to the revival of prosperity in the United States, saying that "at every turn the railroad managers were hemmed in by rules, regulations, and restrictions which deprive them of power to exercise their discretion, prevent the exercise of the sound business judgment which had grown out of their long experience, and interfere with their doing acts which if done would contribute immeasurably to the restoration of prosperity."

What Is Needed for Progress.

"You never make progress by hamstringing ability and initiative, and no industry ever gave good service long if it was not prosperous itself."

Saying he had been informed $5,000,000,000 would be required to put the transportation companies abreast of the nation's commercial requirements, Mr. Schwab termed an "impossible situation," the fact that more miles of track had been abandoned in the last two years than were built in that time, and probably more cars retired than installed.

Restrictive Laws Harmful.

Because of restrictive laws, Mr. Schwab said, railroad rates no longer were responsive to the changing commercial needs, the managers had been shorn of the power to exercise enterprise and private capital was unwilling to embark in railroad development except under rigid guarantees.

"We should stop knocking our railroads, their presidents and railroad men in general," he added.

FALL FROM TRAIN FATAL.

Walter Carson, 58 years old, 1720 North Tripp avenue, died yesterday at the Washington Boulevard hospital as a result of injuries suffered when he fell off a train at Hermosa, Ill., Dec. 23.

SPENCER, NOTED INVENTOR, DIES; KNEW A. LINCOLN

Designed First Repeating Rifle.

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 14.—Christopher Minor Spencer, one of the best known American inventors, died at the home of his son, Roger M. Spencer, here today. He was 88 years old.

Mr. Spencer patented scores of important mechanical devices, including the Spencer repeating rifle and a shotgun, an automatic thread spooling machine, a steam automobile, a drop forge and other types of implements and machinery.

Born June 20, 1833, at South Manchester, Conn., young Spencer began the study of mechanics in 1846 under his grandfather, who had been an artilleryman and armorer in the war of 1812.

Explained Rifle to Lincoln.

During the civil war he taught Abraham Lincoln how to handle the new Spencer rifle, 200,000 of which were subsequently supplied to the Union army.

His first invention, built in 1848, was a stationary steam engine. Later Mr. Spencer became a locomotive machinist for the New York Central at Rochester, N. Y., and from 1854 to 1857 was a gunsmith in the Colt armory at Hartford, Conn.

Instructed Union Soldiers.

From 1862 to 1865 he was engaged at the front in instructing Union troops in the use of the new weapon. During the period of 1868 to 1876 Mr. Spencer developed various drop forging processes and also an automatic screw machine, the result of which was to obviate hand labor. In 1880 he invented a "pump" or "trombone" action repeating rifle and shotgun.

—Stephen Decatur.

THE TRIBUNE PROGRAM FOR MIDDLE WEST DEVELOPMENT

1. A Square Deal in Congress for the Middle West.

SHALL WE REPUDIATE THE DECLARATION?

"We hold these truths to be self-evident; that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed."

If there is a touchstone of Americanism it is these words of the Declaration of Independence. They contain the quintessential spirit of the American democracy. Its basic principles are two, equality before the law and the consent of the citizen. Equality, it has been said, is the soul of republics, and in a maxim of Montesquieu, the great political philosopher of France, is found the key to the doctrine of consent. "Government," he says, "is like all other things in the world: to preserve it, it must be loved."

We ask the advocates of restriction of Chicago's representation to ponder the foregoing and to test their proposal by the test of Americanism. Chicago asks no other or better defense than arises from these central principles of American democracy.

It is strange, indeed, that 147 years after the publication to the world of America's creed it should be necessary, or, at any rate, desirable, to appeal to any public body or to any community in the republic on behalf of the principles of political equality and consent of the governed. Yet there is observable today a persistent tendency to ignore both in mistaken attempts to use political power for the correction or prohibition of specific evils, and unless we are to suffer a fatal disintegration of the foundations of the American fabric we must resist the danger vigorously and in time.

We need at this moment a revived allegiance to basic American principles of liberty and equality. Our generation has accepted the gifts our forefathers fought for and won for us, as an heir accepts the inheritance which the thrift and industry of another has amassed for his enjoyment. We are in peril of losing our inheritance through not having paid for it. Our rights and privileges have been handed to us and we take them for granted. We must realize that we cannot keep them unless we understand them and understanding guard them jealously from the encroachments to which they are and always will be subject.

The American republic was the first in history to realize, at least approximately, the principle of equality of the individual before the law, as expressed in manhood suffrage. Even with us property qualifications for the franchise persisted as late as 1845. The Negro was not granted the franchise until a civil war had won it for him, and woman was not admitted to the full privilege of citizenship until 1920. But Jefferson's formula for American republicanism embodied the principle of equality, and it became the living breath of our political being, eventually forcing complete recognition.

The republics that preceded ours were essentially different from ours, in that they did not possess this basic principle of equality. They were republics in that sovereignty derived from citizenship and not from the sovereign in his own person. But the democracy of Athens was limited to a minority of enfranchised persons, while the nation included a larger body without suffrage, but subject to the rule of the state, and outright slaves. The so-called republics of mediæval and renaissance Italy were narrow oligarchies or aristocracies, and though the federated republics of the Netherlands renounced the sovereignty of the Spanish autocrat and delegated the functions of rule to a stadtholder, the franchise was limited and the derivation of power was from a comparatively small class. Even in England, after the overthrow of the institution of unlimited monarchy, the theory of monarchical authority survived and still survives, since the king is sovereign "by the grace of God" in spite of the legal fact that his authority derives from parliament. In England, too, the franchise has been closely limited until recent years.

But on the threshold of its existence, the American republic declared that all men are born equal and that governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed. These were the corner stones of America's political faith and have been the breath of American national life. Steadily American instinct has worked for the realization of these principles and upon them rests still the noble structure of our republic, the first in all history erected and successfully maintained upon such a base.

They are as valid today as in 1775 and as worthy of our devotion and zealous guardianship as of that of the fathers'. But restriction of representation is not compatible with them. It destroys the political equality of the citizen who dwells in one place with the citizen who dwells in another. It deprives him of his due share of political force and governs him in that degree without his consent. Inherently and inevitably restriction is denial of the principles of equality and consent, the soul of our republic and the mainstay of its preservation. If restriction is imposed and sustained it will mean that for the first time in American history we have turned back upon the path and with heedless hands have begun to tear down the edifice which all struggling peoples of the world have envied us, and in which we and our forbears have dwelt in fruitful harmony for generations.

What argument of illusory expedience can prevail against the testimony which our national experience brings to the support of these American principles? What appeal of weak fears or class or local feeling but must be outweighed in the conscience of every true American by the proved wisdom of these enduring truths of the Declaration? Surely the time has not come when an American commonwealth will barter its birthright for a mess of pottage.

STRIPPING THE NATION OF DEFENSE.

Trotzky says soviet Russia must maintain an army of 1,595,000. This is a force nearly as large as the combined armies of France, Germany, and Italy in 1913. The czar's army was only about 14 per cent larger than that which the soviet Napoleon wants to keep up.

France, three years after peace, has an army of 818,000, or about 30 per cent larger than the force she considered necessary for defense in 1913.

The German army has been broken up and the greater part of its material surrendered. Italy is reducing her army and Geat Britain also. But all the smaller nations, including the former members of the Austrian empire, are maintaining considerable forces—Poland 815,000, Roumania 323,000, Czecho-Slovakia 216,000, Spain 216,000, Greece 240,000, Jugo-Slavia 194,000, Switzerland 170,000, etc. Japan has an army of 273,000.

Congress has cut our army to 150,000, and there are congressmen now proposing to reduce it to 75,000. According to the careful estimate of former Chief of Staff March, 200,000 is the minimum number necessary to garrison our possessions and coast defenses, do necessary police work at home, maintain such a framework of organization as could be filled up in case of war by civilian soldiers and recruits, help in the teaching and training of the guard and reserve, and carry on the services of supply, etc., essential to the maintenance of the military establishment.

The cut already authorized compels the reduction of the skeleton establishment which our policy demands as the minimum for police and training purposes. It means if war comes we shall have too few organizations ready for expansion, too few staffs ready to organize recruits and command new units, too few trained or partially trained officers to lead the expanded army. That means haste, delay, inefficiency, and a wholly unnecessary waste of life on the battlefield.

The pressure for economy we appreciate, and wise efforts to reduce certainly deserve support. But there is a point at which retrenchment ceases to be economy and becomes waste, and that point already has been passed by congress in its dangerous parsimony with respect to both the navy and army. The fleet has had to give up target practice and maneuvers. The army has had to refuse citizens seeking training, reduce its combatant organization, and let many officers go.

There is nothing in the state of the world or in international relations which justifies reducing our strength to that of a third or fourth rate power. There is nothing to be expected from the Washington conference which justifies it. War, we hope, is not imminent for us, but it is a possibility of the future, and will become a probability if we reduce our strength to a point at which an attack upon us or gradual infringement of our rights and interests can be safely tried by any of our powerful rivals.

Modern war cannot be improvised over night. There must be an adequate force on land and sea in peace time to train officers and men and maintain both a defense for sudden attack and an adequate foundation upon which a war army and navy can be promptly developed when war comes. We cannot let our defense plant go to seed and expect to remake it at once when war comes.

These are the truisms of our experience. They are written in the huge figures of our war cost taxation and more tragically in the blood of thousands of our soldiers who died in France, an unnecessary sacrifice, the exorbitant price of our want of preparedness. The late Lord Fisher wrote to a friend in 1918 that he had heard of American attacks that were like shambles. We know it frequently cost four to ten times as much for American troops to take objectives as it did the seasoned and skillful French. That was not the fault of the soldiers, but of the national policy which refused proper preparation in peace time. It was a policy which called itself economy, but its real name is waste, the worst kind of waste.

TO CARRY ON FOREST CONSERVATION.

A point probably known to but few Americans, even among those interested in the conservation and replanting of American forests, was made by W. L. Hall, representing the Union League club of Chicago, advocating the Snell-McCormick forestry bill before the house committee on agriculture. It is that the national forests purchased by the government under the Weeks law have returned dividends of more than 6 per cent to the government. There is a practical and extraordinary demonstration of the value of a sound forest conservation policy.

Not only has the money invested in these forests returned good cash dividends to the government but a future supply of timber has been assured and a protection has been afforded to watersheds and navigable streams which is invaluable. It is the purpose of the bill now before the house committee to extend this work. That is a purpose worthy of support.

More than 230,000 acres of timberland on the watersheds of Virginia, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, and Georgia have been offered to the government for extension of this conservation work at prices ranging from $3 to $5 an acre. They probably would bring considerably more than that now in the commercial market, and certainly will bring more than that in the near future. Appropriation for such purpose, however, was omitted from the budget on the ground of economy. The bill under consideration seeks to correct that omission. An appropriation of $50,000,000 is asked.

There is danger in going outside the budget to this extent, even though expenditure might be distributed over a number of years. Such disregard of the budget sets a bad example. But an appropriation sufficient to establish the principle and fix the policy of continued purchases along this line, and sufficient to maintain the forestry organization which has been developed at great expense, certainly is advisable.

Extension of national forests, conservation of timber, protection of watersheds, and improvement of commercial forestry are forms of governmental activity of supreme value to the country. When they can be accomplished with a simultaneous return of 6 per cent cash dividends, the elimination of such work through the cutting off of all appropriations is a questionable economy.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

Hew to the Line, let the quips fall where they may.

SO THAT'S why Mary wanted our oubliette! A grand opera seneschal came breathlessly to the Colyum Friday night and said, please, could Mary borrow the oubliette? Yesterday morning we found out they were oublietting Salome. We saw Tristan und Isolde Friday night and got an idea. While we do not approve of Salome, wouldn't it be a good idea not to disappear the vamp entirely but to sort of correct the girl and let her display her high spirits under proper supervision? While attending Tristan und Isolde and sternly holding the right foot four inches from the floor, it occurred to us that it would be nice if there was just a little more snap—you know what we mean—in the opera. Now, Mary, why couldn't you fire Isolde and let it be Tristan und Salome? Wagner's music would have a somnolent influence on Salome—unless she held her right foot four inches from the floor all the time—and Salome, even if somewhat subdued, would certainly make Pelleas sit up and take notice.

A HOMING HEART.

Back in the town of big money
I know you're laughing and gay,
But down in your heart, old honey,
Joy hasn't its same old sway.

Here, in this dreary village,
I'm slaving away at my task,
Guarding against men's pillage
To give you all that you ask.

But each day's a little nearer
To the time I'll kiss you and say
"True Heart, I loved you the dearer
Even though I was miles away."

Well! Well! You Husbands! How Many Languages Do You Speak! How Many Trades Did You Learn! What Did You Do with Those Golden Hours! Come! Speak Up!

Dear R. H. An English scientist learned a language in the time his wife kept him waiting for the completion of her evening toilettes." For no reason whatsoever may I not inquire why there could not be a supergalaxy of linguists? SEA WOLF.

We Are If We Are, but Are We! And What Indeed!

R. H. L.: If you are from the same town as Maude Light you are from Bloomington. Maude Light (before she became the famous Margaret Illington) and her brother used to be friends of my sister's chum. What relation does that make me to you? Yours in suspense, G. E. M.

DISCOVERED AT LAST.

Pore granpaw died at eighty-three,
In the winter of ninety-four,
An' up to the last stood straight as a mast
An' hale, an' sound to the core.

He ate his weight at ev'ry meal,
An' smoked, an' drank, an' swore,
An' we used to say, in our ignorant way,
"He's good for ten years more."

We didn't know, what we know now,
An' granpaw's tombstone bears these lines:
"Starved from birth, he quit this earth
For lack of vitamines." DONNO.

THE VAMP!

A vamp is a woman sufficiently courageous to flirt with me. She is one who at a glance is able to penetrate the crudities of life which envelop me, the stupidities of business and matrimony which entomb me—to penetrate these and perceive the fine, high romance which, like a maiden in a tower of ivory, has its dwelling in my soul. Meeting me amid the sterile hurly-burly of the treadmill routine in which I expend myself daily, she is the only one who knows me at once—that it was I of whom Cervantes wrote—it was I of whom Villon sang—it was I of whom Rabelais and Baudelaire have chanted. The Vamp knows this. She alone! She alone! ERIK DORN.

CONGENITAL IDIOCY.

MRS. F. C. writes:

"1. Please tell me about the Mongolian type.

"2. What percentage of Mongolian type grow to manhood?

"3. What are the causes of the Mongolian type?

"4. Do the thyroid tablets help these cases?

"5. Our boy is 6 years old and is what the doctors call Mongolian type.

"6. If we have other children, would they be the same way?"

REPLY.

This is a type of congenital idiocy about which we know but little. The outstanding physical feature is the expression of the eyes. The Chinese appearance of the eyes, with the narrow slit of the lid opening, the peculiar inner corner, and the raised outer corner, is responsible for the name given this type.

But there are other physical symptoms. The tongue is thick, and not infrequently protrudes a good part of the time. The baby is a mouth breather, and when search is made for adenoids it is found that the space in the back part of the nose is cramped.

The skin is thick, as are the lips.

These features suggest Cretinism, but Cretins do not have the round face and the slant eyes of the Mongol, and they do have short leg and arm bones, which the Mongol does not have.

The death rate in childhood of idiots is very high, but especially true is this of Mongolian idiots. Rarely does a Mongolian pass 4 years of age, and Kerley says that in an institution for feebleminded with a population of 300, all over 8 years of age, he found but two of the Mongolian type.

He says that he knows of two growing children with fair intelligence, but definitely Mongolian in features.

This indicates that Mongolianism may not always be clocklike in its various features, but may merge towards the normal.

Mongolian type children teethe late, and generally do not talk until 5 years of age when they talk at all.

No one knows the cause of the disorder. It is said that a majority of cases are born in families wherein one or both parents are old or have recently been through some period of great stress.

Extreme chronic fatigue of the mother is also one of the charged but not proved causes of Mongolianism.

Although every one suspects that some disorder of some ductless gland is at fault, no proof of any sort has ever been forthcoming.

No improvement from the use of thyroid can be expected.

If one case has occurred in a family, there is some additional hazard, so far as the expectancy of other children is concerned, but it is not great. I know of no statistics on the subject, but this opinion seems reasonable to me.

Of the theories as to its cause there should be some increase. However, this condition should not follow the inheritance laws of ordinary idiocy.

All in all, I think the danger referred to in your last question is not great.

KEEP THE AIR FRESH.

A. P. B. writes: "We live in a hot water heated apartment, which at times is exceedingly filled with coal gas. Our complaints have been of no avail. We have opened our windows, but as colder weather approaches, it is not possible. It does not seem to affect vitally another member of the household, although he smells it strongly. But it seems to burn my throat, and my chest pains me continually.

"I have a little 6 months' old baby, and it is a continual worry about her health. My husband claims coal gas will not seriously injure one's health, but I fear for my baby's physical condition if it continues."

REPLY.

I presume you mean that the furnace under the boiler or the chimney leaks and some of the gases given off from the heated coal escape into the furnace room and finds its way to your apartment.

Of these the gases most objected to are those carrying sulphur. The most harmful of the lot, however, is carbon monoxide, which results from incomplete combustion.

I doubt, however, whether under conditons such as prevail in your flat any of these gases ever get into the air there in quantities sufficient to do harm.

You and your baby are much more harmed by the prevalence of high temperature, by dryness of the air, by its staleness and its evenness. Make your home safe by keeping the temperature down, varying it, moistening the air, freshening it, and keeping it clean.

MUST EXERCISE AND DIET.

M. L. writes: "1. Does Epsom salts injure the health when used in the bath?

"2. Is it good for reduction in weight?

"3. How much should be used?"

REPLY.

1. No.
2. No.
3. Do not use it.

STAINING SKIN SPOTS.

Mrs. D. C. D. writes: "Kindly let me know if there is a cure for white spots that seem to spread. They show up like liver spots. I have been troubled with them for five years and my doctor does not seem to know what caused the trouble or what to do for it."

REPLY.

There is a disease of the skin which causes patches of the skin to lose all pigment and appear dead white. It is called leucoderma. I have seen it appear in a case of pernicious anemia. It is liable to develop in the course of other disorders. Nothing can be done for it. Some people stain such spots to make them resemble the surrounding skin.

DIET FOR NEPHRITIS.

J. G. M. writes: "What is the proper diet and proper hygiene for a person suffering from intestinal nephritis?

"How could a person affected with this disease prolong life?"

REPLY.

If there is dropsy eat very little salt in your food and beware of saline cathartics.

Live largely on vegetables, fruits, vegetable soups, breads, cereals, milk, and foods made from milk.

Since this diet may contain but little iron, and sufferers from nephritis need iron, take a good deal of green vegetables and an occasional good steak.

Do not overeat. Avoid gorging with food at any time. Nephritics must be light eaters. Keep the bowels regular. Avoid infections. See that you do not catch cold or sore throat or rheumatism. If you can live in a warm, even climate in winter, do so.

Do not undernourish yourself. Many nephritics are so cautious about eating that they become anæmic, pale, and thin. As important as is overeating, exposure to infection is the principal calamity to guard against.

Go to bed early and get plenty of sleep. Cut out all bad habits.

WAGE CLAIM.

Chicago, Jan. 8.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I worked in a bakery and quit about three weeks ago. I have a day and a half of pay coming to me. They refuse to pay me, saying that I didn't give them notice. It is only $3.75, but I worked hard for it and need the money. Am I not entitled to it?
E. R.

If you were employed by the week and worked up to the end of the week you would be entitled to recover the week's wages.

Place your claim in the hands of an attorney. Statute authorizes recovery of attorney's fees on wage claims.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

NO GROUND FOR DIVORCE.

Chicago, Jan. 8.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Is it possible to secure a divorce on the grounds of nonsupport, without any other reasons whatever, and without waiting two years? The case I have in mind is where the husband has never supported the wife in all their married life, only paying his board.
E. M. D.

No. This is not a ground for divorce under our statute.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

WATCH YOUR TICKETS.

Chicago, Jan. 9.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—On December 26 I purchased two tickets at a loop theater, asking the clerk for tickets for January 3. He sold me two and when we went to the theater and were seated the usher later came and upon looking at our checks found that they were for December 26, the night of the day I bought them. The management will do nothing, saying that I should have looked at my tickets. I think something should be done about it.
C. B.

We incline to agree with the management.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

WHY DID YOU ACCEPT?

Chicago, Jan. 8.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Is there any limit except the sky line that an employment agency in Chicago is allowed to collect?

I secured a position through an agency in November, paying $112.50 a month. The agency asks as a fee $35.88.

No wonder they have such nice offices. Can they legally collect these amounts?
E. W. H.

Yes. Their charges are limited by the terms of the agreement that their customer accepts as the basis for the service.

Did you agree in advance to pay this amount?

They can collect if you agreed to pay it.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

PROBABLY ENTITLED TO RECOVER.

Chicago, Jan. 9.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—In 1916 a brother of mine, living as a private party in Germany, died and left me 60,000 marks in a German bank. He was a subject of Russia. During the war the bank converted this amount into German war bonds, without my consent. Have they the right to so invest an American's legacy? Do you think I can collect the full amount due me, plus the interest which must have accumulated?
S. R.

First try to find under what alleged authority they made the investment. It seems probable that you are entitled to recover.

DOWNSTATE PURITY.

Chicago, Jan. 10.—Mr. Grandon's letter contains the choicest bit of illogical reasoning that has ever been permitted. His absurdity in trying to correct the bad features of our municipal government, by denying us our full share of representation in the legislature, is one stage below insanity. Why doesn't he hit the nail squarely by saying he is at a complete loss to know why Chicago tolerates Thompsonism.

But does this tolerance of ours extend to all phases of our political life? Does Mr. Grandon know the complexity of a great political machine, or is ignorance blindly leading him along? Dunne, Deneen, Louden, have all been from Chicago. Small comes from the purified downstate.

When "Tammany" struck out to grab the state did its ticket come completely from Chicago, or was Joliet, East St. Louis, Moline, Champaign, and Kankakee well represented? From that statement I would infer that not all of the people who favor such a rule are living here, but among the purified downstaters some exist who are willing to sell their birthright.

It is very easy for the gentleman in question to sit in Sterling and tell us how to run Chicago. Why doesn't he investigate conditions here? Rotten as conditions are here, the general plane of municipal government is much higher here than in any of the larger Illinois cities.

In Galesburg, Ill., two years ago existed a street, Ferris by name, that fairly reeked of vice. Was there one hundred such streets in Chicago? I never saw them. Why didn't these purified downstaters wipe such a hell hole up?

And, then, do the people of Chicago act worse than those of downstate? Think back the last few years and then realize if Chicago leads downstate in the number of times the militia was called to assist the local government. CITY.

WHAT THE BANKER REALLY EARNS.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—In your columns yesterday I noted an article signed "Railroader," attacking the policy of a south side bank, in which the statement is made that the bank paid 3 per cent on savings deposits, "while reaping from 15 to 40 per cent on this money under the guise of interest and commission." It is hardly worth while, I know, to try to appease prejudice, but the facts with reference to bank earnings are so readily accessible that no one referring to the matter can excuse being misinformed.

In this case the bank had a profitable year—a profitable year is a year when a bank clears more than their dividends and is able to lay aside something in surplus to meet possible losses on loans. Their net earnings for the year were $80,000; the capital is over $600,000. Assuming that the stockholders might have stayed out of the banking business and invested this capital in real estate mortgages, they could have $36,000 on this money at 6 per cent. The profit then, from the banking enterprise is $44,000. This is the net earning of a bank on five millions of deposits in a good year; 85-100 per cent. If even 1 per cent more were paid to depositors the stockholders would have received less than 6 per cent on their investment. Where is the "15 to 40 per cent" of the Railroader's imagination? I might also refer to the fact that a bank stockholder stands between the depositor and loss not only to the extent of his investment, but to an additional sum of $100 per share. In this bank there is thus six million in security behind the five million in deposits.

CHRISTMAS TREES AND LOTUS.

Chicago, Jan. 7.—Edward E. Johnson's plea for protection of the northern balsam used for Christmas trees, and of the unique but very thrifty establishment of Japanese (not Egyptian) lotus at Grass lake is noted in the Saturday issue. I have my entire life been in touch with the northern forests, as a native of Wisconsin, and for twenty-eight years as a lumber journalist, and the groves of young balsam are quite as prominent a feature of the landscape there in all the wooded and semi-wooded sections as when I first knew them fifty years ago. Balsam fir (which is almost totally valueless for lumber, though used considerably for pulpwood where it attains larger size) does not get very large in Wisconsin before becoming hollow, but reproduces from seed more freely perhaps than any other conifer, and bears very heavy seed crops annually. The available supply extends for hundreds of miles northward through Canada.

My only visit to the lotus beds was made this summer. None of the buds I so carefully selected opened after I got them home and I shall not repeat the experiment, but I could not see any indications in the appearance of the beds that the cropping of buds had in any way reduced the vigor of the plants. It is well known that much of the vigor of the parent plant is expended in maturing seed, and systematic disbudding is often practiced by plant growers. Plenty of pods were ripening for reseeding purposes and altogether I got the impression that it would be found a very difficult matter to exterminate those many acres of lotus if the job were seriously attempted.

ALBERT BENJAMIN CONE.

ADVANTAGES OF A CITY LODGING HOUSE.

Chicago, Jan. 1.—Would like to ask Chief Fitzmorris and some of the aldermen "whether, if there are 10,000 homeless, shelterless, and moneyless men within the limits of Chicago, it would not be a better way to provide 'shelter,' at least, in municipal lodging houses than to have each of the 10,000 rustling for a place to sleep in say 9,000 different places in all sections of the city?"

Their present living conditions could thereby be somewhat regulated by making a rule that all desiring shelter should be under the roof of a municipal lodging house by, well, 8 p. m. A better police survey could be had of undesirable unemployment conditions and also welfare work could be carried on at less cost. EXPERIENCE.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

TO ALTHEA FROM PRISON.

By Richard Lovelace.

When Love, with unconfined wings,
Hovers within my gates,
And my divine Althea brings
To whisper at my grates;
When I lie tangled in her hair
And fettered with her eye,
The birds that wanton in the air
Know no such liberty.

When flowing cups pass swiftly round,
With no allaying Thames,
Our careless heads with roses crowned,
Our hearts with royal flames;
When thirsty grief in wine we steep,
When healths and draughts go free—
Fishes that tipple in the deep
Know no such liberty.

When linnetlike confined,
With shriller throat shall sing
Thy mercy, sweetness, majesty,
And glories of my king;
When I shall voice aloud how good
He is, how great should be,
The enlarged winds that curl the flood
Know no such liberty.

Stone walls do not a prison make,
Nor iron bars a cage;
Minds innocent and quiet take
That for a hermitage;
If I have freedom in my love
And in my soul am free,
Angels alone, that soar above,
Enjoy such liberty.

IRISH RULE OWN LAND FOR FIRST TIME IN HISTORY

Treaty Is Ratified by the Southern Parliament.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

DUBLIN, Jan. 14.—For the first time in 122 years a native Irish government legally exists and for the first time in history Ireland has a popular government, for the old Irish parliament, which was abolished by the act of union, was not representative, according to the modern idea.

In fifty minutes this morning the members of the southern parliament ratified the treaty which the Dail had debated on for nearly a month, and appointed a provisional government which is now the legal authority in Ireland.

One-half of the fifty minutes was occupied in signing the roll. The roll was signed by sixty-six members, comprising the whole Griffith party and four southern unionists, representatives of Trinity college, Dublin. The latter are Sir James Craig (not the Ulster premier), B. E. Alton, Prof. Thrift, and Gerald Fitzgibbon. They sat in the front row facing Arthur Griffith and the republican ministers and displayed the keenest pleasure and warmth of welcome in greeting their new colleagues.

The New Government.

The provisional government is composed of Michael Collins, W. T. Cosgrove, Eamon Duggan, Patrick Hogan, Fionan Lynch, Joseph McGrath, John MacNeill, and Bryan O'Higgins. With the exception of Mr. MacNeill, who is the speaker of the Dail, and Mr. Lynch, all these are members of Mr. Griffith's Dail cabinet.

Mr. Griffith himself decided not to become a member of the provisional government in order to keep his promise to the De Valeraites that he would keep distinct the functions of president of the Dail and chief of the provisional government. The government, however, has the power to add to the number of its members at will.

Dublin Castle Is Next Step.

In an exclusive interview to THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE immediately after the meeting, Mr. Collins said:

"This is a governing committee, in which the members will not have distinct portfolios. It is quite possible and quite likely that certain functions may be assigned to individual members, but the same man may look after home affairs one week, for instance, and defense the next. There is no question of sacking the staffs of the existing departments.

"I suppose that our next step will be to walk into Dublin castle, take possession, and make it a present to the Irish people, but the procedure is yet to be considered. At any rate, we do not have to go to London for that. All can be done here. It will not be done today, but perhaps on Monday, or at least early in the week, and no arrangements have been made yet as to whether there wil be a public ceremony or not. The fact is we have not even considered such details yet.

Will Add Men Outside Dail.

"It is the intention of the provisional government to add men from the outside who are not members of the Dail or the southern parliament. It is likely that we may ask help from southern Unionists at jobs for which they are best qualified. We have the biggest task before us, and we have to get on with the work."

Late this afternoon Lord Fitzalan, the viceroy of Ireland, went to Dublin Castle expecting to hand over immediately the control of the British to the provisional government, but on his arrival he learned that no arrangements had been made.

Later a record of the morning's parliamentary proceedings was signed by the provisional government, as required by the treaty, and sent by messenger to the Mansion House. It was handed to an undersecretary, who transmitted it to Lord Fitzalan. This makes it almost certain that the handing over of control to the Irish will take place on Monday.

Dail Eireann Kept Alive.

The proceedings today were purely formal. The meeting was called to order by Prof. Patrick O'Maile of Galway, who proposed Liam De Roiste of Cork for chairman. Deputy McNichol was made secretary and Mr. De Roiste made a short statement about the object of the meeting. Piiaris Beaslai proposed that the treaty be accepted and Mr. McBride seconded the motion and it was unanimously carried, as was also the appointment of the provisional government, which was moved by Mr. Ward and seconded by Mr. McKenna.

Then Mr. Griffith made a short statement on his position. He said it was the provisional government's duty to take charge of carrying out the treaty, but the Dail Eireann would continue in existence until the terms were carried out, when the Dail cabinet would call a general election, at which the people of Ireland would freely choose the form of government they wanted. He appealed for all Irishmen to support the provisional government, asking for fair play all around.

"We want all the old differences to vanish," he said, "and we must all work together, regardless of creed or past opinions, for the benefit of the nation."

Southern Unionists Pledge Aid.

Prof. Thrift of Trinity college replied, saying that he was one who had disagreed with Mr. Griffith in the past, but he heartily accepted the offer in the spirit in which it was spoken, and he pledged himself and his associates to the fullest coöperation.

One little act of courtesy by the Trinity college men won them a round of applause. The formal proceedings were in the Irish language, and when the roll was called they answered in Irish "anso." When Trinity's turn came Sir James Craig, who was called first, answered "present," but the others answered in Irish. This was a greater concession than appears, for Trinity college has always been regarded the center of British influence in Ireland, and this was almost a formal assumption of Irish nationality. At any rate, it was symbolic of the new feeling in the union.

Seek Freedom of More Prisoners.

One of the first jobs of the provisional government is to secure the release of the Irish prisoners convicted of offenses in England, who were not included in the king's amnesty order. Mr. Collins said that he would send a man to London tomorrow night to ask the release of these men, of whom there are between 100 and 150. The envoy probably will be Desmond Fitzgerald. It is felt here that a refusal to release them will be a breach of the spirit of the treaty. There is little doubt, however, that they will be held when the effect of continued detention is pointed out to the British.

AMERICAN IRISH SAY A REPUBLIC MUST BE SET UP

New York, Jan. 14.—The National Council of the Friends of Irish Freedom made public today a resolution expressing conviction that "a free and independent" Irish republic, "separated from the British empire and controlling the destinies of the Irish people," is the only solution of the Irish problem.

Members of the council unanimously voted to "continue to give our utmost support to those in Ireland who stand for an independent republic, but decline to recognize as republicans those who advocate a so-called 'external association with the British empire.'"

The resolution says, however, that the organization will do nothing to interfere with plans to remove the English military from Ireland and put the powers of government, "limited though they may be," into the hands of Irishmen.

PARLEY MARKS TIME FOR TOKIO TO DELIBERATE

Experts Say Considerable Is Done for China.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—With the entire far eastern settlement waiting on conclusion of the direct Sino-Japanese negotiations over Shantung, and the naval agreement delayed until Tokio can be heard from on the fortifications formula, conference delegates today were taking stock of their far east accomplishments and projected conclusions.

The first problem to be taken up when the far east committee resumes, following statement of the Shantung issue, which America insists must be settled, will be that of China's leased territories.

Others to Restore—and Keep.

With Japan's restoration of Kiao Chow to China, France is expected to surrender the leasehold of Kwang Chowan. Great Britain will give up Wei-Wei, in Shantung, but refuse to renounce Kowloon, on the Chinese mainland, opposite Hong Kong, and Japan will retain the Kwang Tung leased territory, in the Liao Tung peninsula, which includes Port Arthur and Dairen.

The British, in spite of specific declarations of the Chinese delegates, assert that China does not want Great Britain to return Kow Loon, because of the importance of Hong Kong, the principal port of entry.

Far East Settlements.

Achievements of the conference in China's interest were enumerated today as follows:

Provisions agreed upon for the withdrawal of foreign postoffices.

Settlement of the foreign wireless problem in China.

Increase of Chinese traffic.

Examination of extraterritoriality in China with a view of its amelioration and gradual extension provided for.

Commission to be created to sit at Peking to investigate question of foreign troops and foreign police.

China's rights as a neutral in time of war guaranteed.

Powers agree to consult China before concluding agreements affecting China, but refuse to promise admission of China into all such agreements.

Root Principles Accepted.

Root principles affirming the principle of the open door and equal opportunity in China adopted.

Great Britain promised to give up its sphere of influence in the Yangtse Kiang valley.

It was declared by a British spokesman that spheres of influence in China are obsolete, and that England no longer lays claim to one.

It is believed there will be a plenary session of the conference to dispose of the naval treaty the middle of next week. Heads of the five big delegations did not meet today.

THREE FALL A-FOUL OF DRY LAW.

Three men were arrested by Maxwell street police yesterday for alleged violation of the prohibition act. The men were Frank Pribk, arrested at 511 Garfield avenue, and Benjamin Bilituak and Paul Mitteson, arrested at 559 De Koven street. John Batalow, 1102 South Jefferson street, was charged with disorderly conduct.

KATO SEES BIRTH OF GOOD WILL IN CONCLAVE DEEDS

Far East Peace Now Is Certain, He Says.

New York, Jan. 14.—The advancement of American-Japanese friendship has been signally promoted by the Washington conference, Admiral Baron Tomasaburo Kato, senior Japanese delegate to the conference, said tonight in an address before the Japan society. "In a few short weeks," he added, "we have dissipated the clouds that marred the naturally clear and happy skies of the Pacific."

"Two months ago," Baron Kato continued, "we heard loose talk of possible war. Today we are contemplating an established peace. Early in November the newspapers frequently used such phrases as 'conflict of interests,' 'supremacy of the sea,' and 'menacing aggressions'; today they are talking more in terms of 'understanding,' 'accord' and 'coöperation'; and the principal criticism of Japan nowadays is that she does not agree quite as quickly as you make proposals for accord.

Not Talk Alone, but Deeds.

"Nor is this, my friends, only phraseology. Critics may say such declarations as we have been making at Washington were made a hundred years ago at Vienna, and subsequently at The Hague, and therefore will amount to nothing. But that is not the case, for very definite reasons.

"In the first place, the nations represented in Washington have given, by the concessions they have made to the views of others, tangible demonstrations of their earnestness. Unless the spirit that actuates the people of these nations was deep rooted in sincere desire, these concessions would not have been possible.

"An effort has been made for years to present Japan as a military nation designing to dominate the Pacific. Within these recent weeks, Japan, by accepting the 5-5-3 ratio, has given evidence to the contrary which only the weak minded will in future dispute; and at the same time this ratio is also assurance that you have no intention of assaulting us.

Never Envious of U. S.

"We have never aspired or intended to challenge the security of America or her far ranging possessions. We have sought only security for ourselves. Never have we desired war—certainly never a conflict with the nation that is the greatest purchaser of our goods.

Referring to the four power Pacific treaty he remarked that, although the geographical scope of the treaty is limited to the area of the Pacific, its influence and example for peace will embrace the whole world.

E. J. HANLEY, ON POLICE FORCE 41, YEARS, RETIRES

Policeman Edward J. Hanley, 3231 North Crawford avenue, who has been a member of the police department since 1881 and a wagon man at the Irving Park station for fifteen years, yesterday announced his resignation to Capt. Joseph Mullen, effective today.

Policeman Hanley is 73 years old. He will spend the remainder of his days, he says, in the fruit business with his two sons, Robert and Arthur.

Policeman Hanley has been commended for bravery many times. He is a veteran of the Haymarket riot, in which he was injured. Twenty-two years ago he rescued eight persons from the boat Tygo, which was burning at the foot of Randolph street. He also assisted in the recovery of bodies from the Eastland.

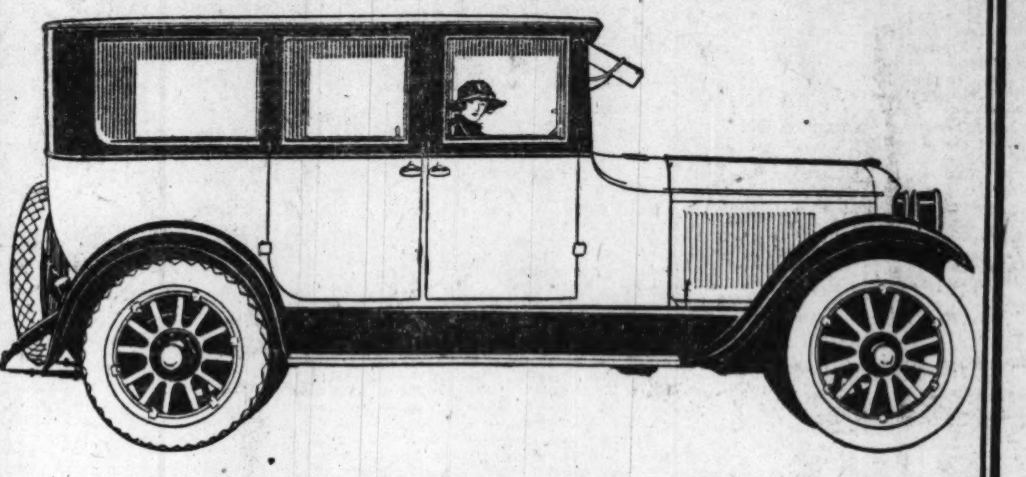
PAIGE
THE MOST BEAUTIFUL CAR IN AMERICA



The New Reduced Prices—Your Opportunity

Paige cars are today a rare investment opportunity. All models, on both the 6-66 and 6-44 chassis, have been reduced in price to a point that is truly sensational. And, despite the great price reductions, these cars are finer, handsomer, sturdier cars than they ever were before.

There can be little argument about "price" when a seven passenger 6-66 is available for $2195—or a five passenger 6-44 for $1465. On any basis of comparison, these figures mean astounding dollar-for-dollar value. They mean, we repeat, investment Opportunity—just that.

But judge for yourself. See the complete Paige line and look for the double advantage of increased quality and decreased price. Then act as your judgment dictates.

REVEAL LETTERS OF MRS. RYAN AT POISON HEARING

Written "Under Terror," Wife Again Says.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Jan. 14.—"Dear Peter: I am going to die because I love you too much. I cannot live without you.

"AUDREY."

"Dear Mother: When you receive this letter I will be dead. I ask your forgiveness for writing thusly. I find myself in the midst of circumstances which, if you knew, you would not blame me for wanting to die."

The two letters quoted above, written by Audrey Creighton Ryan in the room of her husband, Thomas S. Ryan, at the Hotel Unic, were read at the second hearing of Mr. Ryan before Examining Magistrate Marigny this evening. On the envelope of the first letter, intended for Peter McCoy, a young New Yorker living in Paris, also was written: "I wish you to inherit my violin. It is the last thing I will ever give you."

Writes Letters; Takes Poison.

The letters were written shortly before Mrs. Ryan took three tablets of bichloride of mercury in an attempt to end her life. Mrs. Ryan, who is at the American hospital in Neuilly, is still alive, but the doctors say her case is hopeless. She may live forty-eight hours.

Mrs. Ryan made a second deposition this afternoon denying statements made by her husband and reaffirming her declaration that she had written the letters under the influence of terror and at the instigation and command of her husband. She said, however, there was no threat to kill her.

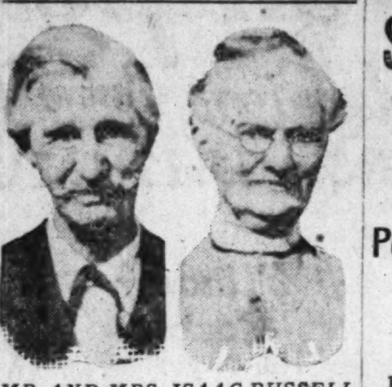
Mr. Ryan in the hearing declared that the only thing that could have terrified his wife was the prospect of resuming married life with him when she loved another.

Examines "Other Man."

M. Marigny examined Mr. Ryan for three hours. He also examined Peter McCoy. The latter told the magistrate that he knew Mrs. Ryan well, but he never discussed the matter of a divorce and he never pressed her to obtain one.

Mr. Ryan's attorneys are confident the evidence will show a clear case of suicide and they hope to have Mr. Ryan set at liberty before Tuesday. Mr. Ryan recently returned from India where he went as a correspondent for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

60 YEARS WED



MR. AND MRS. ISAAC RUSSELL

MR. AND MRS. ISAAC RUSSELL, twice decorated by the Old Settlers' Association of Cook County, and said to be the oldest married couple in Chicago, today will celebrate their sixtieth wedding anniversary at their home, 2836 Walnut street. Mr. Russell is 83 and his wife 80. Both were born in Chicago and have resided here all their lives.

Mrs. Russell was the daughter of John A. Oliver, a pioneer, who came to Cook county in 1839. She is remarkably active for her age, continues to "keep house," and today will serve cakes she baked herself. Mr. Russell's cousin, Mary Todd, was the wife of Abraham Lincoln.

George H. Hough Named Assistant to Crowe

George H. Hough, a lawyer with offices at 35 North Dearborn street, was appointed assistant state's attorney yesterday to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of W. L. Brill. Attorney Hough in the past has been an attorney for the board of the sanitary district and in the attorney general's office.

AUXILIARY SHIPS STILL A MENACE TO WORLD PEACE

Powerful War Craft Are Still Available.

BY GEN. HENRY J. REILLY.

[Editor of Army and Navy Journal.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.—The Hughes proposal to the arms conference has been accepted in part instead of in principle, as was announced with considerable blare of trumpets at the opening session. The more closely the official announcements are analyzed the clearer this appears.

A limitation has been placed upon capital ship tonnage and airplane carriers. Aside from this, certain tactical adjustments of the capital ship tonnage and the armament of other ships have been approved by the conference. These apply to the size of the capital ships, the limit in the size of the guns for the capital ships, cruisers, and merchant ships. There has also been an agreement, much to the disadvantage of the United States, on the base fortifications in the Pacific. This covers practically all of the agreed limitation of naval armament.

But No Auxiliary Limit.

It appears to be escaping the casual observer that the conference has placed no limitation on what are known popularly as the auxiliary ships of the fleet, which are in a large measure the commerce destroying and commerce controlling ships of the fleet.

Included in the types of ships on which no limit has been placed are cruisers, destroyers, submarines, aircraft, and merchant ships. These ships are more powerful than any that existed in the American navy in the civil war period.

When the conference adjourns the other nations can proceed to build cruisers, destroyers, submarines, and aircraft without violating any of the terms of the treaty. There is no limitation made on merchant ships, which the great war fully demonstrated was a vital factor of the naval strength of a nation.

Menace of Merchantmen.

The great sacrifice in its wealth which the United States made in forcing the construction of merchant ships during the great war is the largest burden of the taxpayers. Great Britain apparently has started a program to produce fast merchantmen. It is possible that competition in these types of merchant ships may develop to be as expensive as the competition in capital ship construction.

In estimating sea power, a battleship is regarded as the equivalent to three cruisers, fifteen destroyers, or fifteen submarines. By some three modern ocean liners when armed are regarded equal to one battleship. In comparing the effectiveness of battleships with an air force, a hundred bombing planes has been set down as about equal to one battleship.

It is evident that a competition between the types of ships and the aircraft upon which no limit has been placed may prove as expensive as the battleship competition.

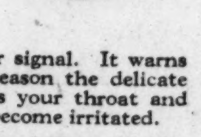
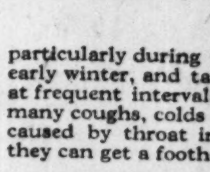
Why Do You Cough?

Healthy throat membrane looks like this—the tiny cells in orderly arrangement, close ranked to resist germ invasions. This is a reproduction of a microscopic cross-section of a piece of healthy throat tissue





Here is what you would see through the microscope when the delicate membrane lining the throat becomes irritated or diseased. The ranks of cells are broken up—germs can get through and multiply.

A cough is a danger signal. It warns you that for some reason the delicate membrane that lines your throat and bronchial tubes has become irritated.

Usually this irritation is caused by the constant breathing in of dust or smoke which fills the air of modern cities. Or it may come from exposure to cold or dampness or from unwholesome air in crowded places.

When you walk down a windy street, ride in a street car, enter a theatre or other public place, your throat is fighting off countless germs and untold numbers of tiny particles of injurious matter.

That is why a great many people carry a package of Zymole Trokeys with them, particularly during these chilly days of early winter, and take a Trokey or two at frequent intervals. Thus they avoid many coughs, colds and other ailments caused by throat inflammation, before they can get a foothold.

Zymole Trokeys—a mild throat antiseptic—moisten your throat, help to break up accumulations of phlegm and relieve "tickling" and coughs. They are pleasant to take and you can use them as often as you like since they contain no dangerous drugs or opiates.

In the handy package which fits either pocket or hand bag, Zymole Trokeys are available instantly any time, any place. Carry them for throat protection. You can get a package at any drug store.

COURT DEBATES ETHICS OF BED IN LAW OFFICE

Girl's Story Frees Her of Insanity Charge.

HELEN LISNE.

The ethics of equipping a loop attorney's office with an "in a door" bed were discussed in Judge Righeimer's courtroom yesterday.

The occasion was the dismissal of insanity proceedings brought against Miss Helen Lisne, 4049 Sheridan road, by Warren Lee, a law clerk employed in the office of Attorney James E. Callahan. She accused Lee of mistreating her after luring her to the attorney's office. The office is equipped with an "in a door" bed. On the witness stand she said Attorney Callahan was a former sweetheart.

Judged Sane by Doctors.

"I can do but one thing," said Judge Righeimer, when he called the case yesterday morning, "and that is dismiss the case. The jury of physicians found Miss Lisne erratic at times, but mentally sound."

Neither Lee nor Callahan was in court, but Attorney Robert S. Lee, brother of Warren, was present.

"I protest," said he. "Do you think this woman is sane in view of the evidence that she called Attorney Callahan's wife out of bed at 3 o'clock in the morning to inquire about Mr. Callahan?"

"I don't think we can call a woman insane, the judge replied, "simply because she calls to inquire about a man in whom she is interested, even if it is in the early morning."

"In a Door" Bed Bobs Up.

"That's not the issue, anyway," interrupted Assistant State's Attorney James W. Burke. "Now that Miss Lisne has been declared sane, I think action should be taken to have the 'in a door' bed removed from Attorney Callahan's office. A lawyer's office is not the place for such a bed."

"It's none of my affair," answered the judge. "You might have the Chicago Bar association look into it if you are interested."

"I object to the insinuations," Attorney Lee shouted.

"Mr. Callahan tells me that he never wanted the bed and that he is going to have it removed. He says he is going to court if necessary to have the bed evicted. I don't think that it's right to talk about an attorney this way."

Following the hearing, Attorney Burke announced that he would take Miss Lisne before the grand jury Monday and have her tell her story.

"HOW MANY, PLEASE?"

Mary Garden improvised a box office in the foyer of the Auditorium theater yesterday and sold tickets for the gala charity concert to be given there tonight at 8:30 o'clock, to which Muratore, Galli-Curci, Cyrena Van Gordon, John Alden Carpenter, Prokofieff, Schipa, and Pavley and Oukrainsky have donated their services.

The proceeds of the concert will be divided among the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society and three French war charities. A few $4 and $5 seats remain unsold. [Moffett Photo.]

GEN. WU SENDS ULTIMATUM TO CHINA PRESIDENT

Rallies War Chiefs to Oust Premier.

BY DON PATTERSON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

SHANGHAI, Jan. 14.—Surface indications seem to point to a rapid complication of China's domestic situation.

GEN. WU PEI FU.

Gen. Wu Pei Fu, according to a Hankow report, is credited with sending a telegram to President Hsu Shih-chang requesting him to dismiss Premier Liang Shih-yi, whom he accuses of being pro-Japanese. Gen. Wu threatened that unless a reply is made within three days he will be forced to resort to military measures. The report that Gen. Wu's troops are moving northward has been confirmed.

Gen. Wu is also reported to have wired the military governors of Chihli, Honan, Shantung, Hupeh, Kiangsi, Kiangsu Chekiang, and Szechwan asking them to join the opposition to the Liang administration. Gen. Wu is said to be en route to Paotingfu to confer with Gen. Tao Kun, the leader of the Chihli faction, and it is expected he will be joined there by a representative of the Hupeh military governor.

Peking apparently is taking Gen. Wu's move seriously and is doing all in its power to placate him.

Premier Liang has issued another statement emphatically denying all reports of secret negotiations with Japan over Shantung.

Austrian Prince Robert Undergoes Operation

BERNE, Switzerland, Jan. 14.—Former Prince Robert, son of former Emperor Charles and former Empress Zita of Austria-Hungary, was operated upon for appendicitis today at the Parcelsus hospital at Zurich. The operation apparently was successful. His mother was present at the operation, having been given permission by the allies to return to Switzerland from her exile home on the island of Madeira.

Jury in Banker Strause Murder Case Fail to Agree

FOOD
—just food, nothing else

JOHNNY'S teacher asked him the definition of f-o-o-d. And Johnny's answer was: "Things that make you happy when you eat them." Couldn't be much better—could it?

I HAVE EATEN in restaurants and homes—high and low—from Lake Forest to the "South Shore." I know good foods—plain and fancy—and I know when good foods have been prepared by good cooks. Johnny's answer is the Glen Inn's foundation stone.

AND SO I invariably choose the Glen Inn. My wife does—my sister does—even mother admits that "her boy" ought to be glad he found such a good place in which to eat. You know how careful mothers are.

I LIKE the generous portions at the Glen Inn. I like the cooking—in fact, I'm known so well over there that I am welcome in the kitchen and have found out that things cannot be cooked better. The Glen Inn cooks are so good they're "college graduates" in the art.

OF COURSE, you also get splendid attention—and if you like music, the famous Glen Inn orchestra plays on the comfortable second floor.

JURY DISAGREES IN $25,000 KISS SUIT OF NURSE

Reported to Stand 10 to 2 for Plaintiff.

After nine hours of deliberation, which lasted till 1 o'clock in the morning, the jurors who listened to the testimony in the $25,000 damage suit of Miss Matilde Benkhardt, student nurse in the German Deaconess' hospital, against Dr. Justin L. Mitchell, staff physician, failed to come to a decision and notified the court yesterday they had disagreed.

Attorney Charles P. Molthrop, counsel for Miss Benkhardt, immediately asked for a new trial, which Judge Harry A. Lewis granted, with the statement that the case would be sent back to Chief Justice Denis E. Sullivan for reassignment.

It was learned by attachés of the court that the jury stood ten to two for the plaintiff. The greater part of the time in the jury room, it was said, was spent in an attempt to win over the minority, who contended the Rev. Jacob Pfister, chairman of the hospital executive committee, should have been allowed to tell all he knew.

Offered to Tell Girl's Story.

While on the witness stand at the close of the trial the minister stated the girl had come to him and told him all about the case and offered to disclose to the court her statements.

Attorney Molthrop demanded that the witness' testimony be confined strictly to the questions asked him. He objected, the attorney said, to disclosures, however trivial, made in the nature of a confessional. The court upheld his objection.

Two of the jurors, however, thought this testimony should have been admitted and refused to assess damages because it was not, they told the court clerk.

"If they had only assessed him a penny, I would have been more than satisfied," Miss Benkhardt said, when she learned of the disagreement.

Fighting for Good Name.

"The money does not mean anything to me, whether they allow me 1 cent or $25,000. It is the principle and my good name I am fighting for.

"I wish they had allowed the Rev. Mr. Pfister to tell all I said to him, for I have nothing to hide and nothing a good woman should be ashamed of. Perhaps the jury thought differently, though it is too bad he did not tell it all."

Women to Run Wine Shop for Women in Montreal

Montreal, Que., Jan. 14.—The Quebec liquor commission is planning to open a wine shop for women, managed by members of their own sex, on St. Catherine's street in the heart of the shopping district. Wine will be the only beverage sold.

SOVIET CONTROL OF RUSS RELIEF BODY IS DENIED

Statements of Gov. W. D. Davis of Idaho that he believed the American committee for Russian relief was being used by the soviet government to collect food and funds in the United States for the benefit of soviets only were emphatically denied yesterday by Walter W. Liggett, acting secretary of the committee.

Gov. Davis exchanged telegrams with Herbert Hoover after he received a telegram from Mr. Liggett requesting him to serve on the advisory council of the committee. Mr. Liggett's telegram stated that four United States senators, ten congressmen, five governors, and seventy-five mayors and many prominent citizens were acting in that capacity for the committee.

Mr. Hoover replied that the Russian Red Cross—which was to distribute the food and funds collected by the committee—was listed among other organizations recently found by the department of justice to be exclusively under the supervision of the soviet authorities.

A CONVERSATION

A salesman reported a conversation between a newly wedded couple, substantially as follows:

"Oh, Fred! We could have saved time if we had come here first. It certainly is a fine selection. Look, Fred, at the prices! Lower than at the stores in ——" (referring to their home town or locality).

"You know," said Fred, turning to the salesman, "we were afraid to come in here. It is a huge place and large assortment. We thought you were too high priced."

Perhaps there are others like Mr. and Mrs. Fred. They do not know that prices are right, salesmen generally courteous and willing. They will and should help with your problems, just as Mr. and Mrs. Fred —— were.

The above occurred in one store, but it is applicable to any well conducted establishment. Of course, price is not all. The value of service, as well as quality, should be considered.

TAXPAYERS PAY $106,588; FARE STILL 8 CENTS

Mr. Cleveland's 'There' at Drawing His Fees.

Mayor Thompson's failure to bring down street car fares and telephone rates in 1921 cost the taxpayers $106,588—at the least.

That is the amount paid to Chester E. Cleveland, the city hall's $150 a day star lawyer, and his staff of legal and engineering experts in salaries and expenses, as reported to date. Perhaps other bills will straggle in later.

Though Mr. Cleveland, in city hall circles, is considered a "piker" compared to Ernest H. Lyons and Edward C. Waller Jr., real estate experts, who were paid $580,326 each by the city in less than thirteen months for real estate "experting," he is the pride of Mr. Ettelson's law department when it comes to earning power.

Gets Big Pay for "Trying."

Under his agreement with the city Mr. Cleveland does not have to show results to draw his pay. All he has to do is try to bring down fares.

For trying—and failing—to reduce street car fares and phone rates last year Mr. Cleveland was paid $22,167, but he did not give his entire time to the job. He worked on a per diem and in order to get $22,167 from the treasury he was obliged to work only about 147 days. He had the rest of the time—218 days, or about three-fifths of the year—to take care of his private practice or spend as he wished.

Where the Money Went.

Five experts got more than half the $106,588 which constitutes the city's phone and surface line litigation bill. Cleveland, of course, leads with his $22,167; then comes Engineer W. H. Crum with $15,450; Attorney Daniel A. Roberts with $11,240; the law firm of Ringer & Wilhartz with $5,626, and Samuel A. Andalman with a paltry $2,157—total for the five, $56,641.

To give an idea of what it means to have a good job and have steady work, it may be said that Cleveland made $1,950 from Nov. 11 to Nov. 30 last. From Nov. 10 to Dec. 1 there were twenty days, of which three were Sundays and three were Saturdays. That leaves fifteen and one-half working days, deducting Sundays and a half day Saturdays.

Mr. Cleveland labored thirteen days out of the fifteen and one-half opportunities presented by the calendar, thus earning the $1,950.

NEW LAMP BURNS 94% AIR.
Beats Electric or Gas.

A new oil lamp that gives an amazingly brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke, or noise—no pumping up, is simple, clean, safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coal oil).

The inventor, L. P. Johnson, 609 W. Lake street, Chicago, is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' free trial, or even to give one to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.—Advertisement.

FORCE RAILWAYS TO RAISE TRACKS, ALDERMEN'S CRY

Novel and drastic measures are being considered by the council finance committee to force the railroads to begin work on the elevation of forty-five miles of roadbed within the city limits.

ALD. MAYPOLE.

The roads have agreed to do the work, but have failed to make even a start within the time limit fixed by the eighteen track elevation ordinances involved. The eighteen projects will cost $35,000,000 and include 280 miles of track. The roads plead that they have no money for improvements.

Here are the two moves the city is planning to bring the roads to time:

1. Passage of an ordinance requiring the roads to stop all trains at grade crossing and the use of the police to enforce the ordinance.

2. Elevation of small sections of track by city labor under provision of the contracts which permit the city to do the work if the roads default, charging the cost to the roads.

Ald. George M. Maypole, chairman of the track elevation committee, proposed that $100,000 be appropriated to make a start on the elevation of the Pennsylvania tracks between 39th and 59th streets.

MRS. C. S. M'NETT FORFEITS $75,000 IF SHE REWEDS

The will of Charles S. McNett, attorney, disposing of an estate valued at more than $125,000, was admitted to probate yesterday by Paul Corkell, assistant to Probate Judge Henry Horner.

The widow, Mrs. Elfie K. McNett of Evanston, is to receive the entire estate provided she does not remarry. In the event that she does remarry $50,000 is settled upon her and the residue of the estate is divided among the three children—Mrs. Blanche Porter, Weyburn, Sask., Canada; Paul S. McNett, Evanston; and Harold C. McNett, Cary, Ill.

ANY ORDINARY SPARK PLUG
MOTOR MASTER CORP. CHICAGO, ILL. PAT. MAY 27 1919

Clean Spark Plugs

Even in the Worst Oil Pumping Motors, Motor Masters So Completely Protect the Firing Points That the Plugs Will Not Foul

Freedom from the common nuisance of "dirty spark plugs!"

Motor Masters now make this possible, affording the greatest relief that could possibly come to the owner of a car in which "fouled plugs" have been a cause of grief. The worst oil-pumping motors have had to yield to the cleansing process of Motor Master operation.

Motor Masters are not spark plugs, but any spark plug may be used with them. They are not "transformers" or "intensifiers" as the term is commonly used.

In fact, there is nothing else like Motor Masters. This principle, while recently brought out, so completely fills a long-felt need that many have said, "Why wasn't this thought of before?" Motor Masters today are far from an experiment. For two years they have been tested and proved under the very worst conditions. Their performance is so uniformly equal to all requirements that we guarantee them absolutely. If not up to your expectations, you get your money back.

Experiences that amount almost to miracles are related by car owners who know what Motor Masters will do. Engines that "bucked" and "spat" and acted up generally, as a result of hard carbon deposits—of inadequate ignition—of oil coming in contact with the firing points of the spark plugs—now run sweetly as a result of Motor Master installation.

Motor Masters cost little and are easily installed. Simply screw each plug into a Motor Master, place the latter in the cylinder bloc where the plug was and you begin to know the joy of clean plugs, freedom from hard carbon, greater gasoline mileage, complete ignition in the combustion chamber, and that smooth, continuous action which saves the bearings, the connecting rods, and every part of the car's mechanism.

Have Motor Masters installed now in that car of yours. Especially if it is an oil pumper you cannot afford to miss this opportunity of making the old car run like new. And Motor Masters make new cars vastly better.

30-DAY Money-Back Guarantee

You take no chances whatever when you have Motor Masters installed.

Have them put in your car now—or put them in yourself. If not satisfied at the end of 30 days, you will get your money back. The Motor Master Corporation stands behind every dealer in "making good" on this guarantee.

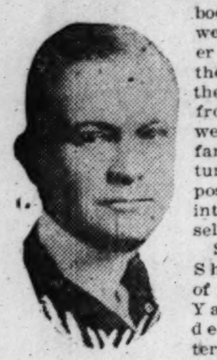
UNITED SUPPORT FOR SEA OUTLET URGED BY CLARK

Tells Power Boat Men to Demand Action.

National coöperation built the Panama canal, which resulted in a trade boom for east and west. The deeper waterways to the gulf and to the Atlantic ocean from the middle west, entailing a far less expenditure, are now opposed by eastern interests, from selfish motives.



SHELDON CLARK.

So declared Sheldon Clark of the Chicago Yacht club, so declared yesterday, in urging that local, state, and national legislators be kept "on the job" so that Chicago's dream of eventually becoming a seaport might be realized. He addressed delegates to the annual meeting of the Mississippi Valley Powerboat association at the Congress hotel.

The opposition to the waterways, he went on, is purely selfish, the hardest kind to beat. Eastern congressmen, concerned about themselves and not about the rest of the country, he said, have told their constituents that the waterways will destroy eastern leadership in politics.

"At one time," Mr. Clark said, "Philadelphia outranked New York in population, before the days of the Erie canal. That made New York. New Yorkers know this, and still think they are living 100 years ago and can handle all middle western trade with inferior facilities. We have no quarrel with any eastern ports. What we want is efficiency. We do not get it now with our transportation systems. The outlet to the sea will give us this."

LEGION NOTES

With both the state and national bonus bills coming into the limelight, the Advertising post of Chicago will place its promotional facilities at the command of both state and national headquarters. BUSINESS MAKES BETTER SHOWING IN MOST LINES

Improvement Is Noted in December Survey.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Business is still on the mend; still hanging on to the old crutch and the malacca stick, but nevertheless shaking a more lively leg at New Year's than on Thanksgiving day. Such is the conclusion hammered in by the December survey of the employment service of the United States department of labor.

Improvement has been small but constant since August in basic industries such as steel and iron and textiles. The manufacturing cities are making best headway, especially those of the textile regions, east and south.

At Cold Weather Pause.

Pennsylvania and Ohio mill cities in general report a noticeable improvement. In the west agricultural and allied activities have come to the cold weather pause and this is sending numbers of men back into the cities, large and small. The army of unemployed is undoubtedly growing, but the seasonal decline in most lines seems to be smaller than usual, and careful search seems to indicate that the manufacturing industries of the United States as a whole were in better position on Jan. 1 than on Dec. 1 or Nov. 1.

A drop of 4.7 per cent in the number employed in manufacturing industries was registered in December. It was largely due to temporary shutdowns to take inventories and to seasonal sag. The survey declares "the significant feature is the slight but continuous increase in employment in the basic or nonseasonal industries—textiles, iron and steel, lumber, leather and paper."

Month by month, improvement has been registered down at the roots, small, it is true, but constant, which is the meat in the cocoanut.

Some Surprising Activity.

Some of the smaller manufacturing cities seem to be striking a stronger pace than is discernible in the metropolitan centers. Everywhere building activity is commented upon. Also the stimulating effect this has had upon lines that produce goods used in construction, from lumber to cement.

In speaking of Chicago, the heart of mid-continent, the report dwells upon the open winter building; upon the stimulation of mill work, furniture making, and the cement industry. It says the end of 1921 was marked by "encouraging activity in pig iron and a substantial demand for pipe and tin plate. In January a definite betterment in mill operations is expected."

Illinois and some of the nearby states are covered in the survey as follows:

Five Day Schedule.

Illinois manufacturing plants are averaging 65 to 75 per cent capacity, with five days' work per week. Contracts have been let for $500,000 worth of school buildings in Peoria, and extensive building is in progress in Rock Island.

Northern Wisconsin sawmills are opening up, and many factories show an increase in number of employés.

Although Minnesota business men feel that the low point has passed in that section, they anticipate no improvement for about three months.

Construction is under way on a $2,000,000 high school in Omaha, and a $5,000,000 state capitol building at Lincoln, Neb., will be started soon.

Iowa Plants on Half Time.

Iowa manufacturing plants, according to a recent survey, are going 57.7 per cent of normal. The increased price of crude oil has not stimulated any new development work in Kansas oil fields.

Michigan retailers announce better business than manufacturers, although the general situation is improving.

Building in Missouri cities has increased within the last sixty days. Indiana manufacturing plants, however, are running but 50 per cent of normal. A Toledo automobile company expects to put on 6,000 more men in a month or two, while fair business is reported from other Ohio cities.

LINCOLN PARK TO BUILD AQUARIUM; COST, $100,000

Board Gives Project Its Unanimous Approval.

BY AL CHASE.

Chicago at last is going to have its long talked of aquarium—next summer, if present plans go through—and it'll be in Lincoln park. William H. Wesbey, superintendent of the park, admitted yesterday that the project had the unanimous approval of the park commissioners and that the question of financing it would be taken up at the next monthly meeting of the board on Feb. 12. If this can be settled work will start as soon as possible, with the hope of having it open during the summer season.

W. H. WESBEY.

Estimated Cost $100,000.

A tentative estimate of cost is $100,000. The building will be one story, 100x50 feet, and located directly south of the lion house.

"We expect to make it a combination aquarium and monkey house," said Mr. Wesbey. "There's no question about the popularity of an aquarium, and it's something that will add tremendously to our zoo's drawing powers. We'll confine it, of course, to fresh water fish and hope to make it as fine as anything in the world."

Plans for New Field House.

Mr. Wesbey also announced that Architects Clark & Walcott have drawn plans for a $40,000 brick field house to be built at once at the south end of the baseball grounds in Lincoln park, to replace the old field house. There'll be lockers and showers for 150 men and boys and for about thirty-six girls. It will be used by the tennis, hockey, baseball, and football fans and, according to Mr. Wesbey, will do much to foster outdoor sports in the park.

PRINTERS HONOR ANNIVERSARY OF BENJ. FRANKLIN

The two hundred and sixteenth anniversary of the birth of Benjamin Franklin, printer-statesman, was observed by the Old Time Printers' association of Chicago last night with its thirty-seventh annual banquet and ball at the Hotel La Salle.

County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer was toastmaster, the Rev. C. C. Boyle of Our Lady of Grace church, gave invocation. Speakers were the Rev. Frederick F. Shannon, pastor Central church; Judge Timothy D. Hurley, and John G. Harding.

GAS FUMES OVERCOME MAN.

Frank Campbell, 50 years old, 1240 South Wabash avenue, was found dead in his room yesterday. A gas heater was burning. Police believe the fumes overpowered him.

PRESENTATION OF PAGLIACCI ONE OF MERIT

BY EDWARD MOORE.

There were pleasant proceedings at the Auditorium yesterday afternoon. They involved the season's first, and only, performance of "Pagliacci," ranking among the high achievements of the same season; a revival of John Alden Carpenter's exquisite ballet, "The Birthday of the Infanta"; and the debut of Isaac Van Grove as conductor.

LUCIEN MURATORE.
[Matzene Photo.]

The "Pagliacci" cast included Lucien Muratore, Claire Dux, Joseph Schwarz, Desiré Defrere, and Lodovico Oliviero, and it was a good one. A few more full toned notes in the lower part of Miss Dux' voice and just a trifle more speed in certain of Conductor Pietro Cimini's tempos in certain places, and the performance would have rated close to 100 per cent.

Memories of Mr. Muratore's former appearances as Canio do not bring up the idea that he was ever as human in his performance as he was yesterday. He has an astonishing degree of expression in the part. At first glance, one rather wonders why, since he goes throughout the piece with his face painted completely white. But that blank white face carries a tremendous amount of emotion.

His singing, of course, was superb. No one expected anything else. His first solo was a complete drama, and the "Lament" had the old time, unforgettable thrill.

Mr. Van Grove took the baton for the Carpenter ballet, in which Andreas Pavley, Serge Oukrainsky, and many of their associates acted and danced Oscar Wilde's story. The score is tricky, also uncommonly lovely, and Mr. Van Grove made a great success of finding and bringing out its many beauties.
portant as opera.

60 QUIZZED, 18 ARE PASSED FOR ARBUCKLE JURY

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 14.—Sixty prospective jurors examined, eighteen temporarily accepted, six of the eighteen excused by peremptory challenge, and one by consent of court and counsel, the jury still incomplete, and an almost total absence of crowds.

This is the story of the first two days and a half of the Roscoe Arbuckle manslaughter trial in Judge Harold Louderback's court as it stood when court adjourned today noon to reconvene Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

Mrs. Mary Murphy, mother of four grown sons, was temporarily accepted. Howard Spreckels was excused on peremptory challenge by the defense.

There is a possibility that the jury may be completed Monday. The state, with three peremptory challenges remaining, has twice passed the challenge. Six challenges remain to the defense.

M. H. KILGALLEN FUNERAL HELD HERE TOMORROW

Burial Services in Rosehill Cemetery.

Funeral services for Martin H. Kilgallen, who died last Thursday, will be held tomorrow at 10 o'clock at St. James' Catholic church, Wabash avenue and 29th street. Burial services will be held at Rosehill cemetery.

M. H. KILGALLEN.
[Moffett Photo.]

Mr. Kilgallen was born Sept. 9, 1858, at Syracuse, N. Y., of Irish parentage. In his youth he served an apprenticeship as a telegraph operator in a railroad office in northern Michigan. At the age of 25 he was a dominant factor in three banks and was reputed to be one of the youngest bank presidents in the northern part of the country. A financial panic in 1884 caused the failure of his banks.

Takes Railroad Job Here.

He came to Chicago and accepted a position with the Chicago and Northwestern railroad and was soon placed in charge of the freight division between Chicago and Omaha.

His experience soon led him to become a recognized authority in terminal facilities by the leading railroads in the United States.

Mr. Kilgallen's services were enlisted in the building of the New York Central and Pennsylvania depots in New York City. He has acted in an advisory capacity on terminal facilities for nearly every railroad entering Chicago.

Under his supervision the city of Chicago Heights sprang up out of the prairie. In 1920 the town was credited with a population of 20,000, along with being an important industrial center.

Often Aided Townfolk.

In times of distress he sent carloads of provisions to the workers of Chicago Heights.

In early life Mr. Kilgallen married Miss Annie Tracy and on Dec. 31 last they celebrated their forty-first wedding anniversary.

Prior to his death he made arrangements for his active and honorary pallbearers.

The active pallbearers are D. Mulholland, John H. Dymond, F. C. McCarthy, F. C. Northup, W. J. Thrumstrom, and H. S. Welton.

"CELEBRATERS" ARRESTED.

Friday night was New Year's Eve for the Greeks. When Gust Durus, proprietor of a coffee house at 6 North Carpenter street, and Nick Manos, 313 Aberdeen street, were arrested for gambling, they protested they were "celebrating".

ALABAMA JURY FAILS TO AGREE IN LYNCHING CASE

Hamilton, Ala., Jan. 14.—A mistrial was today declared in the case of Sergt. Robert L. Lancaster of the Alabama national guard, charged with murder in connection with the lynching of William Baird, a miner, in Walker county, Jan. 13, 1921.

After deliberating twenty-one hours the jury announced that it was hopelessly deadlocked.

The jury stood five for conviction of murder in the first degree, five for conviction of murder in the second degree and two for acquittal on the final ballot, according to statements by jurors after they were discharged.

Attorneys for Lancaster at once filed a motion with the court asking bail for Lancaster and eight other guardsmen indicted with him in connection with the lynching.

Don't be an Eskimo!

Do you know what a Civilized Eskimo is? Maybe you're one. A civilized Eskimo is a chap who lives in a cold flat—one that is heated by a hit-and-miss boiler. What's a hit-and-miss boiler? It's a boiler that heats now and then, ever and anon, here and there, and is usually made of cast iron.

A hit-and-miss boiler often sneaks out on cold nights and doesn't come back till the whole family is full of chills and Bayer's Aspirin—(ask for the genuine). And that's why we have pleaded with you tearfully to LOOK IN THE BASEMENT FIRST—before you rent your flat—and see that a Kewanee All-Steel Boiler is there.

A handsome flat without consistent heat is like a pair of stylish pants with a thin seat—nice to look at but insincere during cold waves. The boiler is the very heart of the flat building. If it's a Kewanee, it is a sound heart. If it is some other type of boiler, it's very apt to be full of palpitation and leaky valves. How about it, doctor?

LOOK IN THE BASEMENT FIRST.

Don't sign the lease until you know that the Kewanee Boiler is going to be under you. Any man who pays rent for a flat is entitled to decent and continuous heat. And any smart architect or heating engineer will tell you that if the Kewanee Boiler is under you, you are safe in any flat. Don't be an Eskimo. Read all you please about that blubber-eating bird. But don't be one.

"HOME OF THE BABY LOBSTER"

Do you realize that the North American Restaurant is the only Chicago dining place where fried chicken, hot from the pan, is ready for you always—anytime from 11 A. M. until midnight, every day?

Here the appetizing food tells its own story—right before your eyes

These sea-food specialties suggest why the North American (which serves three times as much sea-food as any other Restaurant or Hotel in Chicago) is the most distinctive sea-food restaurant since the days of Rectors which was under the same ownership and management.

Half-dozen Cotuit oysters, on the half shell with cocktail sauce	25c
One dozen fresh shrimps, with cocktail sauce	30c
Oyster Stew—made in an individual dish, with big New York Counts in entire bottle of Certified milk and a big piece of butter	35c
Fried Oysters—7 big New York Counts, fried to your order, with Tartar or Chili sauce or ketchup	35c

One of these specialties daily

Crab Meat Rector	60c
Finnan Haddie Rector	60c
Lobster a la Newburg	60c

Breakfast

Fluffy honey waffle, with 3 strips of bacon, or Mickelberry's Old Farm Sausage, butter and pure maple sap or honey	25c
2 fresh eggs, fried in butter, with 4 strips of bacon	30c
An individual pot of coffee ([illegible] cups) with real cream	10c

Just imagine a great big table, 365 feet long, spread with the finest food the markets afford. That's what you see right before your eyes when you enter the North American Restaurant. You never need guess what you want to eat. The food itself is right before your eyes and you make your selection from the food itself rather than from the cold type of a printed "Bill of Fare."

You see the food before you buy it. You can see for yourself that it is good—you don't need to take anyone's word for it. And you get it instantly, and piping hot. You don't wait until some waiter brings it.

The mere sight of our food is sure to make your mouth water. Come in some time when you have that "not very hungry but must eat something" feeling and see how quickly our food display will give you an appetite. People often tell us that our food is so tempting they select more than they really should.

And our plan of asking you to serve yourself has the further great advantage of giving you the highest quality food at prices from 40 to 60 per cent less than must be charged by any good restaurant or hotel to include "service." Here you pay only for the food you eat plus merely the cost of preparing it. And there are no waiters to tip—another saving.

Has the thought that you might not enjoy serving yourself been the stumbling block? If so, we can only say "try it." Doing so has many advantages. You see the food before you buy it. You get it instantly. And because useless expense is eliminated we give you the highest quality food at prices so low that you will wonder how we can afford to do it.

Bring the "Kiddies"—they are always welcome

The Factory Behind The Piano

Story & Clark--Manufacturers of the World's Supreme Player-Piano

REALIZING many years ago that a player to be at its best must be manufactured in its entirety in one factory, so that each part can be perfectly attuned to the other, we have developed and built our player action as well as the piano itself in our own factories. We do not build the piano and buy or assemble the player mechanism; we manufacture both of them under one roof.

To such perfection has the Story & Clark Player Action been brought that we are constantly obliged to refuse orders of other piano manufacturers who want to install our action in their pianos. It has been our policy, however, inasmuch as we build our player completely in our own factory, to confine the use of our player action to our own product.

CROWE PROBES PANDERING BY TAXI DRIVERS

Judges Stirred by Girls' Confessions.

Investigation into charges of a "pan- ring trust" among cab drivers of the s begun yesterday by State's At- Crowe following revelations in y two girls.

The girls are Elizabeth Dubi, 17 ld, 9137 Ellis avenue, and Mabel r, 19, 2728 South Wabash avenue.

Arraign Cab Driver.

As a result of Miss Dubi's story, rry Brodzsky, 22 years old, 1042 th Lincoln street, a driver for the Checker Taxi company, was arraigned fore Judge Asa G. Adams in the urt of Domestic Relations.

Miss Dubi charged Brodzsky with king her into the New Schiller café, East 41st street, giving her some- ng to drink, remaining with her all ht, and the next day taking her to Roamer's inn, 116th street and stern avenue, whence she was res- d by a Juvenile court officer. Brodz- y denied the charges.

Decatur, Ill., Her Home.

Miss Pryor was arrested while living the wife of a colored man at the Wabash avenue address. She said she me here from Decatur, Ill., several nths ago and was taken by a taxi- b driver to a house of assignation.

The stories of the girls caused Judge Adams, Judge Arnold Heap of the Morals court, and Judge Victor Arnold of the Juvenile court to request an investigation by the state's attorney.

"If the girls are convicted," said Judge Heap, "then surely the cab drivers, who are parties to the crime, should be convicted of pandering. The uation, of course, is nothing new. is an open secret. But it should be opped."

A—The systems should be consolidated.

B—Municipal subways are required.

C—Immediate action is highly desirable.

D—Each will coöperate with the city to get results.

E—Politics should be eliminated from the transit question.

Both men also agree that improvements are not only advantageous and desirable but almost imperative in the near future. Mr. Blair has a program for the expenditure of about $180,000,000. Mr. Insull suggested to the committee an outlay of $35,000,000 to $40,000,000. Each insists that his plan would benefit the entire city.

Calamity Howlers Busy.

As has been the case in every serious consideration of better transit facilities in the last twenty years, where there seemed to be hope of success, gossip was started immediately after Mr. Blair's appearance before the committee.

Some of the more striking comments of those who would muddy the waters were: "It's a plan of the millionaires to cheat the people again." "Wall street wants to get another twenty year franchise." "Subways cannot be built without additional legislation." "This plan isn't as good as the 1918 scheme, and Mayor Thompson has the only plan."

But among those who really desire improvements there was a feeling that the committee has arrived at a point where promising negotiations can be started. A majority of the committee indorses the ideas upon which Mr. Insull and Mr. Blair agree. The only threatening feature in an encouraging prospect—in their opinion—is the uncertain attitude of Mayor Thompson and his organization.

If he is willing that there shall be action at once—he was not present at yesterday's meeting of the committee—there is good reason to believe something substantial and beneficial can be accomplished in the immediate future.

Points of Difference.

In addition to the above agreements, Mr. Blair has gone farther than Mr. Insull toward municipal ownership. The Surface Lines' president has a plan which he believes can be carried out without additional legislation, while the elevated head is inclined to think that additional legislation is necessary. This latter view is said to be that held by the mayor. Chairman Schwartz of the committee feels certain that action can be had now.

The principal point on which the views diverge relates to the securities which the city would give for the transit systems. Schwartz claims that certificates, under the utilities act, can be legally issued by the city. W. W. Gurley, general counsel for the Surface Lines, told the committee yesterday that, in his opinion, these certificates can be legally issued. Before accepting them he wanted a court to pass upon them and he thought the courts would approve of them.

Urges Consolidation.

As an introduction to his plan, Mr. Blair said:

"It is obvious that if the public of Chicago is to receive the kind of service to which it is entitled and if the railway properties are to be so operated that the maximum economic result will be attained, all the various types of local transportation utilities—surface lines, elevated railroads, and subways, if and when they are created—must be coördinated under a single operating management. The rapid transit lines must be developed so that the maximum capacity of the tracks will become available and be used as far as possible to relieve the surface lines from long haul traffic."

On his plan directly he said: "It gives the city substantial partnership in the management and operation of the properties and insures the ultimate municipal ownership of them within a reasonable time free from debt. The plan opens the way to immediate improvement of local transportation service in Chicago through the building of urgently needed municipally owned transportation subways in the downtown district, as well as other essential improvements in rapid transit and surface lines.

"The plan proposes joint operation of the railway facilities of Chicago by the city and the railway companies through a board of control consisting of seven members, three appointed by the city and four by the companies."

Companies to Get 7 Per Cent.

The companies are to be given 7 per cent above operating expense and all other income to become the property of the city. When half of the value has been amortized, which Mr. Blair estimated will be in about twenty years at the present rate of fare, the city will take over the properties and continue to amortize the remainder from the earnings. At all times the city pays interest only on all unamortized value and shall have the right at any time to buy the railways outright.

REOPENING OF KINZIE STATION BY "L" NOW ASKED

Announcement at Springfield yesterday that the Illinois commerce commission has given permission to the "L" lines to remove the station at Kinzie street, unused for the last six months, put "pep" in the campaign of twenty-six business firms in the vicinity of the station to force "L" lines to reopen it.

ALD. LINK.

Ald. Frank J. Link led a delegation of business men before the council local transportation committee on Thursday and the delegation's pleas caused the committee to recommend that the station be reopened at once.

"The announcement at Springfield comes as a surprise, but it will not stop our fight," Ald. Link said. "I will ask the council to approve the reopening order next Wednesday and will appear with the delegation and the order before the commerce commission the next day."

ORDERS DON'T SUIT JUDGE

The drafts of both the city and the surface lines of an interlocutory injunction against the 5 cent fare are unsatisfactory to Federal Judge Carpenter. The matter will be taken up again tomorrow.

Chester E. Cleveland Sr., special attorney for the city administration, said to the court that representatives of the company "could not keep faith." Judge Carpenter suggested that he refrain from "loose talk."

To the same court Cleveland and Jacob Legion Tenney, on behalf of himself and other car riders, protested that the surface lines has not kept posted in each car that transfers are a receipt for the 8 cent fare paid and that each passenger is entitled to obtain and retain a transfer.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

HOTEL BEN MOR, CITY'S LATEST, TO COST $4,500,000

Will Be Built at Sheridan and Wellington.

BY AL CHASE.

Last week we spoke of the brain strain architects undergo thinking up novelties in hotels and apartments for owners who appreciate the news value of the unusual. There's another prevalent cause of gray hairs among both hotel architects and owners and one you'd never suspect, it seems so simple. What to name the darned thing.

"How come?" you ask and smile and probably remark, "Rats," with all the nifty sounding names in English and other languages, that's easy." But you're wrong.

Weeks of Pondering.

For instance, Simeon Swenson, president and treasurer of the Morton Construction company and architect of Chicago's newest big hotel project, the magnificent $4,500,000 structure to be erected at the northwest corner of Sheridan road and Wellington street, and announced today for the first time, has been struggling for several weeks for an appropriate cognomen for it.

After many had been pondered over and thrown aside the name Hotel Ben Mor was selected. Before you interrupt to remark that it sounds more like a new cigar, the comment made by another real estate editor when he first heard it, we hasten to quote Mr. Swenson: "Benmore is the name of an imposing mountain in Ireland, and by an interesting coincidence is a combination of part of the names of two individuals interested in the project. Separating the syllables into two words, Ben Mor, and leaving off the final 'e,' makes a good name for a hotel."

You'll Agree It's a Pippin.

But whether or not we all rise and give three wild cheers for the name Ben Mor, we're sure everybody will agree that it's going to be a pippin of a hotel, judging from the pictures. Work will start April 1, according to Mr. Swenson, and it is expected the first section will be completed by Nov. 1.

There will be 800 rooms in suites of two, three, four, and five rooms, connected with a serving room and tiffin rooms. The most interesting feature of the whole hotel will be the roof, where it is planned to have five bungalows, which, of course, will have a wonderful outlook over the lake and Lincoln park.

O, That Smorgosbord!

There'll be the usual "rooms"—the Cascade rooms, for instance, will have an electric kitchen and serve the delicacies of the well known Swedish sexa, or "smorgosbord," according to Mr. Swenson. This room will form a unit with the "pink salon" and will command a view of the ballroom and dining room. The two lower floors will be at varying levels, so that picturesque vistas can be obtained from almost any viewpoint.

And last and by no means least, but which we nearly forget to mention, are the cocoanut palms. What is a 1922 hotel without honest injun palm trees right from Palm Beach? So there'll be a miniature cocoanut grove that'll make you think you're at the Royal Poinciana. It'll be in the entrance salon.

CLARK & TRAINER WIN LONG BATTLE OVER $25,000 FEE

A jury in Judge M. Slusser's court yesterday wound up a long and bitter legal argument over cash and character by deciding that Clark & Trainer are entitled to the full $25,000 commission on the sale of the Tower building in 1916, and that J. Milton Trainer's personal integrity is unassailable. E. Orris Hart of E. Orris Hart & Co. 1917, claiming half of the $25,000 commission.

J. MILTON TRAINER

The case ended in a spectacular fashion when Mr. Hart produced six witnesses to testify against Mr. Trainer's character. But only two testified—Charles Ringer and James Van Vlissingen. The other four — Frank Hoyne, E. S. Judd, John Lyle Vette, and Perkins B. Bass—refused.

On the other hand, Mr. Trainer, with only a short time to do it, produced thirteen character witnesses, among whom were Arthur Reynolds and John J. Abbott of the Continental and Commercial, James McNally, Edgar M. Snow, Fred Oliver, John F. Wallace, Charles Shedd, Ross C. Hall, Maj. Gen. Gilbert F. Woods, and W. J. Hollister. The verdict was in favor of Wallace G. Clark and Mr. Trainer, defendants. Francis W. Walker represented Mr. Hart, and Beverly W. Howe of Mills & Howe represented Clark & Trainer.

The Tower building was sold for $1,650,000, and Lee J. Lesser received $5,000 of the $30,000 commission. It was over the remaining $25,000 that the legal battle was waged.

Designer Publishing Co. Leases State Street Store

A. G. Spalding & Bros., occupying the entire five story building at 211-17 South State street, have leased to the Designer Publishing company, publisher of the Designer magazine and Standard apparel patterns, the south portion of the store floor, with a frontage of 16 feet and a depth of 90 feet, for an undisclosed rental, from Feb. 1, for a term of years. It is said by Warren A. Cahn, who made the deal, that prior to the closing of this lease an offer of $24,000 annual rental was refused by Spalding. The lessee will use the store exclusively for the display and sale of its patterns and kindred lines.

BILLIONS SAVED BY ZONING, SAYS IVAN O. ACKLEY

Expert Tells Benefits of Modern Method.

Ivan O. Ackley, former president of the Chicago Real Estate Board, a member of the firm of Ackley Bros., realtors, and one of Chicago's authorities on zoning, spoke to students of the Y. M. C. A. School of Commerce realty class on that subject on Tuesday. Part of the lecture is given below. Paul Loeber, of Paul Loeber & Co., will discuss "Real Estate Valuations" next Tuesday.

BY IVAN O. ACKLEY.

It is estimated that the effect of the zoning of Chicago will be to increase property values $1,000,000,000, or over 25 per cent. It is also believed that the unnecessary loss of property throughout the nation due to lack of zoning laws amounts to $500,000,000 annually.

IVAN O. ACKLEY.

City zoning is one of our newest municipal problems. Zoning may be termed the districting or segregating or classification of buildings. It has been in effect in Europe less than thirty years and it has been given attention in America for not more than twenty years.

Zoning Imposes Restrictions.

Zoning imposes a restriction on every piece of privately owned property within the scope of the zone. We used to say that the owner of a lot owned it from the center of the earth indefinitely upwards, but under zoning ordinances that is no longer true. We now concede that he has a right to do as he wills providing he doesn't infringe the equal liberty of every other man.

When Robinson Crusoe was alone on his island he was free and untrammeled in the exercise of his liberties until the man Friday came—then his rights were subjected also to the rights of his man Friday. Now the effect of the zoning law is that you are free to use your property, but you mustn't injure the property of your neighbor and he is likewise bound by the same restriction.

Sanest and Simplest Law.

Our zoning law passed by the last legislature is, I believe, the sanest and simplest law yet enacted. It confers on city councils and boards of trustees of villages the power to regulate the height and bulk of buildings, the intensity of the use of lot areas, to regulate and determine the area of open spaces within and surrounding such buildings, and to classify, regulate, and restrict the location of trades and industries, and to regulate the location of buildings for industry, business or residence purposes.

Under this law the city council has the power to divide the city into zones, but the council has no authority to change existing conditions; they have only power to regulate and control future developments. They cannot undo the mischief that already has been done.

I believe that when the zoning law is applied to our loop, where the values of real estate rest largely on the right of the owner to build high buildings, that we'll have a contest if the height of buildings is reduced.

Rand-McNally Issue New Map of Chicago, Suburbs

Both realtors and others should know when there's a new map of Chicago published, for it's a rare occurrence. Rand-McNally have just issued a new "Official Map of Chicago and Suburbs," drawn on a scale of two inches to the mile, 46x65 inches. In one corner, drawn on a larger scale, is an auxiliary map covering the section bounded by Halsted, Illinois, and 13th, giving practically all business blocks, warehouses, theaters, hotels, etc. This latter map also is published separately.

COMMUNITY LINKS TO BE WIPED OUT BY SUBDIVISION

What should develop, judging from the restrictions imposed and the zoning ordinance, into one of Evanston's finest subdivisions, will be opened today by Arthur Dunas & Co. It is the twenty acres formerly owned by the Evanston Golf club and now used as a community links, bounded on the north by the Wilmette line, Sheridan road, and the Ridge on the east, Evanston hospital on the south, and Asbury avenue on the west.

Isabella street will be cut through from Asbury avenue to Sheridan road. There will be lot frontages on Girard, Garrison, and Isabella streets, as well as Sheridan and Ridge. There will be no flats, only one family residences being allowed. Nothing may be built to cost less than $12,000 on the Ridge and Sheridan lots, and $8,000 on inside lots Lots will sell for $2,000 and upwards. All sales, however, will be subject to the community golf course lease, which runs until March, 1923, or fourteen months from date, according to Arthur L. Michel, manager of Arthur Dunas & Co. The sanitary district channel runs through the new subdivision.

$200,000 Apartments for Logan Square District

A forty-two apartment building with three, four, and five room flats, to cost $200,000, is to be built at the southwest corner of Spaulding and Schubert, 126x144, from plans by Ludgin & Leviton, for W. Leibovitz. It will be ready by August. The owner already has a seventy-two flat building adjacent, and the two structures will cover a block frontage

HOME BUYING BY FIELD STARTS A CO-OP CAMPAIGN

Broker Decides to Sell Along New Lines.

When Marshall Field bought himself a Gold Coast home and at the same time became an active participant in the coöp flat ownership movement, as reported on this page two weeks ago, he did more than he realized. Yesterday Daniel E. Mulvey of D. E. Mulvey & Co. announced that Mr. Field's purchase had led him to put into effect the idea of specializing in coöp flat selling, which he'd had in mind for months.

"We do nothing but sell real estate," said Mr. Mulvey. "We handle no renting and do no promoting—merely sell property. Every time I've heard of a coöp apartment project my plan to reorganize my selling system has grown larger. And then I read about Marshall Field, and decided if a man of his wealth found it a good idea to be a coöperative owner of an apartment, that was the best kind of an argument for my plan of selling coöp flats to the man in ordinary circumstances.

Going to Try to Sell All.

"Right now I've got about 200 flats of six rooms each, fifty of two rooms, and forty flats with three rooms, listed for sale. I'm going to try and sell them all to two or more buyers each.

"My plan will be, as a general thing to find two buyers for a property. For instance, if it's a $40,000 six flat building each will pay $10,000 and a $20,000 mortgage will be made. Then they will either remain the sole owners or at the end of a year, after they've learned what kind of people the tenants really are, they can sell the other four apartments and have a coöp ownership of six.

Figures 14 Per Cent Return.

"I figure that a 14 per cent return on the investment can be made as a general thing. Of course, there may be cases where it'll be even higher. I expect to confine my coöp business to from two to twelve apartments, specializing in sixes. I may sell larger ones on a coöperative basis, but I'm not going to push them. Sixes are the best size."

Mr. Mulvey started in the realty business in 1914 and now has four offices and sixty salesmen. The coöp plan was officially announced at a banquet the firm gave at the Morrison hotel on Wednesday evening.

December Building Gains.

December building contracts in the central west amounted to $43,985,000, as reported by the F. W. Dodge company, an increase of one per cent over November and an increase of 37 per cent over Dec-

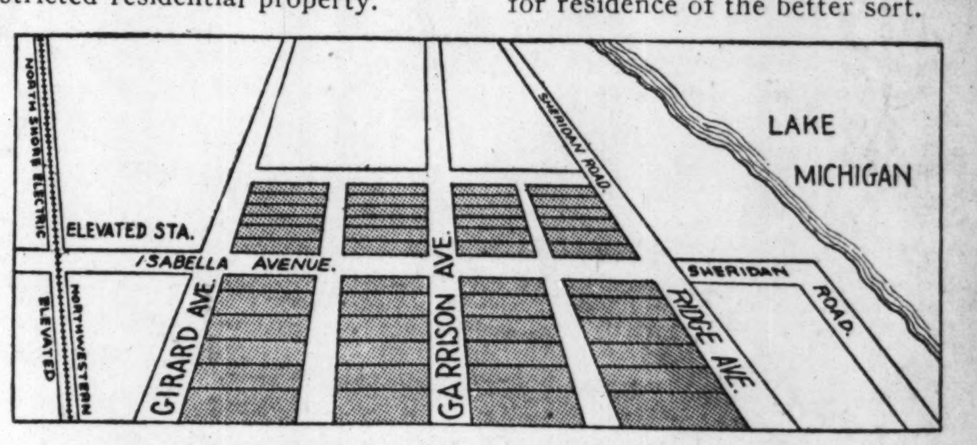
ARTHUR DUNAS—SHERIDAN ROAD SUBDIVISION
OLD EVANSTON GOLF LINKS

Desirable Property

This desirable subdivision is located in Evanston, one and one-half blocks west of the Lake, on the site of the Old Evanston Golf Club. It offers every advantage to a prospective home builder desiring restricted residential property.

Highly Restricted

It is bordered by very highly restricted property on the east, and an "L" station is situated on the tract. It is zoned according to the latest enforcements, and is in all ways a strictly first-class situation for residence of the better sort.



Terms

This property is to be sold at moderate prices—and at moderate terms. There will be no interest for a year. Reasonable monthly payments may be arranged, which is in itself unusual in property of such a high character.

Unique Location

A glance at the illustration will show the exact location of the subdivision. Its situation is unique owing to the fact of its close proximity to the Lake, to the "L," and to Sheridan Road, offering an unsurpassed location with adequate transportation.

Buy Now!

We believe that the present time offers unusual advantages for purchasing. The housing shortage will be succeeded by a building boom, probably in the Spring, and when that comes, prices are sure to ascend. We advise buying now.

Lot reservations can be made on and after Monday, January 16, and all are subject to prior sale.

CLUB WOMEN TO AID GIRL FOUND GUILTY AS 'LURE'

New Trial Is Granted by Judge McKinley.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES.

MRS. H. W. HARTOUGH. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Illinois clubwomen have interested themselves in the case of 19-year-old Helen McGinnis, 900 West Schiller street, "boulevard vamp," whose automobile ride with Martin Meltzer, 3607 Grenshaw street, to the forest preserve brought her a conviction on a charge carrying a penitentiary sentence of from one to ten years. Miss McGinnis yesterday was granted a new trial, Feb. 23, by Judge Michael L. McKinley on the plea of Attorney Clarence Darrow.

Man Often to Blame.

"We were interested in the case from the first," said Mrs. Helen Hartough, chairman of the social and industrial conditions committee of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, who appeared in court yesterday.

"The man is often to blame in these auto vamp cases. Miss McGinnis, in accepting Mr. Meltzer's invitation to go for a ride, only did just what she saw hundreds of other girls doing, often with their mother's approval.

"When the examination showed the girl had never been guilty of wrong relations with men, we determined more than ever to help her. It is time women's clubs stopped talking about doing girls' protective work and really began to help unfortunate girls."

Mrs. Edward S. Bailey, president of the Illinois federation, representing thousands of clubwomen throughout the state, expressed approval of the plan to "stand by Miss McGinnis."

"The platform upon which I was elected was 'girls' protective work.' I am glad we have this concrete opportunity to put that idea into practice. Many girls are foolish, ignorant, ill able to take care of themselves. That doesn't make them bad."

Asks About Man's Immunity.

When Judge McKinley granted the plea for a new trial he asked Assistant State's Attorney Edward Lyons why Meltzer had not been indicted on a charge of attempted rape.

Prosecutor Lyons declared his willingness to act if Miss McGinnis would file complaint against Meltzer.

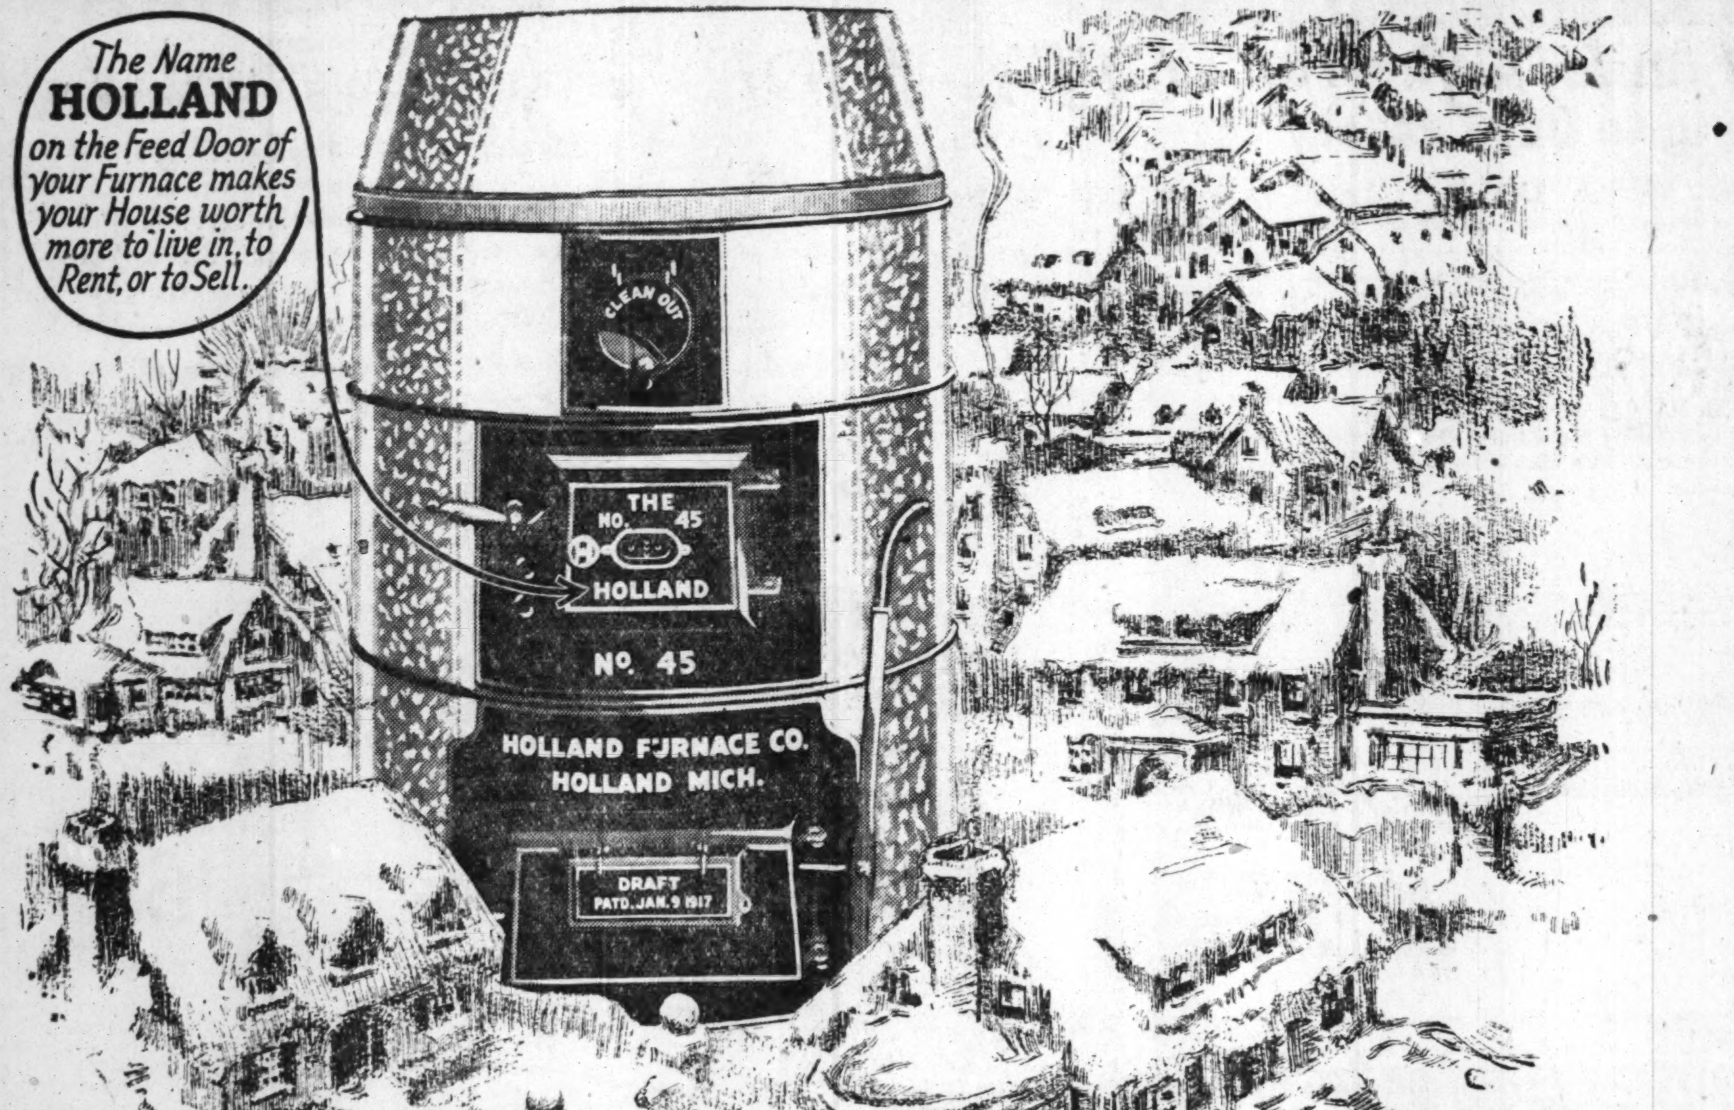
An Idea That Grew into 180,000 Comfortable Homes in Fifteen Years



The Name
HOLLAND
on the Feed Door of your Furnace makes your House worth more to live in, to Rent, or to Sell.
CLEAN OUT
THE No. 45 HOLLAND
No. 45
HOLLAND FURNACE CO. HOLLAND MICH.
DRAFT PATD. JAN. 9 1917

THE invention of the Holland Furnace was in itself a notable achievement.

But greater than this was the idea back of the company's method of doing business.

And, like most good ideas, this plan was very simple. We decided that we would guarantee not merely the furnace, but the heating service it would give in the home for which it was bought.

Nothing could be more elemental than that. A man buys a furnace for the comfort it can give to his home. And if it does not give him comfort and economy, nothing else counts.

We believed if we would only make certain that every Holland Furnace gave to its owner genuine comfort and economy, our business would grow just as fast as the news of such a service spread among home owners.

And so it proved. Today there are 180,000 Holland heated homes.

Two giant factories—one at Holland and one at Cedar Rapids—with 240 warehouses and direct factory branches are distributed among the six northern central states to which Holland service has been extended.

During 1921, despite the general business depression, Holland received 25% more business than for any previous year.

Such a record is a tribute the thoughtful man will not mistake.

For it simply proves again that the American people are always ready to accept genuine goodness wherever they find it—that if you make a better product and give a better service, the growth of your business is certain, whether times are good or bad—that the best policy and the best advertisement is a customer well served.

How the Idea was Put into Operation

In the first place, we knew that the comfort a furnace would give depended quite as much upon the way it was installed as upon the design and quality of the furnace itself.

The finest piano out of tune will not give harmony.

The finest furnace installed by someone who does not know how to do an expert job will not give the comfort it should, and it will be wasteful of fuel as well.

To successfully put in a furnace you are compelled to know the natural laws that control the proper circulation of air in a room, and the relation of one room to another as to location, exposure, size, etc.

These and a hundred other important requirements to good furnace installation must be studied scientifically. The man who directs the work must be trained, just as an engineer for any technical and important work must be trained.

A stove could be set up in a room by any man who could move it there, and the stove would work, because a stove does not circulate heat; it simply radiates it in the room it occupies, therefore crude and wasteful.

But when you place a furnace in the basement to circulate warm air evenly and freely to every room in the house from a minimum amount of coal, that is a different job which the novice cannot do.

These Two Facts Confronted Us:

First—No matter how conscientious the hardware dealer, tinsmith or plumber may be, he is rarely found with specialized training in the science of warm air heating.

Second—No man without such training can properly lay out and install a completely efficient and economical home heating system.

Confronted by these two facts, we decided that we could not delegate any part of our responsibility to someone else—that we must always install Holland furnaces with Holland trained men.

And therein lies the secret of the great Holland success—the secret of 180,000 homes comfortably heated at a saving of fuel, absence of repair expense, ease of firing and permanent durability.

These homes enjoy the cleanest, healthiest, cheapest and most comfortable heat in the world—warm, moist air, freely circulated throughout every room, without drafts, cold floors, cold corners or the uncomfortable differences of temperature that are so unhealthful and disagreeable in a poorly heated house.

A Specific Plan for Each Installation

Seldom are two houses exactly alike. A plan for one house will not fit another.

When you call a Holland man into your home, he will go over it from cellar to roof—will judge your chimney—measure and rate the volume of air for each room—make scientific adjustments according to exposures and locations—will designate the size and pitch of pipes for proper circulation—the size of furnace required—everything, in fact, to insure satisfactory and economical heating service.

This plan is checked, certified, and submitted for your approval. The Holland is then expertly installed by our own trained men.

Our job is not finished until the furnace is in operation to your entire satisfaction.

Then we complete the transaction with our Holland Service Bond. This Bond is a guarantee of permanent service and economy. It is a responsible assurance direct to you from the largest installers of furnaces in the world.

In other words, we do not merely guarantee the materials of the furnace itself, but the service it will give you—the comfort of your home.

Call a Holland Man to Advise You

Why risk the greatest element of comfort in the house, when you can have the unprejudiced advice of expert heating engineers?

Why put up with makeshift, wasteful and troublesome heating methods, when you can save money and enjoy real Holland comfort and satisfaction?

Let a Holland man inspect your home. We will gladly submit a plan and price without the least obligation on your part. You will find that we deal with you just as we would want you to deal with us. And we will make your home worth more to live in, to rent, or to sell.

This is the foundation upon which our business has been built and stands in these times when quality, experience and genuine sincerity are so necessary—when performance counts more than promise.

BADGERS DEFEAT MICHIGAN IN OVERTIME

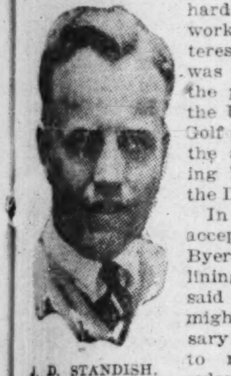
SCHOOLBOY SKATERS QUALIFY IN CITY-WIDE RACES

BYERS ELECTED BY U. S. G. A. AT BANNER SESSION

Harmony Crowds Out All Fireworks About Rules.

BY JOE DAVIS.

J. Frederic Byers of the Allegheny club of Pittsburgh, who for several years has been a hard and efficient worker in the interests of golf, was elevated to the presidency of the United States Golf association at the annual meeting last night at the Drake hotel.



J. D. STANDISH.

In his speech of acceptance Mr. Byers, after outlining his policies, said that while it might be necessary in some cases to make local rules, it will be the object of the national body to maintain clean and true the spirit of the game.

In concluding he said: "I do not believe that the golfers of this country are of the type of sportsmen who cannot accept the breaks of the game, who prefer to deprive it of its opportunities for applying the highest degree and greatest diversity of skill, or of those never ending uncertainties in which is its chief charms."

No Fireworks Over Rules.

The meeting was colorless as far as taking any action on the rules was concerned. The stymie, the ribbed club, penalties for out of bounds and lost balls, about which the general golfing public has been hearing, were not mentioned.

President Byers after the meeting stated that no action would be taken until after the annual meeting of the Western Golf association on Saturday, but he asserted that a greater spirit of harmony between the U. S. G. A. and the sectional organizations now prevailed, and that there was every indication that a solution of the differences of opinion on the rules was in sight.

Byers Heads Ticket.

The full ticket, to which there was no opposition, was as follows:

President—J. Frederic Byers, Allegheny Country club.

Vice presidents—Robert A. Gardner, Onwentsia club; Wynant D. Vanderpool, Morris County Golf club.

Secretary—Cornelius S. Lee, Tuxedo Golf club.

Treasurer—Edward S. Moore, National golf links.

Executive committee—Roger D. Lapham, San Francisco; John R. Lemist, Denver; James D. Standish Jr., Lochmoor; Alan D. Wilson, Merion; Thomas B. Paine, Atlanta; Azariah T. Buffinton, Fall River; Albert D. Locke, Brae Burn; Bonner Miller, St. Louis Amateur A. A.

Six sectional, state, or recognized golf associations are on the ticket as follows: Robert A. Gardner, Chicago district; Roger D. Lapham, California; John R. Lemist, Trans-Mississippi; James D. Standish, Michigan State; Azariah T. Buffinton, Inter-Collegiate Golf association; Bonner Miller, Missouri G. A.

Nominating committee, 1923—James F. Burke, Oakmont; David H. McAlpin II., National golf links; Walter L. Ross, Inverness; H. Chandler Egan, Waverly; William E. Stauffer, Audubon.

Sixty-Three New Clubs This Year.

The report of the executive committee showed a total membership of 533 clubs, of which 202 are active, and 331 allied. Twenty-four clubs were elected to active membership, and 39 to allied membership, making a total of 63 new clubs for the year. The highest number in any previous year was 17.

The executive committee this year will work out a plan for having membership in the association and in the Greens section covered by one fee.

Another matter of interest to players was the recommendation made by James D. Standish, chairman of the eligibility committee, that the plan of permitting a player to submit three certified scores be abolished. In future no player will be allowed to compete in the national amateur championship unless recommended by the association of which he is a member.

Field Must Be Trimmed.

While not wishing to discourage any one who has a chance from entering the championship, and while particularly desirous of encouraging young players, the committee feels that in justice to the best players the field must be reduced.

Dates for the national tournaments were announced as follows:

Amateur—Country club of Brookline, Mass., Sept. 4 to 9.

Open—Skokie club, Chicago, July 11 to 14.

Women's—Greenbrier Golf club, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Sept. 25 to 30.

The report of the tournament committee indicated that the preliminary qualifying round in the amateur championship at St. Louis, while relieving congestion, was not satisfactory, being a burden on the players and on the club holding the event. If the field this year can be reduced to under 100, the preliminary round at eighteen holes will be abolished.

If the field in the open event continues as large as in the two preceding years it probably will be necessary to extend the time of the tournament.

Greens Session Develops Interest.

The first annual session of the Greens committee, which began in the morning and continued in the afternoon, was largely attended and developed much interest. The keynote of the two sessions was reducing the cost of golf.

"STRIKES OUT"

BENJAMIN F. SHIBE.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 14.—[United Press.]—Benjamin F. Shibe, president of the Philadelphia American league baseball club, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Frank McFarland, here today at the age of 83 years.

Shibe, known as one of the "grand old men" of baseball, had been an invalid for several years. In 1920 he was injured in an automobile accident and never fully recovered.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

Question.

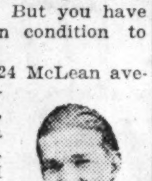
What do you think of basketball as a winter sport?

Where Asked.

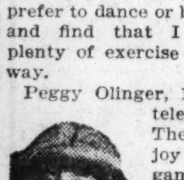
Michigan and Jackson boulevards.

The Answers.

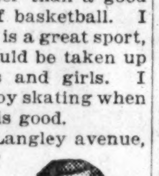
Harry Law, 3728 McLean avenue, chauffeur—I think basketball is a wonderful sport for the winter. You can enjoy the game by watching it, and it is a good exercise that promotes health. But you have to be in condition to play.



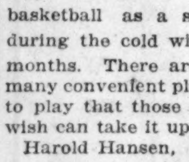
Elmer Bjurstrom, 4624 McLean avenue, chauffeur—Basketball is a rough sport, but I enjoy seeing a game once in a while. For my part, though, I prefer to dance or bowl, and find that I get plenty of exercise that way.



Peggy Olinger, 1617 Olive avenue, telephone operator—There is nothing I enjoy better than a good game of basketball. I think it is a great sport, and should be taken up by boys and girls. I also enjoy skating when the ice is good.



Thomas Ryan, 7106 Langley avenue, clerk—I am in favor of basketball as a sport during the cold winter months. There are so many convenient places to play that those who wish can take it up.



Harold Hansen, 1843 North Keystone avenue, chauffeur—I do not like basketball as a winter sport. The game is too rough and the exercise too violent. For an evening's pastime give me roller or ice skating.

DEMPSEY WOULD MEET GEORGES IN LONDON RING

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 14.—Jack Dempsey will meet Georges Carpentier in London, providing promoters for such a match would post "substantial guarantees," according to Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager.

"Dempsey is ready to meet Carpentier or any other contender for the title," Kearns said. "Jack is willing to have the bout staged in London or any place where conditions are favorable. These reports that Jack would retire from the ring after his next match are false. There is nothing to them at all."

SIX DISTRICTS HOLD SEMIFINALS OF ICE TOURNEY

Two Sections Postpone Events for Kids.

BY FRANK SCHREIBER.

Semi-final races in six of the eight districts in the city-wide ice skating tournament were run off yesterday despite adverse weather conditions. The three districts in which the events were postponed were Calumet and Drover. Over 1,200 kid skaters competed in the events, and the races brought out keen competition, although the ice was water coated and rough.

The semi-finals in the three districts that postponed events will be staged next Saturday, and the final meet will be held in Garfield park on Jan. 28.

Qualify for Schoolboy Team.

The schoolboy team which will meet teams from New York and Cleveland here next month will be selected after the final races at Garfield park. Among the skaters of last year's team who defeated New York, Pittsburgh, and Philadelphia teams who qualified yesterday were:

Leroy Maas, John Sweet, Melvin Larson, Leon Emmert, O'Neil Farrell, Eddie Murphy, Russell Gunderson, Fred Groth, Cornelius Ewert, and Jimmy Thomson.

Harold Storch, Senn High school skater, who was a leading winner in the inter-city meets last year, did not compete yesterday on account of illness, but Director E. C. Delaporte declared a place on the Chicago team would be reserved for him.

How the Teams Scored.

GEORGE THOMSON HEADS CLUB LIST FOR TRIB DERBY

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

With George Thomson, victor in the junior race of 1920, topping the list, full team entry of the Northwest Skating club—which will conduct the western championships today—was yester- received for the annual Silver Skates derbies of THE TRIBUNE. The Silver Skates races will be held over an eight lap course on the Humboldt park lagoon on Feb. 5.

GEORGE THOMSON.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Thompson is now considered one of the leading class A skaters in the country. He first broke into prominence while skating for Avondale playground, and won numerous prizes in schoolboy competition. He quickly graduated from the novice ranks and won so many races he was placed in Class A, a division for the fastest skaters.

Julian Steinmetz First Winner.

Like Julian Steinmetz of the Norwegian-American A. A., who won THE TRIBUNE'S first junior derby, Thomson is anxious to be the first double Silver Skates winner. Having a pair of the silver blades for the junior event, Thomson is bent on annexing the first place in the senior derby, the ambition of every skater in the middle west.

Although Thomson is a skater of no mean ability, there are other members of the Northwest team who are sure to make a strong bid for first, second, or third prizes. Harry Winterhoff, George Goodwin, George Bilek, Clyde Hubbell, and Ray Blomberg should be contenders.

The club has nominated Henry Weber, Robert Wieland, and Willard Winningstad for the one mile junior Silver Skates derby. Weber is quite a skater, and his friends expect him to be a strong contender.

Maude Stephenson Entered.

Miss Maude Stephenson will be the club's entry in the girls' senior Silver Skates derby. According to Chris M. Ihle, manager of the club's racing team and one of the hardest workers in the middle west in the promotion of amateur skating events, Miss Stephenson is skating better than ever this season, and he confidently expects her to be among the prize winers.

With two weeks remaining before nominations close for these derbies, and three weeks before the races are held, entries are being received in such large numbers that the record field of 588 in last year's tourney is expected to be surpassed. Indications are that the entry in the junior race will exceed nominations in any of the other three.

Four Derbies to Be Run.

Skaters should remember there are four silver skates derbies, a junior for boys, a senior for men and a junior and senior for girls. In the senior races, skaters who are 16 years and over can enter, while only those under 16 years can race as juniors.

No charge is necessary to enter any of the events. Those desiring to race are requested to clip the coupon appearing on the sports pages and mail it to THE TRIBUNE plant as instructed.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

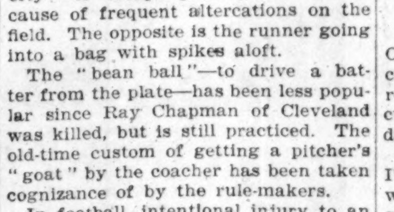
SPORTSMANSHIP IN BASEBALL VS. SPORTSMANSHIP IN FOOTBALL.

THE question has been put to us by a Helper, "Is better sportsmanship shown by players and spectators in football than in baseball?"

The answer, of course, must be a matter of personal opinion. If football were played everywhere as the coaches teach it in the Big Ten, we think the verdict would favor football so far as the players are concerned. Football crowds, too, are far more tolerant toward officials than baseball crowds. On the other hand, we think an opposing player who performs a spectacular feat gets more credit and applause from diamond fans than from gridiron followers because the latter are so intensely wedded to the cause of the home team.

There are several features of baseball, regarded as perfectly legitimate and part of the game, which never have appealed to us. One is cutting bases by a base runner if the umpire's back is turned and he thinks he can get away with it. Another is blocking a runner off the base by a catcher or baseman. It has to be done "cleverly" to escape penalty and is the cause of frequent altercations on the field. The opposite is the runner going into a bag with spikes aloft.



The "bean ball"—to drive a batter from the plate—has been less popular since Ray Chapman of Cleveland was killed, but is still practiced. The old-time custom of getting a pitcher's "goat" by the coacher has been taken cognizance of by the rule-makers.

In football, intentional injury to an opponent or putting him out of play by unnecessarily hard tackling were once prevalent. Neck-twisting, for which one Big Ten team was warned this fall, arm and leg twisting, are other gridiron breaches of sportsmanship which once were in vogue. We think the tendency is toward cleaner play.

The American people, as a whole, believe in fair play. The question then becomes with spectators how far a "trick" may go and still be called legitimate and part of the game. We think football crowds draw the line closer than baseball crowds. With the players, it depends on what they are taught.

Then There's the Prize Ring.

Let those who are inclined to regard ring followers as a bunch of "roughnecks" combat our opinion that a fight crowd will resent "dirty tactics" much quicker than either a football or baseball crowd, and that the ring code is more strictly drawn for the conduct of battlers in the arena than the code of any other sport.

* *

Pokerically Speaking.

So rapidly in recent years,
  Our lexicon has grown
That e'en the game of poker
  Boasts a language of its own.

You "crack" it when you open,
  And "boost" it when you raise.
They say you copped a "dry one"
  When no contestant stays.

If a hand contains three Monarchs,
  It is christened "Kankakee,"
And ladies full on J-boys
  Is a "picture gallery."

They call the lowly deuce a "duck,"
  An ace a "ball of fire";
A winning flush is "blue" or "pink"
  Or "green" as you desire.

"Cough up and feed the kitty"
  Is the order when you win,
And if you fail to ante,
  It is, "Decorate; kick in."

—Hoosier Pat.

All-Sapient Relatives.

In the state of Wisconsin is published a weekly bulletin giving the decisions of various commissioners. Under a ruling of the state board of health in the issue of Jan. 2, 1922, appears the following:

"Where both parents are dead and there is no guardian, a birth record may be filled by the attending physician, or by any near relative having full knowledge of the facts."

MEYERS TO MEET KILONIS ON MAT AT 2D REGIMENT

The middleweight championship wrestling match between Titleholder Johnny Meyers and John Kilonis, Greek challenger, yesterday was awarded to the 132d infantry, for which John "Doc" Krone is the promoter. The contest will be decided on Jan. 25, and the grapplers have agreed to wrestle fifteen rounds of ten minutes each to a decision.

REV. JOHN O'DONNELL.

The match will be held in the Second regiment armory, Madison and Rockwell streets, and arrangements will be made to accommodate 7,000 spectators.

According to Promoter Krone and Father O'Donnell, fighting chaplain of the infantry, elevated seats will be installed so that all holders of main floor seats can secure a good view of the match from any location. Extra rows of seats will be placed in the balcony.

Other Bidders Withdraw.

In all five bids were received, but some withdrew because they thought the intervening time too short to get out the necessary advertising. Others withdrew when it became known the proceeds will go to the soldier fund to purchase equipment for the regiment and care for the crippled veterans.

In securing the match Promoter Krone offered 50 per cent of the gross receipts, with a guarantee of $1,500. The guarantee, however, was embodied in the bid to assure the soldiers' organization it would not stand any loss if something unexpected should turn up to prevent the contest. Tickets will be placed on sale at 129 North Dearborn street and 153 North Clark street the middle of the week. Popular prices will prevail.

Weight to Be 160 Pounds.

According to articles signed by the grapplers, they must weigh 160 pounds at 3 o'clock. Both must be on the ground and in training three days before the contest. Each has posted a substantial forfeit to insure making weight and appearance.

Meyers will start active training tomorrow at the Arcade. Kilonis has been working in the east ever since the match was made. It will be the first show to be conducted under rules of the newly appointed city athletic commission.

Eustace to Wrestle Zyb.

Allen Eustace, the Kansas giant, who held Stanislaus Zbyszko to a furious two hour draw, probably will be the opponent selected to meet the world's champion in the main event of the wrestling show under auspices of De Molay lodge, Knights of Pythias, at the Coliseum Feb. 22.

The entertainment will be staged to raise funds for the home for aged Pythians and their children at Decatur, Ill.

Eustace, a 238 pounder standing 6 feet 4 inches, met Zbyszko at Grand Rapids, Mich., a few months ago and gave the Pole such rough handling that he was obliged to cancel several matches and rest up for two weeks. Zbyszko injured one of his legs trying to escape from a toelock.

The finals will be held on Feb. 10, at which time the winners of the several events in the sub-districts will compete for the supremacy of the district.

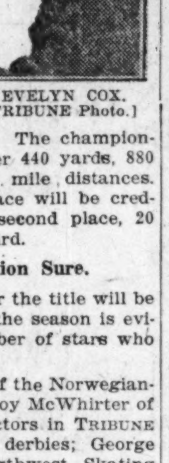
SPEEDY SKATERS RACE FOR TITLES IN EVENTS TODAY

Speed kings of the local skating world, experts who have won THE TRIBUNE Silver Skates Derbies and titles of various kinds, will compete in the western skating championships to be held in the Humboldt lagoon today under the auspices of the Northwest Skating club.



EVELYN COX. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Although four men's championship events will be held, a skater must take part in all races to win the individual western skating title. The championship races will be over 440 yards, 880 yards, mile and two mile distances. The victor in each race will be credited with 30 points; second place, 20 points, and 10 for third.

Keen Competition Sure.

That competition for the title will be about the keenest of the season is evidenced from the number of stars who will compete.

William Steinmetz of the Norwegian-American A. A. and Roy McWhirter of the Alverno A. A., victors in TRIBUNE senior silver skates derbies; George Thomson of the Northwest Skating club and Julian Steinmetz of the Norwegian club, winners of TRIBUNE junior silver skates derbies; Harry Kaskey, Fred Buendgen and Walter Witzke of the Alverno A. A.; Jack Stowell and Robert and Ed Reed of Logan Square A. C., and Gus Fetz, William Skirvans and Roy Schoeneman of the Opal A. A., are among some who will fight it out for the championship.

Girls in Two Events.

Miss Rose Johnson of the Northwest Skating club is looked upon as a certain winner of the women's championship. Vera Medenwald, who will race unattached, Evelyn Cox, Waters playground, and Jeanette Moe of Mozart playground are among other entrants of known ability who will skate for the title. Two events of a quarter and one mile will be held.

The races will start promptly at 1 o'clock and the derby will be conducted under the direction of Chris Ihle and C. L. Johnsen.

BANKERS' LEAGUE.

Harris Trust and Savings bank five won its third straight Bankers' league game by defeating Continental and Commercial, 24 to 14. Slight and Diehl, with three baskets apiece, featured for the winners. Lineup:

West secured twelve tricks.

A novice playing the declarer's hand would have been anxious to ruff his last spades in dummy as quickly as possible. Several millions of players would have seen in the club finesse the only hope for the contract.

The diamond suit in dummy was strong merely because it contained five cards, and the declarer was certain of success if neither opponent refused diamonds on the second round. A finesse should be the last resort when no other play is possible.

At trick nine, when the declarer threw the lead to dummy with the queen of trumps, one player cried with a tone of extreme pain, "Why, that is pulling two trumps for none!"—a serious crime in the world of bumblepuppy.

ANSWER TO QUERY

My dear Mr. Metcalf: Some time ago you published an article on the importance of deuces. Will you not be so kind as to repeat it, as it was of great value to your readers? I am one of a great number of bridge players who look eagerly for your column every Sunday.

Here is the article desired, which many others have requested. Cut it out and keep it:

The deuce, symbol of insignificance, byword of ages, too low even to be scorned, next to nothing at all—nevertheless of immense importance and usefulness in a greater variety of forms than any card except the ace.

A beginner looks at sevens, eights, and nines for information and does not notice lower cards at all, but when he is able to dispense with swaddling clothes he learns that the lumbering sevens, eights, and nines have little informative value, the really useful cards being deuces and treys—particularly deuces.

Below are given a few of the messages which the deuce carries to the partner of the player using them:

Against a no-trump declaration, an original lead of a deuce indicates that the leader has exactly four cards in the suit led and no suit of more than four.

When a deuce is led to partner's declared suit the leader has no more; and the partner knows every card held in that suit by the declarer.

When a player returns the deuce after winning the trick in his partner's suit he likewise shows no more, and the partner knows all of the declarer's cards in that suit.

When a trump has been declared and a high card led, the play of the deuce indicates either a singleton or more than two; with two cards in suit the partner would echo.

Against a no-trump declaration when the third player contributes a deuce to his partner's lead it shows an original holding of not more than three cards in that suit. Having more than three, the third player would play his third best and then play up.

When a player's first discard is the deuce the partner is asked to protect that suit if possible. The player of the deuce shows absolute weakness, as he cannot be starting an echo.

DEMPSEY BEATS DOWN FITZ WITH ATTACK TO BODY

THIS is one of a series of stories describing mythical fights between boxers who never met. Many arguments are caused by fans attempting to compare stars of the past with those who later achieved fame in the ring, and these stories are meant to convey what might have happened had such contests been possible when the contestants were in their prime.

The next story of an imaginary battle, between Tom Gibbons and Kid McCoy, which was to have appeared today, will appear next Sunday.

BY RAY PEARSON.

BOB FITZSIMMONS.

Tia Juana, Mexico, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Jack Dempsey is king of the heavyweights. He vanquished the wonderful Bob Fitzsimmons in a struggle which will go down in ring history as the greatest ever fought between heavyweights. No battle within the narrow confines of a twenty-four foot ring ever was as vicious; no two men ever stood the gruelling punishment that the Utah Mauler and the Cornishman suffered in the brief time of something like eleven and one-half minutes.

Dempsey won because he is a two handed slugger; because he outslugged Ruby Bob and battered him to the canvas in that fourth round. But as the referee stood counting over the fallen Fitz, his conqueror stood reeling and holding the ropes with one hand. Fitz was done, but Dempsey, the man who had survived this contest of gameness and punishment, little resembled a champion.

One Has to Crash.

Never before in any ring have two men been battered as were both Dempsey and Fitzsimmons in four rounds. They did not box, they fought from the first clang of the gong, and they stood toe to toe in the center of the ring punching for all that was in them when nature took a hand. One or the other had to fall, and that one was Fitz.

One may picture Dempsey the conqueror as he was led from the ring, a towel covering a face which wasn't pleasant to see. It was a face that had been punched until the two eyes were nearly closed. Both lips were bruised raw and one had been split by a terrific left hand shot. The nose was puffed and bleeding. Those were the marks which showed the unerring aim of the clever Fitz. They were marks that gave certain evidence that Ruby Bob had outscored the Utah Mauler.

Worn Down by Body Blows.

Then came Fitz crawling wearily through the ropes and wending his way to the dressing room. Fitz, the loser, had one eye closed and a nose which showed that it often had been visited by Dempsey fists. But there was a reason why Fitz did not carry the battered face that Dempsey bore out of the ring.

Dempsey for the greater part of the battle ripped his powerful left and right hand punches to Fitz's body, and these swats left their impression in red bruises. It was this body punching that hurt Fitz, that slowly sapped his strength and "dressed him" for the blow to the chin which separated him from his thoughts and meant defeat.

The thousands around the ring, pitched within the inclosure of the Tia Juana racetrack, figured Fitz an easy winner after the first session. They watched Fitz cleverly step around Dempsey, shifting here and there and shooting stinging lefts to Jack's face, punches which Dempsey seemed unable to block. In that first round it looked as if Fitz was a 100 to 1 shot to defeat Utah Jack. Fitz did not try his famous solar plexis punch, because Dempsey effected a crouch which kept his body well protected.

Starts Swaying Attack on Midriff.

The battle of punishment started when the gong called them to action in the second round. Dempsey came flying out of his corner, swaying from one side to the other, and before Fitz could set for the attack Jack shot left and right to the body.

These rib crunching wallops stung Fitz and he quickly fell into a clinch to stop the bombardment. Then just as quickly as the referee broke them, Dempsey returned to the attack, and this time was met with a left hook which split his lip. But that did not stop the enraged Dempsey, who took more punches to get inside, and there ripped a brace of lefts and rights to Fitz's body with damaging effect.

Dempsey's blows carried greater force than those of Fitz, but Fitz fought back gamely and rocked Jack with a right to the head as the gong ended a session replete with slugging.

A Round for Ring History.

No greater round than the third have ringsiders ever witnessed. They saw Fitz reeling and wobbly, and they saw Dempsey with sagging knees and dazed eyes, battling there in the center of the ring. That either was able to withstand the punishment without tottering to the canvas was amazing. Yet Jack and Fitz stood to the task and never once halted. The bell found them slugging with all the power they could put into their punches, while the frenzied crowd yelled for a knockout.

Both of Dempsey's eyes showed signs of closing, and one of Fitz's was in the same condition when they staggered to their corners.

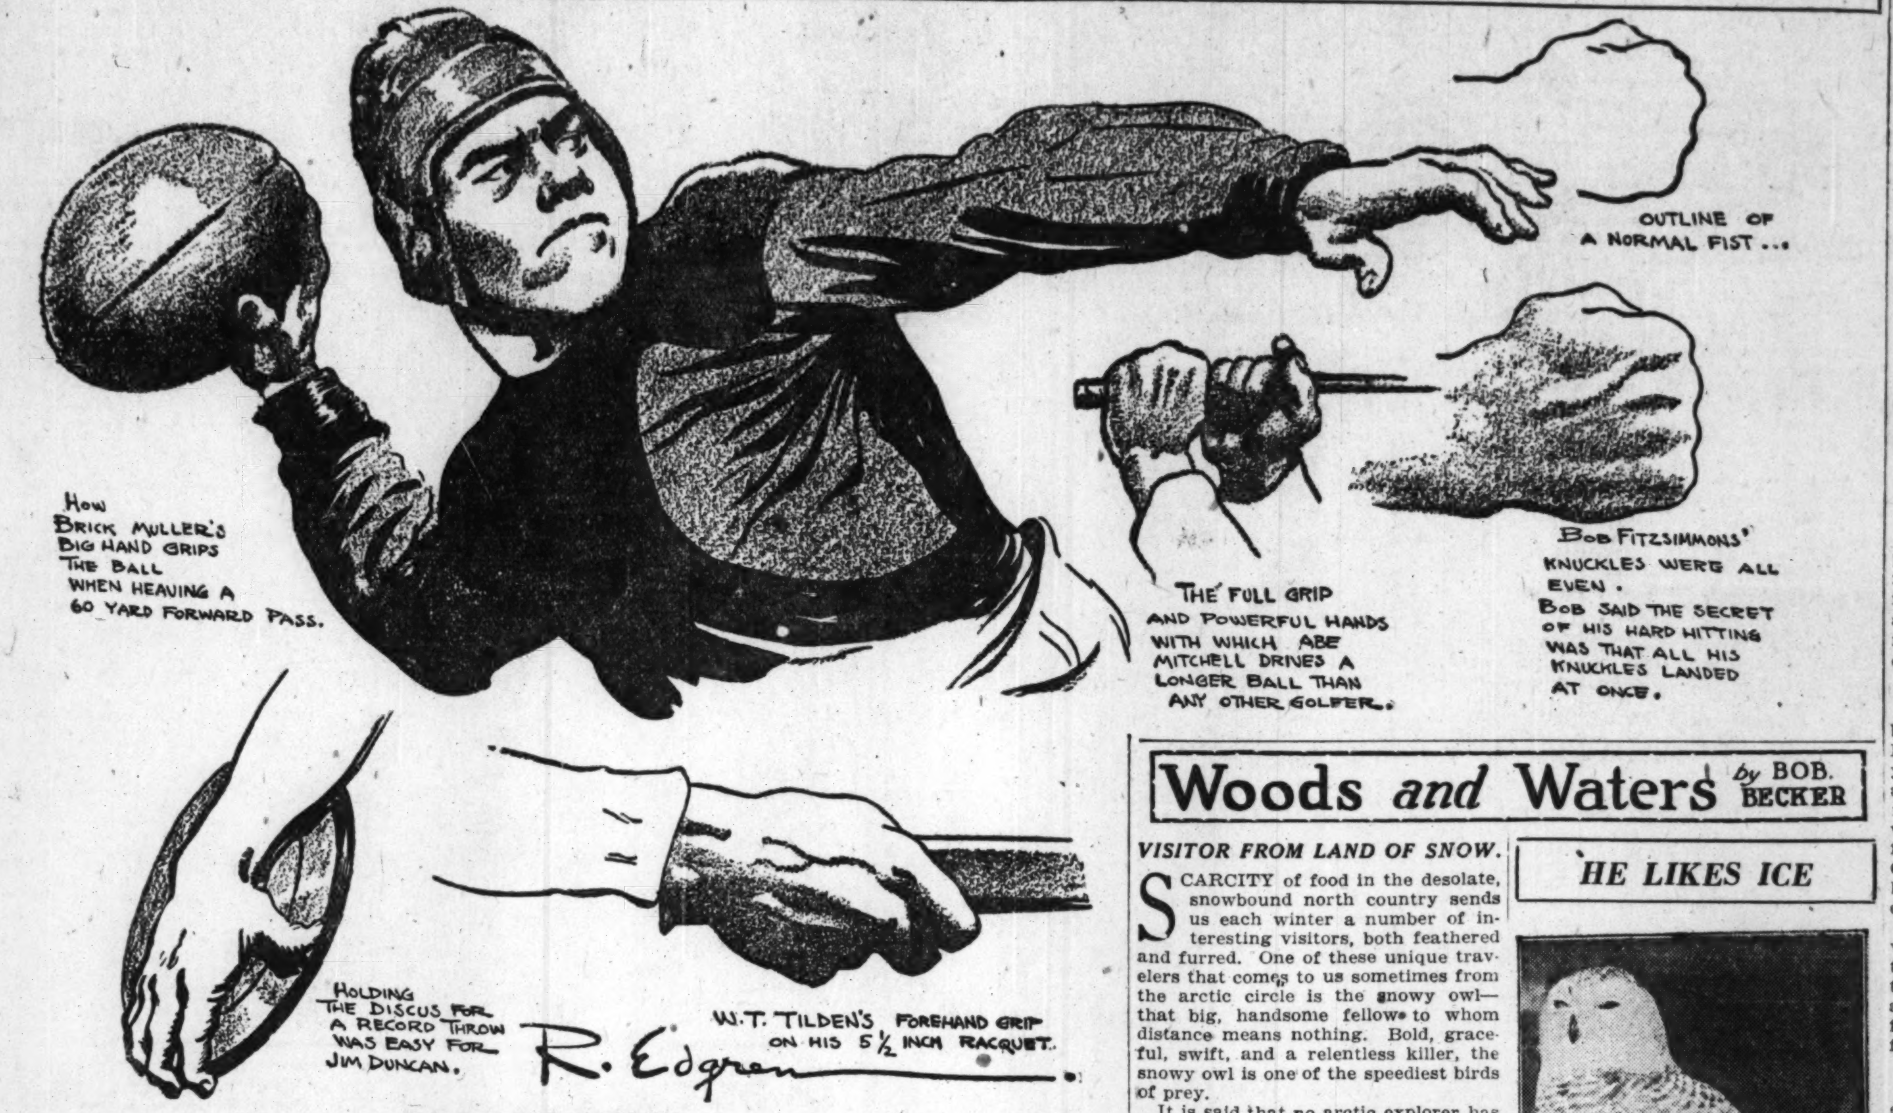
Then came the fourth round and the finish. The minute's rest seemed to do Dempsey more good than Fitz, and once more he came out of his corner on the jump. Once more, shifting and swaying, he collided with Fitz near the latter's own corner. But Fitz was ready and shot a solid left to Jack's nose. But Dempsey would not be denied and crowded in close, forcing Fitz against the ropes. There he battered him with left and right and right hooks to the body.

Then Comes the Finish.

These punches weakened Fitz and he clinched to save himself. Breaking from the clinch, Fitz shot a right to Dempsey's jaw. Jack was wobbly but still fighting and crowded in once more as his manager, Jack Kearns, shouted: "Get inside and finish him."

Dempsey didn't need that admonition. His left crashed into Fitz's body, and then over went the right for the midsection. Fitz sought to step back, but there was no escape, and this time Jack shot a left to the head and followed it with a right to the jaw. The game Cornishman's hands dropped and he fell to the canvas, where the referee counted him out.

BIG HANDS HELP ATHLETES



How Brick Muller's big hand grips the ball when heaving a 60 yard forward pass.
Outline of a normal fist...
The full grip and powerful hands with which Abe Mitchell drives a longer ball than any other golfer.
Bob Fitzsimmons' knuckles were all even. Bob said the secret of his hard hitting was that all his knuckles landed at once.

R. Edgren

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

HANDS have a great deal to do with success in sports. The billiard player's hands have to be extremely supple yet firm. Willie Hoppe sacrificed his interest in many other sports to save his hands and keep them in condition for billiard play. He likes baseball, boxing, and other sports, but for years has been forced to content himself with looking on.

Schaefer's hands are as delicate as Hoppe's, and since he began playing billiards as a small boy he has taken care of them. If Schaefer could do whatever he wanted to, aside from playing billiards, he would choose handball as his favorite sport. But he doesn't dare to. Hitting a hard or even a soft ball would ruin his hands and keep him out of a fortune. He can't even play tennis or golf, except very rarely, because he would develop muscles that would work against his delicacy of touch.

But for nearly all athletes a pair of big, strong hands is a winning asset.

Grid Star Has Big Hands.

Brick Muller is famous as a football end and for his ability to make forward passes of more than sixty yards, handling the football very much as if it were a baseball, throwing low and straight. Muller is 6 feet tall, strongly built, and has such huge hands that he can fairly wrap his fingers around a football. That is part of the secret of his speed and accuracy in delivery.

Jim Duncan, world's record holder for the discus throw, who earned a lieutenant's commission at the front during the war and is now in France, has the biggest hands I ever saw on an amateur athlete. His little finger is as thick and strong as an ordinary man's thumb. His palm is broad and thick and bunched with muscles. His fingers are long. The discus never slips from his grip, although he gets the record distance with a tremendous whip and gives a speeding whirl to the missile with a tug of the fingers.

Julian Elliott, who weighed 145 pounds and put the sixteen pound shot over forty-five feet, spent years developing his hands, acquiring bunched muscles of thumb and fingers that gave him a great "flip" as the shot left his finger tips.

A Terrible Knockout.

Tom Carroll, greatest of all professional weight throwers, has a hand that measures just six inches across the knuckles. As an ordinary big man's hand measures only three and one-half inches, it can be seen that Carroll has a powerful engine to give the final impetus to any weight he throws.

John L. Sullivan had thick hands, wide across the knuckles, and with very heavy wrists; Jeffries had thick wrists, but his hands were not large in proportion to the rest of his physique.

Bob Fitzsimmons had very big hands and very small feet. He wore a No. 6 shoe. There was a peculiar thing about Fitzsimmons' hands that I have never seen in any other fighter's maulies. When his fist was closed the knuckles formed a straight line. Usually the knuckle of the second finger stands out farthest, and the third knuckle nearly as far.

Natural Fist Formation.

When I first noticed this I thought Fitzsimmons' knuckles had been battered back by much hitting, although this was before Fitz began breaking his hands; but if he told me they always were level. He thought this had something to do with his great hitting power, as the blows were landed with all four knuckles.

Young Corbett had hands like John L. Sullivan's, and he could hit. The only great fighter I can remember who had really small hands was Jimmy Britt.

Dempsey has large, thick hands which he developed by working in mines, lumbering, and road building when a boy.

Of the football players, Eddie Hart of Princeton had one of the largest and the strongest pairs of hands. If he ever reached a runner, there was no wriggling out of his grip, because he could hold any man if he only got a bit of the jersey between his thumb and finger. Shaking hands with Eddie is like putting your fingers into a vise.

Fists Like a Net.

Hans Wagner, famous Pirate ball player for many years, had a huge pair of hands. He was one of the greatest shortstops that ever lived. When he spread his big hand in front of a speeding ball it was all off. He never missed. It was like knocking the ball into a net.

Having a pair of big hands is a great help to a golfer. Abe Mitchell, the English player, has huge hands, and he takes a full grip on the club with both of them.

W. T. Tilden, world's tennis champion, wears an 8½ glove. Tilden is over 6 feet tall, but his hands are large in proportion. He uses a heavy racquet with a handle measuring five and a half inches around the grip. The average grip is about four and five-eighths inches. Norman Brookes of Australia uses a racquet weighing only 13 ounces, with a four and a half inch grip.

Advantage to Swimmers.

A big hand is an advantage in swimming. It is like using a big paddle in driving a canoe. Norman Ross and Duke Kahanamoku, two of the world's best known swimming champions, have large, broad hands. I've noticed that many of the Hawaiian swimmers, although always trimly built, have large, wide hands and feet.

Of the wrestlers, nearly all have large hands and small heads. The large hands are good for taking grips, and the small heads are useful in slipping out.

One of the most useful pairs of hands I've seen on an athlete lately belong to Joe Ruddy of the New York Athletic club. Being a crack swimmer, water polo player, handball player, boxer, wrestler, and bowler, Ruddy has developed a pair of hands that are simply phenomenal for mass and power.

Babe Ruth Must Serve His Suspension; No Rule Change to Help Big Slugger Out

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Mr. George ("Babe") Ruth, breaker of rules and records, mustn't believe all he sees in the public prints. Recently much has been written about an alleged plan of the majors to alter the anti-exhibition clause so that the mighty "Bambino" might perform before May 20, but he hasn't a chance. The rule is in the books for keeps—at least until after Ruth and his co-barnstormers have done their time.

Reports covering Ruth's status have had it that the magnates in their recent joint session at New York brought up the rule violated by the home run manufacturer, and voted to change it so that it restricted pennant winning teams from taking their titles on barnstorming jaunts. The present code prohibits the individual player, as well as his team, from collecting exhibition dough.

No Change in Rule.

What the magnates actually did when assembled was to let the rule alone. What happened was that Charles Ebbets, president of the Brooklyn club, made a motion to amend. He suggested the ban be retained against title teams as a whole and that the cases of individual athletes who might want to hike through the sticks after participating in a world series be handled solely by the club reserving their services. Under such a plan, Ruth and his pals could have made their jaunt without interference had the New York owners consented.

Ebbets made no progress with his scheme, principally because most of the owners are satisfied the rule is a necessity. Following the proposal of the Robins' president, another owner suggested that Commissioner Landis air his views. The latter gave his audience the impression that it might be well to let the rule alone at this time.

Must Serve Suspension.

This was taken as a hint that "Babe" will have to serve his suspension, regardless of what the commissioner's personal opinion of the rule may be. When Landis finished his little piece Ebbets' scheme was forgotten.

The barnstorming rule dates back to the winter of 1911. That fall, after knocking the Giants for a goal in the world series, the Athletics went on a jaunt to Cuba. The champions were out for a good time, so they took life easy, and the result was that the Cuban teams trimmed them consistently. Immediately the Cubans spoke of themselves as world champions. This did not add to the dignity of the national pastime, so when the magnates gathered in December they put such expeditions under the ban.

MILAN NEW MANAGER OF WASHINGTON CLUB, GRIFFITH ANNOUNCES

He succeeds George McBride, who resigned last month due to illness resulting from an injury received on the field last season.

Milan will be the fourth playing manager in the major leagues this year, the others being Ty Cobb of Detroit, Tris Speaker of Cleveland, and Bill Killefer of the Chicago Nationals.

Winning one event and tying for first place in the other, E. C. Buchan carried off the honors in the weekly shoot of the Lincoln Park Gun club yesterday. Buchan registered perfect scores in the 25 and 50 bird events. After completing his second string he broke 130 targets straight before he missed. Leading scores:

50 targets, 16 yards—E. C. Buchan, 50; C. W. Irrgang, 47; Dr. F. W. Belknap, 44; C. Unrath, 44; T. Ross, 44; W. D. Stannard, 43; W. Johnson, 34.

HARRY BOAKES BEATS NEW YORK RACQUET EXPERT

Harry Boakes Jr., racquets professional of the University club, defeated Jim Mullins of the Tuxedo Racquets and Tennis club of New York yesterday at the local club, three out of four games. The scores were 15—10, 15—6, 14—18, and 15—3.

The local expert won by strong service, combined with a powerful back hand stroke. Mullins was off form in serving, and did not place his returns as accurately as in previous matches with Boakes. It was only in the third game that the easterner showed his real form, when he forced the game to 13 points all and then garnered the next five markers.

For the first time in the history of the club women were permitted to attend the match and a large gallery was on hand. It was announced that Jock Sutor of Philadelphia will meet Boakes early next month at the University club.

Woods and Waters by BOB. BECKER

VISITOR FROM LAND OF SNOW.

SCARCITY of food in the desolate, snowbound north country sends us each winter a number of interesting visitors, both feathered and furred. One of these unique travelers that comes to us sometimes from the arctic circle is the snowy owl—that big, handsome fellow to whom distance means nothing. Bold, graceful, swift, and a relentless killer, the snowy owl is one of the speediest birds of prey.

It is said that no arctic explorer has ever gone too far north to find the snowy owl. Here is one bird that apparently is not worried by extremely low temperatures, as long as there is food in sight. The snowy owl is able to withstand most intense cold, as nature has equipped it with a thick coat of white and brown feathers, marked so that the bird blends perfectly with its winter surroundings.

When at home, hares, ptarmigans, lemmings and water fowl are the snowy owl's main dependence. Sounds like an aristocratic diet for a bird, as both hares and ptarmigans are considered good eating.

We are interested in this bird, because not infrequently stragglers are driven down into the middle western states by the lack of food in their natural habitat, and ghostlike we see these beautiful white owls flying about, striking terror into the hearts of our winter [illegible]. Furred and feathered folk alike have a reason to be terrified by this big, white fellow with the yellow eyes. When a bird is so swift that it can capture ducks and other water fowl on the wing, and so powerful that it can seize and lift arctic hares twice its own weight, what chance has an ordinary bird or mammal?

During the winter one of these birds may appear at a most unexpected place. For instance, in the winter of 1920-'21 one of these owls was shot on the lake shore at the southern end of Grant park, Chicago—a rather unusual place for such an owl to choose as its winter home, but he acted as if he were entirely accustomed to suburban trains and the city lights.

But even more unusual was the food that this owl was living on. Examination showed that it was feeding on common rats—the inhabitants of the rubbish heaps along the lake front.

A giant specimen of the snowy owl was found in northern Wisconsin the other day. He apparently was exploring the Badger state lakes all alone, when farmers captured him and brought him down to Chicago. Zero weather doesn't worry him, and he has little fear of freezing his toes, for he wears "galoshes" of the [illegible] buckle variety.

HE LIKES ICE

THIS snowy owl, an irregular visitant to the middle west, calls the arctic region his home. You'll notice he wears his "galoshes," even in northern Wisconsin. He had 'em on when he came into Chicago the other day from the Badger state.

"KID HARRY" GILMORE BOXES THREE ROUNDS

Harry Gilmore Sr., veteran boxer and instructor, yesterday celebrated the thirty-fifth anniversary of his championship fight with Jack McAuliffe for the lightweight title, by boxing three rounds with Teddy Murphy before a capacity crowd at the Arcade gymnasium.

The old gladiator was introduced by Manager "Kid" Howard as one of the greatest exponents of the manly art of self-defense this country has ever known. Before starting to box, Gilmore related a few incidents of his great fight with McAuliffe. Gilmore was beaten by McAuliffe in the twenty-eighth round.

In boxing Murphy, the veteran gave several exhibitions of his famous one, two punch, while his blocking and leading were pleasing to watch. At the end of three two minute sessions, Gilmore showed no bad effects of the workout, despite his advanced age of 68 years. At the end of the bout Gilmore was presented with a beautiful loving cup by Manager Howard.

Pal Moore, local bantamweight who won two fights in the south last week, will resume training at the Arcade tomorrow for his ten round bout with Earl McArthur at Sioux City, Ia., on Jan. 27.

PLAY INDOOR FOR BENEFIT

Following is the schedule:

Murleys and St. Alphonsus, Belle Plaines and Ardmores at St. Alphonsus hall.
St. Patricks and Rexos at C. H. I. gym.

CULVER BEATS MARSHALL HIGH

Culver, Ind., Jan. 14.—Culver Military academy took a basketball game from Marshall High of Chicago, 18 to 9, today. McIlwraith, the Culver center, stood out for individual play, with six baskets.

N. D. FROSH, 21; L. FOREST, 19.

Notre Dame freshmen defeated Lake Forest academy yesterday, 21 to 19, in a hotly contested basketball game on the losers' floor. Kiser's shooting was the winning factor for the freshmen, who showed much aggressiveness.

ELGIN COLLEGE FIVE WINS.

Elgin, Ill., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Elgin college defeated Wheaton college five, 24 to 12, in a fast game here.

UPSETS RESULT IN TRIBUNE CUP SHOOT

The city championship rifle tournament for individual and team medals and a leg on THE TRIBUNE trophy, furnished several upsets last week. J. Colston of the Edison team, top man in aggregate scoring, who had dropped only two points in six previous matches, dropped four in one night and tobogganed from first into a tie for fourth.

T. G. Lively dropped one point and went to first with a one point lead. Between first and seventh there is a gap of only three points.

Nine Perfect Scores.

The record of nine perfect scores was equaled when nine men turned in "possibles" and twelve lost singles. Those to break into the perfect class for the first time are E. D. Sulcer, E. W. Grover, and U. Davis. One man, W. C. Kaiser of the Chicago team, contributed his fourth successive match "possible."

COLLEGE ATHLETES IN I. A. C. MEET JAN. 27

CHARLES MAYSER.

With entries expected from Notre Dame, Ames, Northwestern, and Chicago, not to mention the many athletic clubs in around Chicago, the Illinois A. C. will conduct its fifth annual indoor handicap track and field games in the Broadway armory on Jan 27.

It will be the first indoor track and field event of the season, and college coaches will take advantage of the opportunity to try out a number of performers in the dashes, hurdles, and field events. In addition to the open and high school events there will be races for junior members of the tricolor club.

Two Mile Relay Feature.

One of the features of the meet will be the two mile college relay for the President Hitt perpetual trophy. Last year Ames and Notre Dame met in an interesting race, but the Hawkeye runners, who afterward set a new world's outdoor record, were too fleet for the Hoosiers. Athletic Director Charley Mayser undoubtedly will send his quartet to the games to win another leg on the trophy.

High school performers will take advantage of the meet to get in shape for the many indoor meets planned for the prep performers. There will be a 70 yard dash and 1⅞ mile relay for high schools and a 1⅞ mile relay for academies.

Twenty-six Events.

Twenty-six events will be held and entries close on Jan. 20 with Charles A. Dean, chairman of the I. A. C. athletic committee, 112 South Michigan avenue.

JAKE SCHAEFER TO PLAY CONTI HERE THIS WEEK

Jake Schaefer, who wrested the world's balk line championship from Willie Hoppe last year, will make his first local appearance since winning the title, on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday at Mussey's Madison street room. He will oppose Roger Conti, the French champion, playing afternoon at 3 and nights at 8 o'clock in 400 point blocks.

Schaefer and Conti, who have been playing the east, have had some great matches, averages of around 50 being commonplace. Conti after getting familiar with the conditions over here, is playing better than ever.

Following is the standing in the Chicago Billiard league race:

	Won.	Lost.	High run.	Best game.
Kieckhefer [60]	1	0	9	65
Le Gros [50]	6	2	9	51

WHEAT MARKET ERRATIC; CLOSES FIRM ON RALLY

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

While the wheat market averaged lower the fluctuations were erratic. Toward the last week-end evening up and short covering made a strong rally, with the close ⅜c lower on May and ¼c higher on the July. Corn was heavy throughout the day and ⅜c lower at the last, while oats were unchanged to ⅛c lower and rye ⅝c lower.

Grain values seem to be gradually working lower, as the result of economic and financial developments in Europe and the slow speculative demand. The range of wheat prices for the week was fairly large, with the finish at net losses of 1⅜@1⅝c. Corn was off ¾@⅞c; oats, ⅛@¾c, and rye, 1⅝c for the week. Provisions were strong and closed with lard up 17½@20c and short ribs 32½@35c.

Foreign Breaks Start Selling.

Action of the wheat market served to emphasize how easily it becomes overbought or oversold. A break of 1½d in Liverpool and 1c in Buenos Ayres started local traders to selling early, and prices declined around 1@1⅛c, support being lacking on the way down. Under $1.11 there was buying of May by commission houses on resting orders, and a rally on short covering and week-end evening up carried prices up to around the previous day's finish.

Local sentiment, in the main, is bearish, and unfavorable crop reports from France and other European countries were ignored, as were the reports that a cargo of Argentine wheat was offered c. i. f. the gulf at $1.20 per bu. The latter, however, was without the duty. Dry weather continues in the southwest, and the forecast held out no hope of precipitation over Sunday. This was responsible for buying of July and the relative strength in that delivey.

Export demand is slow. Purchases of domestic and Canadian spring wheat for seed purposes are expected to be made Monday, but with that exception no business was claimed. Milling demand was less active and premiums at Minneapolis a trifle easier. Country offerings are limited.

Corn Under Cash Pressure.

Corn was under a little pressure from cash houses and the pit element and declined easily and closed about the bottom, failing to show the rallying power of wheat and oats. Trade was almost entirely of a local character. Outside markets continue to outbid Chicago for cash corn and the purchases are hedged here.

While foreign corn markets are firm, the export demand was not as brisk as of late. The trade looks for a fair increase in the visible supply Monday.

There is a tendency to buy oats on all declines, and fresh hedging sales are small, and that market showed relatively more strength than other grains, closing practically unchanged. Domestic shipping demand is holding up well, and the trade expect a fair decrease in the visible supply Monday.

Rye was influenced by the action of wheat and ranged lower. Outside interest is limited.

Provisions Market Heavy.

Expectations of large receipts of hogs this next week and lower prices at the yards brought in commission house selling of provisions and the market showed a heavy undertone, closing with net losses of 10c on lard and 12½c on short ribs. Cash demand was fair. Prices follow:

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

Sentiment of the grain trade was largely bearish at the close, despite the fact that there was a liberal absorption of the offerings for both May and July by eastern commission houses, who are said to be the largest holders. The strongest local interest is disposed to be bearish on wheat and friendly to the buying side of corn and oats. The general impression of the trade is that it would be difficult to hold the coarse grains should wheat prices break.

The trade is looking for a decrease in the visible supply of wheat and an increase in corn for the week. Chicago wheat stocks should show a good decrease. The primary movement of corn for the week increased heavily and exceeded last year's, and there was also an increase in oats for the week, due largely to the movement of interior elevators.

The late bulge in wheat was largely due to covering by Joseph Schreiner, who was shot May and July, particularly the latter.

Flour output of Chicago's mills in 1921 aggregated 820,000 brls, compared with 955,000 brls in 1920 and 1,272,000 brls in 1919.

Minneapolis has received 35,600,000 bu spring wheat, 5,900,000 bu durum, and 3,800,000 bu winter wheat so far this season, says Todd W. Lewis. "At Duluth receipts of spring wheat aggregate 8,770,000 bu, durum 26,800,000 bu, and winter 3,500,000 bu, a total for the two markets of 80,370,000 bu."

There is a feeling among wheat traders who are bearish that it would be the best thing for the benefit of the market in the long run to have prices decline to 80c, which would be a pre-war level. Deflation to that level, it is argued, would place the market in a better position and give operators more confidence in price stability and possibly increase consumption.

Joseph Schreiner, one of the most active traders, leaves today for a two months' trip to South America. Peru will be his first stop.

Unfavorable crop reports are coming from Europe. Drought prevails in parts of France, northern Italy, and Roumania, and winter wheat is said to have been damaged in France. In southern Italy excessive rains have fallen. The Roumanian wheat acreage has been heavily reduced.

It is understood that the American relief administration will buy No. 1 Manitoba and No. 1 northern spring wheat for seed for Russia on Monday. The Grain corporation will consider offers of corn for Russian relief on Wednesday.

A rather bearish view of the corn situation is taken by J. F. Jackson, with Pynchon & Co. With such a superabundance of grain he believes that the unusually wide difference between the price of hogs and corn will have little bearing on the latter.

"Very little corn has been moved from Illinois farms at present prices," says the Illinois semi-monthly crop report. "Apparently many would sell if 40c should be reached. No damage to the winter wheat crop has been done by ice, which has all gone. Condition is good to excellent. Rye condition excellent. Roads are generally in poor condition, muddy for a time and frozen and rough."

It is said that the resignation of J. M. Anderson as vice president of the Grain Growers, Inc., is due to his having worked to build up the Equity society, which has its headquarters at St. Paul, Minn., in preference to the Grain Growers, Inc.

BOARD OF TRADE HAS A GOOD YEAR, GRIFFIN REPORTS

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

In the face of heavy expenses last year the Chicago Board of Trade has the largest surplus it has ever had, according to President Joseph P. Griffin in his annual report which will be presented to the members at the annual meeting tomorrow. He recommends the erection of a new building for which he has worked for years and suggests that a new clearing house system be adopted, calling attention to the fact that Chicago is the only market not having an up to date method.

A new clearing house system, he says, would relieve members of making detailed statements to the government in the collection of taxes on trades on the exchange. Should the United States Supreme court sustain the constitutionality of the Capper-Tincher act, the exchange will be burdened with keeping records and filing reports, which might be avoided by a new clearing house system.

As the result of investigations by opponents of grain exchanges, the only laws that have been enacted have been regulatory, and by affirmative action not only recognize but perpetuate practically every method of doing business on grain exchanges.

Farmer's Plight Deplorable.

"That the American agriculturist is in a deplorable plight cannot be denied," says Mr. Griffin. "His present situation is a reflection of world-wide economic conditions and in no sense chargeable to the machinery employed to market his products. The economic ills of this group cannot be cured by executive or legislative dictum. Statutory enactments will never prove an adequate substitute for demand.

"Heroic financial assistance, such as rendered by the War Finance corporation, may result in a more orderly marketing, but furnishes no outlet for excess supplies on the American farm. I respectfully suggest to our lawmakers that there is a potential demand for all the farm products produced in the United States. Any measure designed to help the farmer which does not directly stimulate the demand for his products is futile and reactionary. This exchange now, as ever, is willing to employ all its machinery and resources to help improve the condition of our most numerous and important class—the farmer."

The total outstanding bonded indebtedness of the board was reduced $13,300 during the year, the reluctance of sellers of the bonds preventing a larger amount being purchased. Largest Saturday receipts of hogs in more than a year forced a break of 15@40c in prices, with lightweights off most, the practical top soon after the opening being $8.00. Some reached $8.10 early, with day's average at $7.70, being 30c below previous Saturday, while the late top stood 75c below a week ago.

There was a decided letup in the shipping demand at the close of the week, which afforded packers a good opportunity to lower the market. Expectancy of a very large run Monday had a decidedly weakening effect.

Hog Receipts Are Large.

Receipts of hogs at Chicago last week at approximately 256,200 were largest since the third week of January last year, when supply for the week totaled 256,866, and 103,900 larger than the previous week and 51,100 larger than the eleven year average. Estimated average weight of hogs last week at 223 lbs stands 3 lbs lighter than the previous week and 5 lbs heavier than the eleven year average.

Eleven principal markets received a combined total of about 764,000 hogs last week, which was 254,000 more than the previous week and 34,000 less than the five year average.

Closing cattle trade was topheavy at lowest prices of the week, comparatively few selling after Thursday above $8.75, the general price range being narrowest in many months. Bulk of cattle finished the week 25@50c lower than a week ago.

Lamb Average Is High.

The general average price of fat lambs for the week at $12.30 stands highest in over a year, yet the market closed 25c below high point of the week, with choicest fat lambs quotable at $12.65.

Receipts at Chicago for Monday are estimated at 27,000 cattle, 77,000 hogs, and 26,000 sheep, against 28,240 cattle, 56,057 hogs, and 28,879 sheep the corresponding Monday a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 68,000 cattle, 255,000 hogs, and 85,000 sheep.

Monday's probable receipts of hogs are generally estimated at over 60,000. H. Pattison marked 70,000; B. E. Collins, 68,000; W. H. Overman and G. Chandler, 65,000; Lester Armour, 63,000; E R. Gentry, 62,000; Edward Morris, 60,000; F. W. Waddell, 60,000; and J. M. Waters, 57,000.

FIRM TO OPEN NEW OFFICE.

Jackson Bros. & Co. will open their branch office at 192 North Clark street on Monday with Charles E. Kinsman in charge. Harry L. Renn and C. V. Swensen, active in the grain and stock trade for years, have become associated with Jackson Bros. & Co.

RAILROAD NOTES

In line with Erie's railroad policy of scaling down expenses for their 1922 operation the management is arranging to handle its less-than-carload freight with outside concerns. The effect will be to release the Erie from the employment of freighthouse labor, where such contracts are operative, as the road would hire its own labor at rates which are effective at the points employed. The road is reported to have saved more than $2,000,000 in 1921 by leasing four of its ten repair shops to individual companies.

Officials of railroads operating east from Chicago and St. Louis reported an increasing movement of corn to the seaboard for export and also a heavier run of packing house products. Packing house products are running much heavier than during the same time last year. Generally total traffic is falling below the corresponding time last year.

Officials of southern roads apparently find little reason for any particular optimism in regard to traffic conditions, which are not materially changed from a week ago. Generally the movement is smaller than a year ago.

An application for permission to build a new line of railroad, to be known as the Wenatchee Southern, was made to the interstate commerce commission. The proposed line would be eighty-two miles in length and would run south from Wenatchee, Wash., to connections with the Oregon-Washington Railroad company and the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul.

Sale of railroad equipment trust certificates to the amount of $12,626,300 was announced by Director General of Railroads Davis, making a total of $160,017,700 in these securities disposed of by the government to date.

Furniture manufacturers of Grand Rapids, Mich., are reported routing California shipments by rail to Philadelphia and then by water through the Panama canal, because the rate is 40c a hundredweight cheaper than the direct all rail rate. The rate via Philadelphia is $3.76, compared with $4.20 via all rail.

The Chicago and Western Indiana railroad has asked the interstate commerce commission for authority to issue $233,000 of its first consolidated 4 per cent mortgage bonds.

The wage problem of the Canadian systems will be formally reopened this week and railway union officials are now in conference here. The union leaders are seeking to have $10,000,000 restored of the $30,000,000 reduction that became effective for all classes of labor on July 16 last year.

About 1,000 employés of Pennsylvania railroad car repair shops at Wilmington, Del., have been put on short time.

STOCKS, BONDS, EXCHANGE RISE AS WEEK CLOSES

YESTERDAY'S AVERAGES

	High.	Low.	Close.	Net change.
25 railroads	54.79	54.24	54.66	+ .47
25 industrials	83.00	82.39	82.77	+ .46
50 stocks	68.89	68.31	68.71	+ .46

The New York Times.

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The week ended on the stock exchange with rising prices. In stocks most of today's changes were only fractional, but with few exceptions they were advances, and net gains of 1 to 3 points occurred in a considerable number of shares. These were mostly of the industrial description, but one or two railway stocks moved similarly.

Investment bonds, as a rule, showed little abatement of the strength which has characterized their market throughout the last week; numerous further advances occurred today in the face of evident speculative profit taking, and a comparison of closing prices with those of the preceding week give a rather striking picture.

Bonds Show Steady Advance.

The week's rise in bonds has not been of the excited character which distinguished the November market, but gains of 1 to 3 points are numerous and the steady trend to higher values, after the hesitation in the first week after New Year's day, has, at least, defined the market's character.

Naturally, no selected list of bonds can give the whole market; but the Times' average of forty issues, exclusive of United States loans or foreign governments' (which also rose last week), gives for today a price not only 1¾ points above December's closing, but more than ¾ above the highest average of last November. The present average is still, however, lower than it was in the middle of 1919, and much lower than even the lowest of the earlier war years.

Motors and Rails Active.

The motor stocks were again prominent, Chandler registering a further gain of 2½ points and Studebaker 1⅝. Railroad stocks also shared in the upward movement. Atchison was the leader, with a net advance of 1¾, the high price of 97¼ being a new peak for this year.

National Lead was a feature among the so-called inactive issues, scoring a gain of 5½ points at the closing price of 91½. Another prominent issue was Gulf States Steel, which, on small dealings, was up 2⅝ points. Burns Brothers class B common stock registered a net gain of 2½ on the announcement of an initial quarterly dividend of 50 cents a share. The class A stock was also in demand and ended the day 2¼ higher.

Foreign Exchange Is Firm.

The market for exchange on London and Paris continued to ignore what some of the correspondents describe as "history in the unmaking" and "European reconstruction in ruins." French exchange rose sharply and ended at the best, with sterling also at a fractional advance.

The government's monthly report on the country's consumption of cotton indicates again that, notwithstanding the trade's disappointment over the difficulty of getting better prices for finished goods, almost a normal volume of business is going on in the cotton industry. Takings by American spinners in December, for instance, were substantially above those of the corresponding month in the pre-war years or in any subsequent year, except 1915 to 1917, inclusive.

Banks Pay Reserve Bank.

According to the New York clearing house bank statement today, surplus reserves decreased $40,585,870 during the week, probably in consequence of the heavy retirement of obligations at the federal reserve bank. Reserve of member banks in the federal reserve bank decreased $37,990,000. Loans increased $17,876,000 and deposits $14,355,000. Government deposits decreased $11,141,000 to $76,348,000. FINANCIAL NOTES

Evidence of the briskness of the copper export movement was shown in yesterday's announcement of the Copper Export association that $7,000,000 par value of its 8 per cent notes, due Feb. 15, 1923, will be paid Feb. 15, 1922, at 101 and accrued interest to that date. The original issue was $40,000,000, of which $6,000,000 was to be paid this year and $10,000,000 in 1923. In all $12,000,000 will be paid this year.

The Chicago and Northwestern railroad will show about $12,000,000 deficit after dividends for 1921, but since this loss was established in first half of last year, Northwestern turned the corner by means of strict economy and increased grain business. The first half of 1921 shows a deficit after dividends of $12,462,748.

H. B. Thayer, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, in a brief statement to shareholders says: "While final figures are not yet on hand for the year, we can assure stockholders that the 9 per cent dividend rate established with the July payment last year has been earned with a substantial margin, as usual."

Reorganization of the Pullman company, following its absorption of the Haskell & Barker Car company, was effected at a special meeting of stockholders yesterday. John S. Runnells retired as president and became chairman of the board, Edward F. Carry being elected as president. C. A. Liddle, vice president, and D. A. Crawford, treasurer, of the Haskell & Barker company, were elected vice presidents of the Pullman company.

There were 719 commercial failures in the United States last week, according to figures compiled by R. G. Dun & Co., compared with 540 in the preceding week, and 514 in the corresponding week last year. Last week's total makes a new high record for commercial failures.

Production of crude oil in the United States for the week of Jan. 7 established a new high record for all time, averaging 1,413,450 brls daily, against 1,407,750 barrels in the previous week and 1,221,075 brls in the first week of 1921. The Humble Oil and Refining company yesterday advanced Mexia light crude oil 25c a barrel at the well, making the new price $1.25.

The Chicago Federal Reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending Jan. 11 by 201 banks in twenty-four leading clearing house cities in the Seventh federal reserve district aggregate $964,114,000, compared with $950,691,000 a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account amounted to $964,114,000, compared with $1,025,696,000 for the corresponding week last year.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon has authorized the Federal Reserve banks, beginning next Monday, to redeem in advance of maturity treasury certificates dated May 16, 1921, and due Feb. 16, 1922.

The federal shipping board has closed a contract with the Vacuum Oil company for the transportation of approximately 1,000,000 cans of oil to ports in the Levant and near east regions during the current year.

A market for the new stock of the Eastman Kodak company was inaugurated yesterday, the quotations being 70 to 72, and business being transacted on a "when issued" basis. A sale of five shares of the old stock was reported on the exchange at 700, as compared with 630 on Thursday and 600 earlier in the week. The directors have called a special meeting of stockholders on April 4 for the purpose of approving the plan to exchange the current stock of $100 par for ten shares of no par value.

How Would YOU Like to Live in the Hollywood Apartments?
Elevated, surface car and motor bus transportation
Sheridan Road and the lake one block distant

TAKE one apartment in the new Hollywood building and consider how you would like to live in it. The answer, multiplied by 125, the number of apartments to be available, will show you the safety of the Hollywood first mortgage bonds.

The apartment pictured above, consisting of living room, combination kitchenette and dining room, and bath, with electricity, gas and refrigeration furnished, will rent for $75 a month exclusive of furnishings. This for accommodations of the highest type, in one of Chicago's finest apartment buildings, and in a neighborhood ranking foremost among the exclusive residential sections close to the lake.

With the other apartments offering equally attractive values at $65 to $200 a month, don't you think the Hollywood will be filled to capacity at all times—especially in view of the fact that the owners have already received scores of requests for apartments? Assuming your answer is yes, doesn't it naturally follow the bonds are an unusually sound investment, being secured by a building in such demand?

Bucket Shops--'The Cleaning Process'

This is the third of the series of articles on bucket shops. These articles are based on a series appearing in the Magazine of Wall Street which we consider the best and most comprehensive exposé of the bucket shop evil that we have seen. We regret that space limitation prevents our going into the graphic and interesting detail of those articles.

We left the client with a profit of $850 and his original $1,000 margin on deposit at his "brokers." Had the first trade gone against him the bucket shop would likely have let him alone until the stock had dropped five points, when a call for additional margin would have been made. Had he ignored it he would have been "sold out" and his balance of several hundred dollars kept to his credit until such time as he could be bled again. He would have been told over the telephone some such story as this:

"Tried hard to get you yesterday, but something was wrong with the wire service. Sorry our last trade went against you, but some one started to sell out on our pool and before we could stop the leak the stock had been broken down. We're together again now, however, and getting in strong on Reading. Notice what it did yesterday? Went up two points in the last half hour. Well, I tried hard to get you and when I failed I just took a chance on having you approve what I did. You know you have a balance here of $400 or so, and I just picked up 100 Reading for you at 71. It closed at 73 and is now 74. We know positively it's going through 90 in three or four days and I hope you'll ratify what I did."

Confidence is restored and the victim ratifies what supposedly has been done for him. Now for the "cleaning."

"You know, with your balance here and the profit you have in the stock you have a margin of about $600. Suppose you just send us your check tonight for $500 and then you'll have the necessary ten points margin. I'll watch the stock for you and if you'll authorize me to—in writing, of course—I'll be glad to act without calling you if something happens that requires speedy movement. Suppose you just drop a line to the firm and tell them to accept orders from me for your account. That cuts the red tape."

It does. A suddenly erratic market and the victim is surprised next morning to find that he had sold, rebought, resold, gone short, covered, taken a long position, sold out, and wound up the day with transactions in 700 shares and losses on every transaction—with his balance wiped out and a debit chalked up against him. He would not know, of course, that all this had been figured out after the market had closed, various confirmations of transactions for other customers or other house accounts and "memoranda and confirmations still in the mail" temporarily doing duty as confirmations for his account until it is sure that no "holler" is going to be put up. Then some "accommodation confirmations" are obtained from another bucket shop and are put into the files and entered on the books. All is regular and strictly within the letter of the law.

To revert to the client who had $850 profit and $1,000 margin on deposit and was anxiously awaiting a check in full payment or another "hot tip." The tip comes—not the check. "Something good—our crowd's all getting in on such and such a stock. Suppose you take 200 shares—that's $200 profit on every point the stock moves up," etc. He falls, and is now carrying 200 shares on a nine point margin, which is reckless even with a legitimate broker. If the stock eases off he is called upon for additional margin. There is some plausible explanation of why certain news has depressed the stock temporarily. If it becomes evident that he is nearing the end of his rope and cannot be persuaded to give up more, the same play of inducing him to send in authority for the salesman to manage his account is resorted to—then a few quick passes, the cleaning of the account, and regretful explanations, together with a statement of the amount the victim still owes.

BUSINESS NEWS IN BRIEF

COPYRIGHT: 1922: BY FAIRCHILD NEWS SERVICE.

NEW YORK.—Striking cloak and suit workers may accept the invitation of the Protective Association of Manufacturers to return to work on Monday on the union's terms for a strike settlement. Manufacturers reserve the right to appeal from the injunction restraining them from conspiring to break their contract with the union.

NEW YORK.—The woolen and worsted cloth trade takes seriously the rumor that the large companies covered on wool a year ago. Advancing wool prices have raised the cost of cloth production as much as 30 cents a yard.

GLOVERSVILLE, N. Y.—Numbers of glove novelties will be introduced for spring by the Gloversville manufacturers. Hand embroidery in colors will feature some new models.

NEW YORK.—A resident buyer from the middle west and coast stores declares wholesale prices for women's apparel are higher than last spring.

NEW YORK.—Glove wholesalers are heavily stocked with women's short gloves. The demand has practically ceased for short fall gloves. Prices are dropping considerably. The trend is toward gauntlets.

PATERSON, N. J.—Business in crepes is picking up steadily in the broad silk industry Some large manufacturers are endeavoring to have work done for them by smaller houses.

NEW YORK.—Blouse manufacturers claim prices now are about 30 per cent under last spring, values and all considered. Drop in prices of hand made blouses is the most noticeable, due to overstocking on the Porto Rican product.

NEW YORK.—Artificial silk demand is assuming large proportions. Buyers in some cases are paying premiums for immediate deliveries. Buyers are largely from knitted fabric and woven silk trades.

NEW YORK.—Close observers believe the men's clothing market has been drastically overdone on cheaper merchandise. Results of clearance sales so far show the consumer demand has been misinterpreted. Low grades are not in demand. Low prices are wanted.

NEW YORK.—The local fur market does not take seriously the talk of an expected fur shortage next fall. Available evidence one way or the other is too meager to solidify opinion.

NEW YORK.—Millinery jobbers are placing large orders for faille and gros de londres. There is business in canton crêpe. The shade most in demand, but which now is scarce, is bluet or the periwinkle tone.

First Mortgage 7% Serial Gold Bonds

Denominations: $1000, $500, $100

High-grade office buildings in the Chicago Loop are regarded as one of the safest types of income-producing real estate, particularly when located in or near the crowded La Salle Street financial district. Local bond issues secured by this highly desirable class of property have been comparatively few in number and seasoned bonds of this type have steadily enhanced in value and enjoy a high investment rating with wide marketability.

That the Union Fuel Building First Mortgage 7% Serial Gold Bonds constitute an investment of unsurpassed safety will be evident from the following summary:

SECURITY: A direct closed first mortgage on the valuable leasehold estate (extending until April 30th, 2011) and highly modern, thoroughly fireproof, sixteen story, steel frame office building, situated just East of the intersection of Madison and La Salle Streets, Chicago, and only two and one-half blocks from the intersection of State and Madison Streets, the world's busiest corner.

VALUATION: This property has been conservatively appraised by Mr. Preston M. Nolan, Bank Appraiser and Financial Counsel, at a FAIR CASH MARKET VALUE of $594,120. The total amount of the bond issue is less than 60 per cent of this valuation.

EARNINGS: With rentals lower than the present normal average, monthly rental income is at the rate of approximately $130,000 per annum. Mr. Nolan's conservative estimate gives the building an annual gross rental value of $140,000, and the demand for office space in the La Salle Street financial district assures the permanence of the ample earning power already demonstrated.

MONTHLY SINKING FUND: Will operate to make the issue practically self-liquidating and payments will be made to the Trustee, each month, of one-twelfth of the next maturing installments of both principal and interest. Serial maturities will rapidly increase the bondholders' margin of security.

OWNERSHIP OF PROPERTY: Is vested in the Pulliam Building Corporation. The sworn statement of the President, Mr. Leslie J. Pulliam, evidences a net worth in excess of $900,000.

The Union Fuel Building is entirely free and clear of any lien or mortgage indebtedness other than the closed first mortgage securing this bond issue.

Interest rates are steadily declining, bond prices are advancing and investments of this choice type are in scant and diminishing supply.

Because of large advance subscriptions, these bonds are offered strictly subject to prior sale. Orders may be telephoned or telegraphed at our expense.

A Camera Story of the making of a great Cigarette

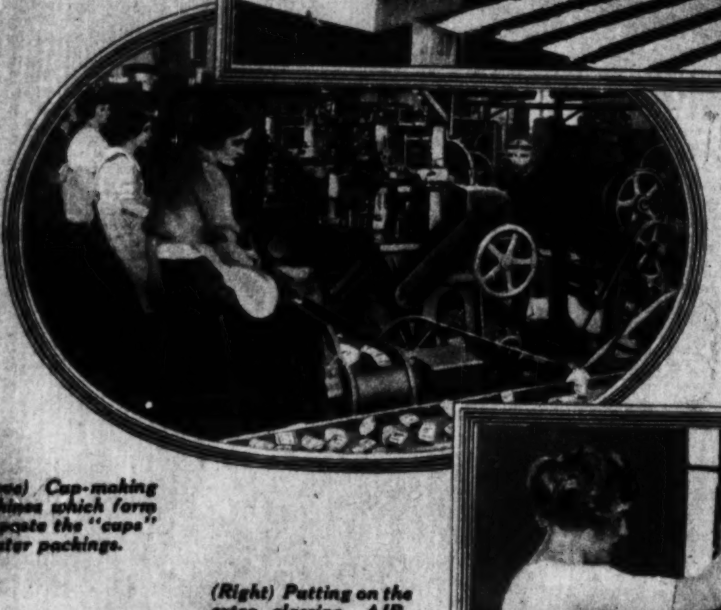
of a series

Those who have followed these advertisements have seen how the various Turkish and Domestic tobaccos for Chesterfield cigarettes are first carefully selected, then mellowed for two years in storage, then blended to bring out the full flavor of each kind of leaf. In this fourth advertisement is described the actual making and packing.

Told all too briefly—yet this camera story clearly shows Chesterfield's unusual quality. And only the most modern and economical methods, plus huge volume, plus minimum profit, could make possible such a moderate price for such an exceptional cigarette.

(Right) Receiving end of cigarette-making machine. Here again the cigarettes are carefully inspected for form and weight before delivery to the packing machines.



(Above) Cap-making machines which form and paste the "caps" or outer packings.

(Left) Packing machines wrap the paper and foil around the cigarettes and shape the packages to fit into the paper "cups."

CHARLES DAILEY

Your Ambassador in the Orient

Only when you read unbiased, uncensored reports of world conditions can you sense the true import of epochal events or movements. To give you world news, free from political bias, unhampered by "official" censorship, THE TRIBUNE maintains its Foreign News Staff, a wonderful band of trained, travel-hardened men, who, stationed at points strategically covering the whole world, sally forth, make their observations and report to you. Thus you carry part of a chapter of world history to work with you every day!

CHARLES DAILEY "covers" the Far East and the Philippines. He is a recognized authority on matters Oriental. One of the big Tribune scoops of 1921 was his—the first eye-witness account of the terrible famine conditions in China. He even preceded the relief forces, and it was not until twenty-four days later that any other correspondent gave an eye-witness account of the famine.

Mr. Dailey's repertorial activity is fraught with thrills and dangers. To penetrate, alone, to the interior of China, with no transportation facilities except those provided by nature, is a big portion of job! Yet, in reading your morning Tribune, you had the true story—before any one else!

Here are three of Charles Dailey's calling cards: Chinese, Japanese, and Russian. They all read: "Charles A. Dailey, Special Correspondent, The Chicago Tribune."

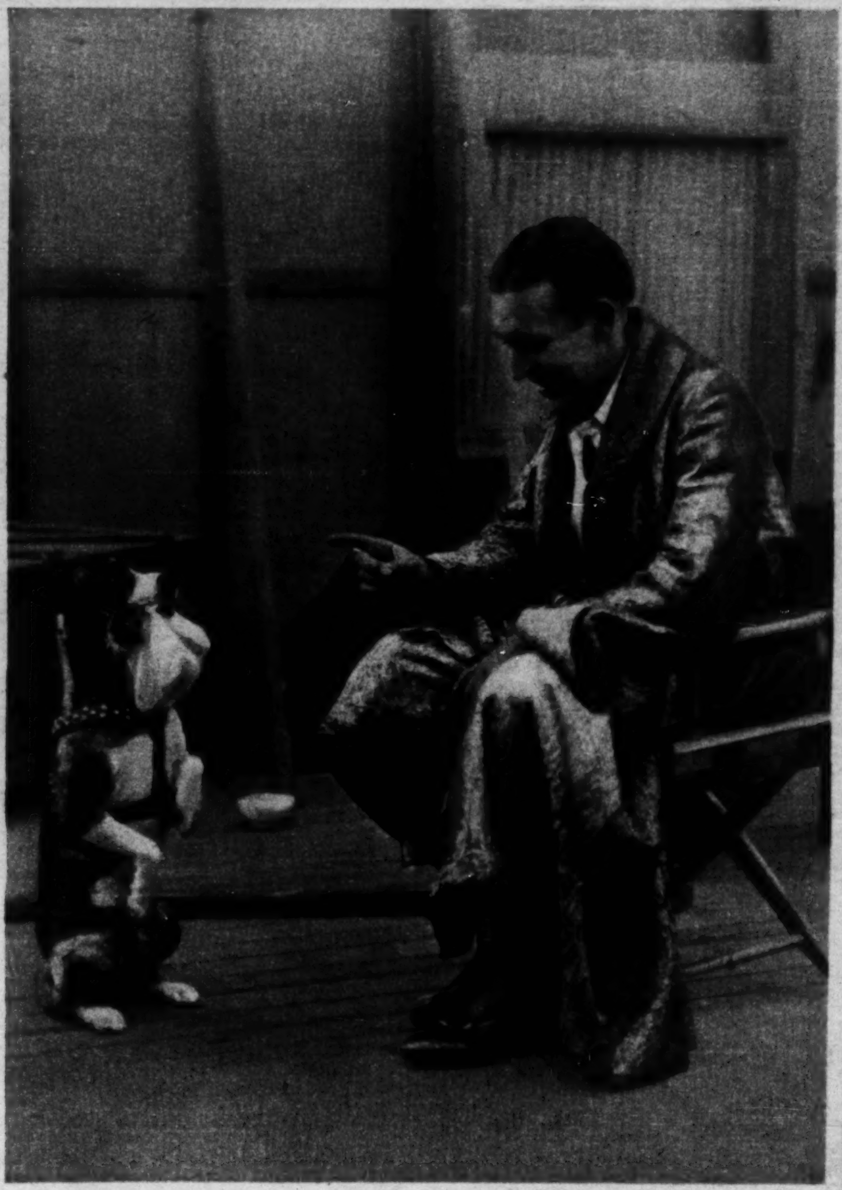
FLORENCE REED, now playing in "The Black Panther's Cub," doesn't appear on the screen often, but when she does is always given a hearty welcome by the movie fans. Miss Reed was born in Philadelphia in 1883. Her parents were theatrical folks and she has had a long stage career, including stock and vaudeville. You may remember her in "Lucretia Borgia," "The Struggle Everlasting," or "Her Code of Honor." She has, however, appeared in various other screen productions. Mae Tinee.

(Photograph from Charlotte Fairchild.)



WALLACE REID has not gone into the circus business, as this picture may indicate. He is merely being introduced by his dog to one of that gentleman's lady friends. In the present instance, how would you like to be the woman in the case? (Or in the handkerchief?) Mae Tinee.

ELLIOTT DEXTER needs no introduction. If the truth be told, I think you all know more about him and his affairs than do I all. He's in town this week in "Grand Larceny." Mae Tinee.

DOROTHY PHILLIPS just had this picture taken in a brand new fur coat made of Russian sable. Miss Phillips, who has been resting for a while, will soon be seen in "The Soul Seeker," which is being produced by her husband, Allen Holubar, and in which she will star. Mae Tinee.

JACK DEMPSEY AGE 26 YEARS

HARRY WILLS AGE 30 YEARS.

FIGHT FANS THE WORLD OVER, in casting around for a prospective opponent for Jack Dempsey, have wondered, not infrequently aloud, what would happen if Dempsey ever hooked up with Harry Wills.

The men are shown above as they would look face to face. The measurements indicate the two would be evenly matched, Wills having a bit the better of it in weight and height, with whatever advantage there might be in age on Dempsey's side, as he is the younger man. The colored man also has half an inch longer reach than the champion.

Wills cracked Bill Tate on the jaw in their fight at Milwaukie, Oregon, for the colored championship. The wallop put Tate to sleep in the first round. Then the referee gave the fight to Tate on a foul. It may have been a "foul"—it may not—but anyway it shows Wills has a gosh awful punch, and if he ever hits Jack that-a-way, Jack may not recover as easily as he did from Carpentier's second round crack.

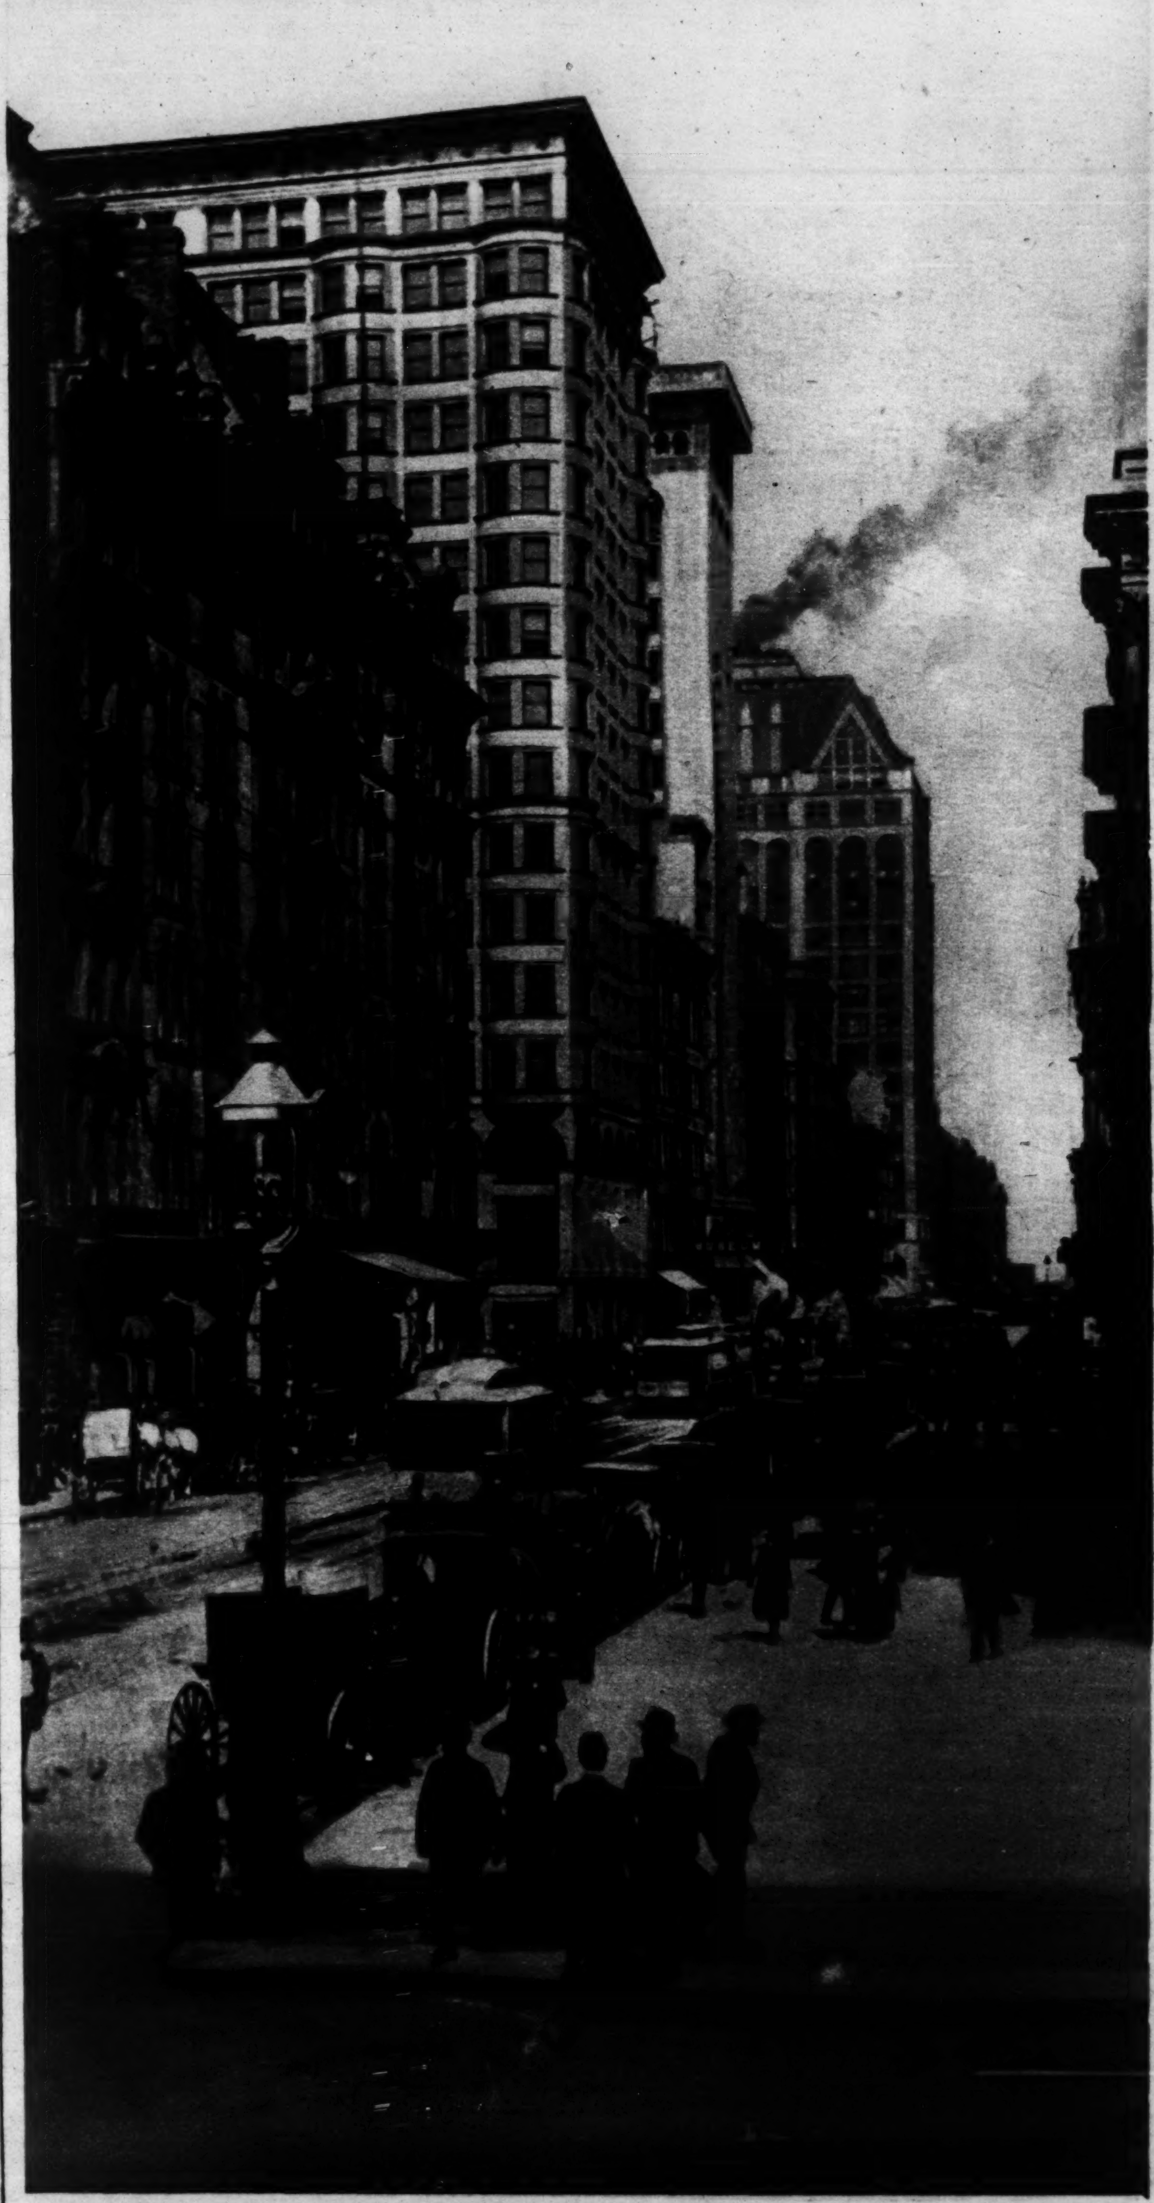
DO YOU REMEMBER 'WAY BACK WHEN ----



RANDOLPH STREET, LOOKING EAST FROM NEAR CLARK STREET, appeared like this? In the shadows at the left Hooley's theater is to be noted, and at the corner is the old Sherman house, while at the right of the picture is the old city hall, and in the distance the Masonic temple. The picture was taken in 1895, when one still rode in a horse cab instead of a taxi, while of a Sunday one might go to Epstein's museum.

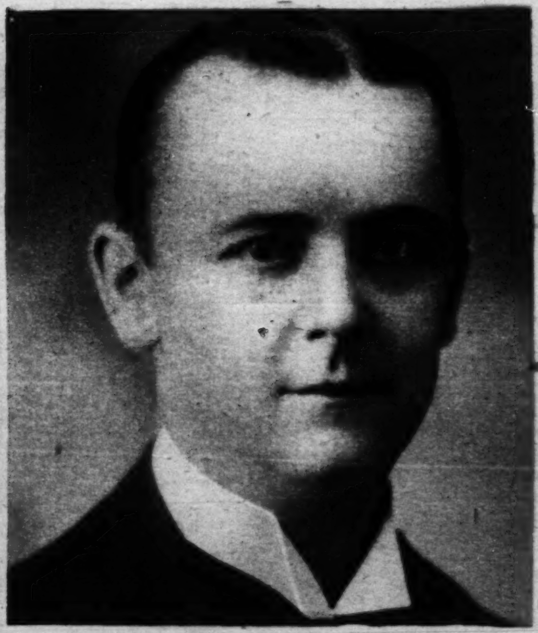
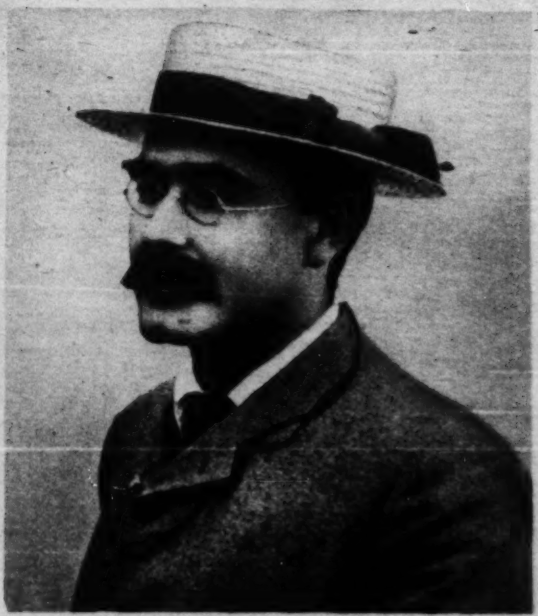
MAUDE ADAMS charmed all beholders with this costume? She was just beginning to shine as an American theatrical star of the first magnitude.



EDDIE FOY, the comedian, looked like this? That was before all the little Foys had arrived to make possible the famous all-Foy vaudeville act.



RUDYARD KIPLING, the celebrated English author, looked like this? This portrait of the creator of "Soldiers Three" was taken in London years ago.

Pride's White Lie

"Sorry, I can't go."

Into her young life has crept the ache of loneliness, because she is too proud to share her secret with her friends.

Her relentless mirror tells the story: she was careless of her radiant teeth and their beauty slipped away.

Now she is paying because she forgot the first rule for all who would retain their youthful charms: beware the beauty-thief Pyorrhea!

Pyorrhea strikes from ambush. No one is immune. You may be next.

If you would checkmate Pyorrhea, watch your gums!

Pyorrhea begins with tender, bleeding gums. That is Nature's warning. Slowly the gums recede, the teeth decay and loosen, pus pockets form and Pyorrhea germs seep throughout the system.

To these sinister germs the medical profession has traced many serious ills, rheumatism, anaemia and nervous disorders of all kinds.

Four out of every five people past the age of forty and thousands under forty are afflicted with Pyorrhea. Yet you can escape it if you will follow these simple rules:

(1) Go to your dentist regularly for teeth and gum inspection. This is important.

(2) Start using Forhan's For the Gums today.

Forhan's For the Gums will not only prevent Pyorrhea, but it will check its progress, if used consistently and used in time.

Forhan's is also a pleasant dentifrice to use. It keeps the teeth clean and white, the gums firm and healthy.

Brush Your Teeth With Forhan's—How to Use It

Use it twice daily, year in and year out. Wet your brush in cold water, place a half-inch of the refreshing, healing paste on it, then brush your teeth up and down. Use a rolling motion to clean the crevices. Brush the grinding and back surfaces of the teeth. Massage your gums with your Forhan-coated brush—gently at first until the gums harden, then more vigorously. If the gums are very tender, massage with the finger, instead of the brush. If gum-shrinkage has already set in, use Forhan's according to directions, and consult a dentist immediately for special treatment. 35c and 60c, in the U. S. and Canada. At all druggists.

Tender Gums Become Firm

Gum soreness and bleeding usually end in one week. Kloria destroys germ cause. Free trial proves it.

NOTHING like Kloria has ever been known before for sore, bleeding gums, pyorrhea, etc. Usually, in one week, all gum soreness and bleeding disappear, and soon the shrunken gums tighten around the teeth again. Doubt if you must, but try it.

This is the new and wonderful antiseptic discovered in the world war, which, by scientific test, is over 40 times more germ-destroying than carbolic acid. This great germicidal power is what makes it so effective.

Yet Kloria doesn't burn or irritate, is soothing, pleasant, and absolutely safe because not poisonous. As a healing agent, it knows no equal.

Apply it, without fear, to any skin disease such as eczema or barber's itch, and watch the trouble fade away. Mark how it soothes soreness, itching and irritation. Note how promptly it destroys the pus infection of boils, carbuncles and sores; how it heals cuts and burns, often in one-fourth the usual time. For dandruff, simply wet the scalp a few times with Kloria, and see how quickly the itching and dandruff disappear, yet it is harmless as water to the hair. As a mouth-wash, it really destroys the acid-forming bacteria, thus preventing tooth decay. As a gargle, there is nothing like it for sore throat. Harmless, yet more effective than any poisonous antiseptic for personal hygiene.

Dissolve a few Kloria Tablets in water, and instantly you have, at a cost of a few cents, a large bottle of liquid antiseptic which is clean, colorless, stainless and virtually odorless.

All druggists. 50c. Money refunded if not satisfied.

Free Sample A sample of Kloria, enough for a convincing test, will be gladly sent free. Write for it. The results will be a revelation.

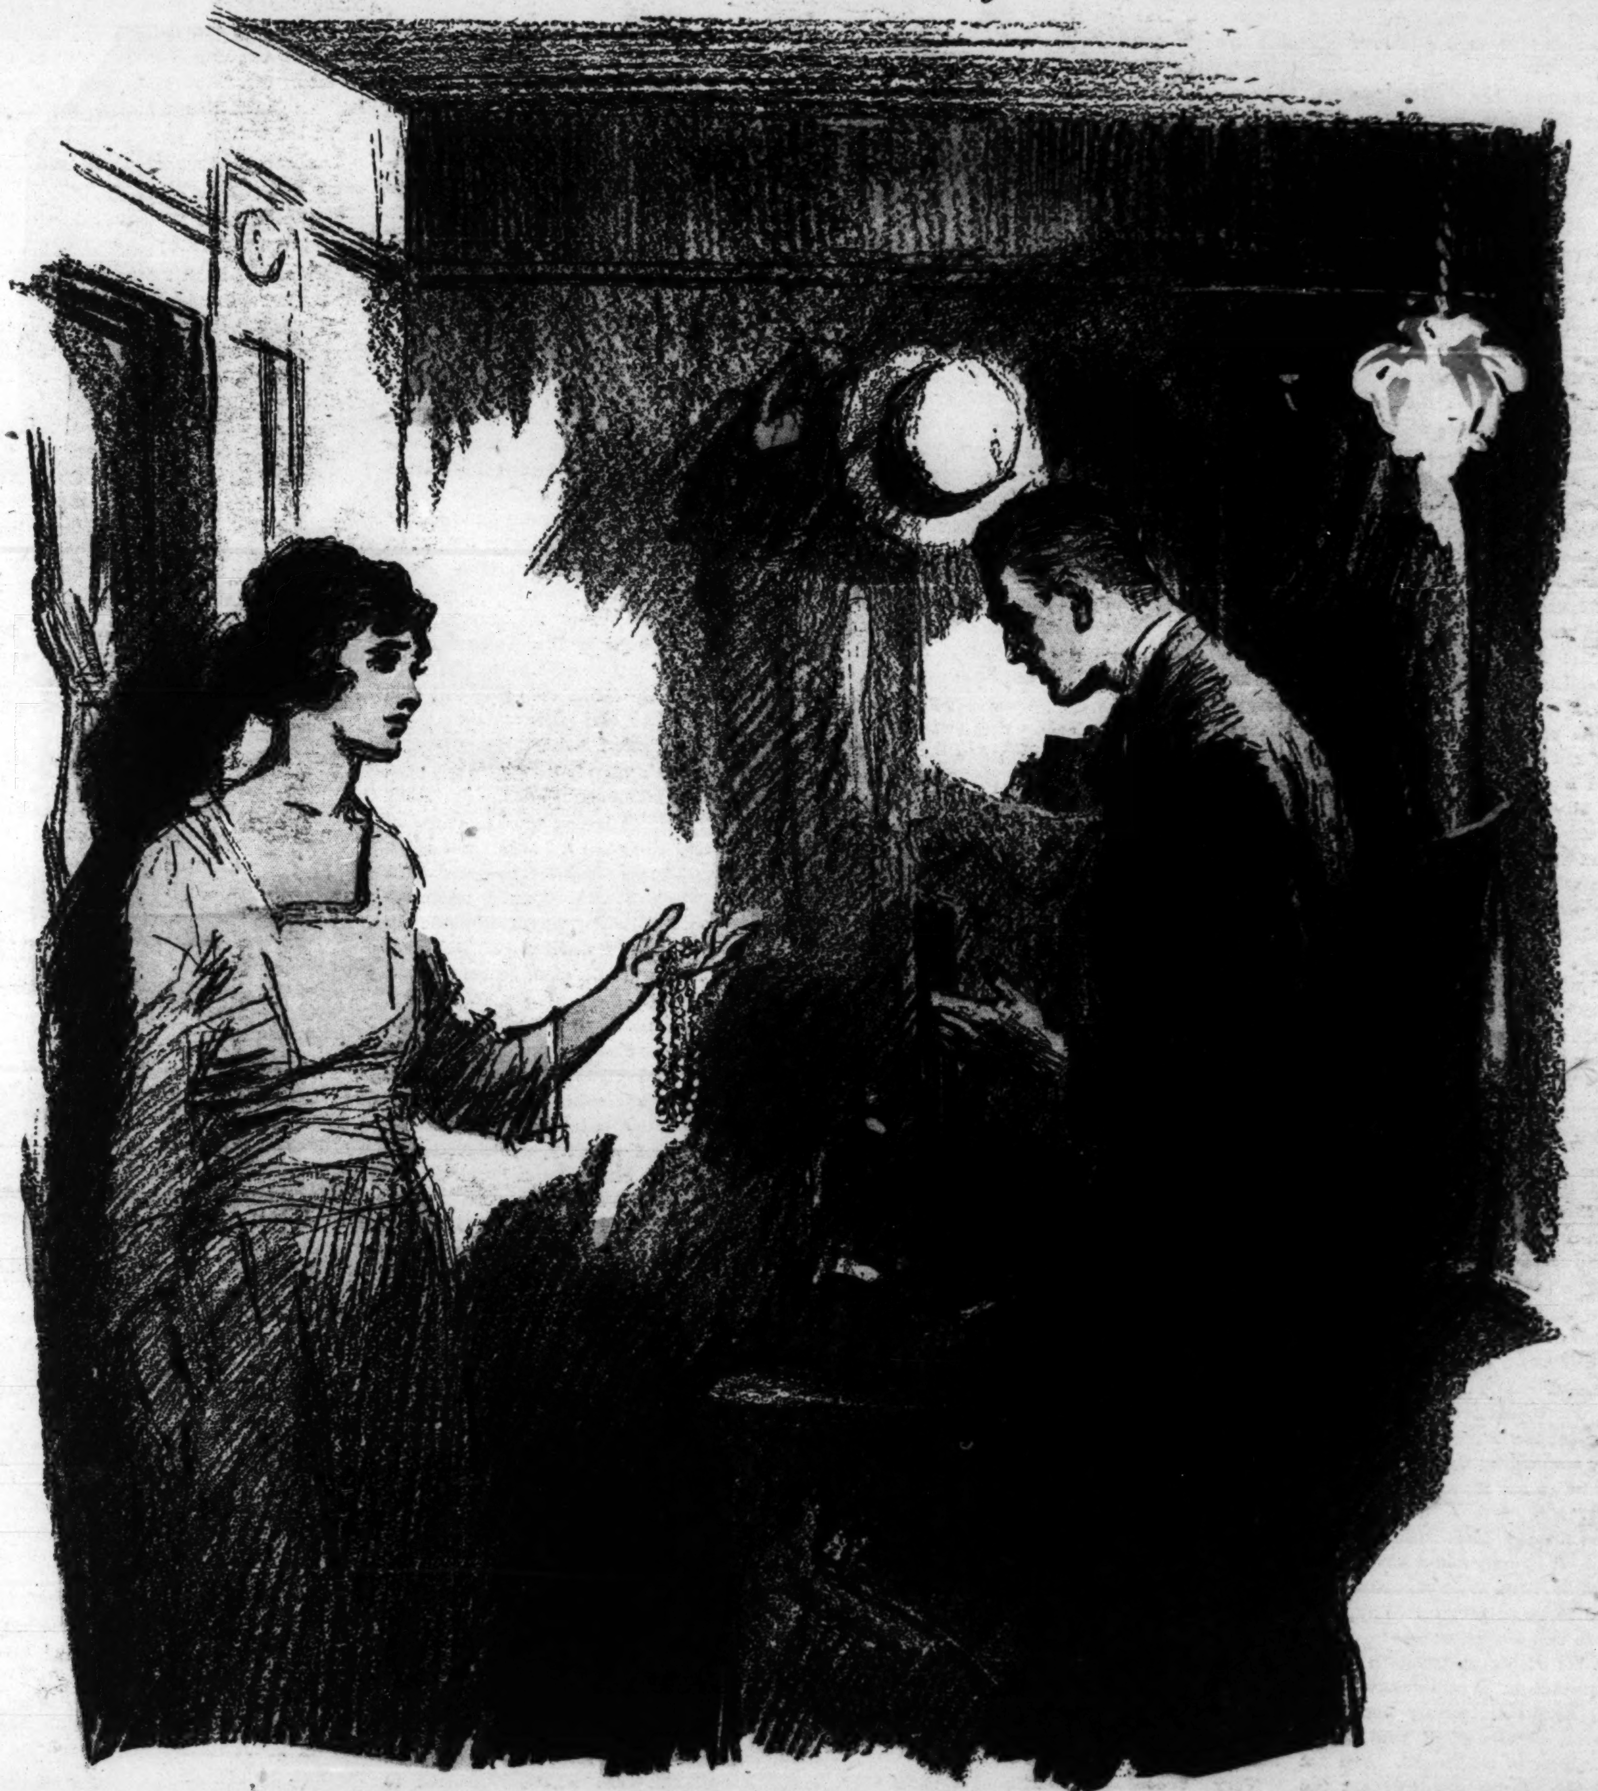
THE DAUNTLESS LYSANDER

by Winona Godfrey



A diamond and platinum chain, value $10,000! They stood staring at each other. Then Lysander wet his lips and whispered: "Where'd you get it?" "You know," her lips formed.

Henrietta Was His Only Heritage; then Along Came Phyllis, and Trouble, and Amy.

AFTER Aunt Jane died Lysander had begun to feel pretty tired of Iowa. Which was well, it seemed, for there had been something very like invitation in his Cousin Asa's voice as he knocked out his pipe on the porch rail.

"Well, Lys, I guess the car'll just about figure out what's comin' to you out of ma's stuff."

If he hadn't been feeling sad about Aunt Jane, who had been good to him always, Lysander would have uttered a whoop of derision. The "car" was good! From where he stood he could see its scarred carcass in the shed, a flivver of about the vintage of 1913, the driver's side sagged from Asa's two hundred pounds, making it look as if it were tired and were resting one foot while it leaned up against the weather. It was tired, there was no doubt about that, and only Lysander's continuous tinkering (a thing seeming positively inspired at times) persuaded it occasionally to saunter along the road to town.

Lysander understood Asa, who had never liked him much, and who meant now that Lysander would not be passionately regretted if he "moved on." Lysander had indeed wondered, by no means infrequently, why he stayed. Now the only tie was broken, and to his suddenly eager eyes the lopsided Henrietta appeared a champing steed prancing to be off, the westering sun altar fire of a long beckoning goal.

This does not happen to be a tale of any adventures of the long trail west. These paragraphs serve merely as a sketchy background to that fateful afternoon when Henrietta, after many vicissitudes, limped into a garage in a suburb of Los Angeles, and seemed to declare with a little bleat her intention to expire right there. Many times had Henrietta threatened to give up for good, but that dauntless tinkerer, Lysander, had always received and passed on to her some timely inspiration from the god of mechanicians which enabled her to proceed, if not with swiftness and élan, at least enabled her to proceed.

Lysander alighted from his ailing chariot, and administered with a practiced hand to its decrepitude, turning a grin and a deaf ear to the ribald comments of the garagemen. It was then—as he emerged dirty but triumphant—that it happened. A big car, all windshields and disk wheels and nickel and seventeen kinds of dewdads, whisked so lightly into the garage that it arrived with the very sound of its warning signal, missing Lysander by half an inch and Henrietta by less than half that, so that her poor old bones fairly jingled, though she was untouched.

The two ladies in the car squealed a little, and the important looking gentleman growled something, and the dapper chauffeur gave Lysander a basilisk glare. Our hero, seeing that he had been missed, merely smiled. The party scorned to notice him further, and devoted its attention to some slight irritation in the disposition of the magnificent one.

The ladies descended. The elder, evidently the mother, resembled the car considerably, being large and expensive looking. The younger—ah! the inadequacy of language! Never had Lysander Pratt beheld so ravishing a creature. She was not very

How Doctors Know and Prove that Nuxated Iron Helps Bring Health and Strength

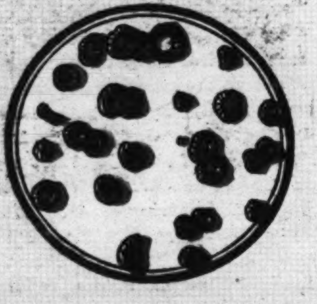
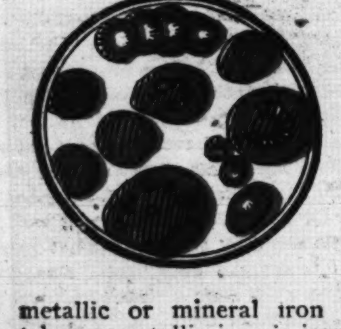
THIS little picture shows you what the Doctor sees through his microscope when he looks at a drop of your blood when you are tired and run-down.

This is thin, pale, watery blood which keeps you weak, nervous and run-down. If you tire easily; if you look pale, haggard and worn, it would probably astonish you to look at a drop of your own blood under the Doctor's powerful microscope and compare it with a drop of pure, healthy blood rich in iron. Actual blood tests show that a tremendously large number of people who are weak and ill, lack iron in their blood and are ill for no other reason than for lack of iron.



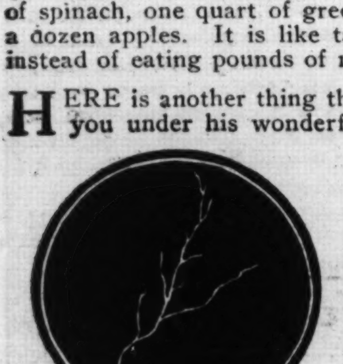
Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue, therefore, nothing you eat does you the proper amount of good, you don't get the strength out of it. As the result of this blood starvation people become generally weakened, nervous and all run-down and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at night, others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless, but all lack physical power and endurance.



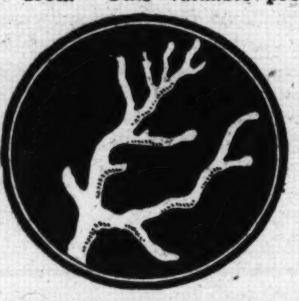
HERE is a picture of the way a drop of your blood will look under the miscrope when you have plenty of good rich red blood. Blood like this is always rich with iron, but be sure that the iron you take is organic iron and not metallic or mineral iron which people usually take, as metallic iron is iron just as it comes from the action of strong acids on iron filings.

Organic iron is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. It may be had from your druggist under the name of Nuxated Iron. Nuxated Iron represents organic iron in such highly condensed form that one dose of it is estimated to be approximately equivalent (in organic iron content) to eating one-half quart of spinach, one quart of green vegetables or half a dozen apples. It is like taking extract of beef instead of eating pounds of meat.

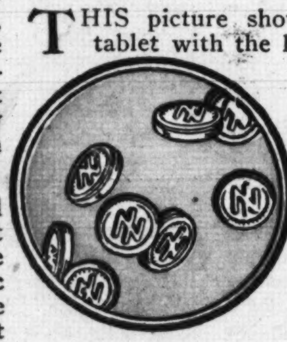
HERE is another thing the Doctor could show you under his wonderful microscope. It is a thin, delicate nerve of a person who is all run-down. Every human being is born with a certain quantity of "nerve force"—some with more than others. Your body normally makes or generates nerve force only about so fast, and if through overwork, worry, constant nervous strain or other excesses, you use up your nerve force faster than your body makes new nerve force, then your nerve power becomes weakened, and as a consequence your blood may become thin, pale and watery, and you become feeble, cross, and irritable In such a state you may not only suffer terrible tortures from a multitude of alarming symptoms, but in your greatly weakened condition you are an easy prey for the multitude of dangerous germs with which you must come in almost daily contact, and you may therefore easily contract some dangerous or even fatal disease.



HERE is a picture of a nerve which belongs to a strong, virile man, a man of blood and iron. If you are weak, nervous and run-down, your nerve probably looks like the previous picture and not like this one. In such cases you should immediately take something to revitalize your wornout, exhausted nerves and create new nerve force. This is most effectively accomplished by the free use of Nuxated Iron. This valuable product quickly aids in enriching the blood and thereby helps it to furnish an additional supply of new nerve force with which to revitalize and regenerate the brain and nerve cells. It also contains a product which represents the principal chemical constituent of active, living nerve force in a form most nearly allied to that in the nerve and brain cells of man. Nuxated Iron may therefore be said to be both a blood and a nerve food, as it furnishes strength-giving organic iron to the blood and the most important element of the nervo-vital fluid to the nerves. The effect of Nuxated Iron in cases of exhausted nerve force and impoverished blood is so remarkable and surprising that it often increases the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, "run-down" men and women in two weeks' time. In fact, the manufacturers guarantee satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money.



THIS picture shows you the Nuxated Iron tablet with the letters N. I. on every tablet, and below, the bottle you must be sure to get, because it contains the genuine Nuxated Iron. The tremendous success of Nuxated Iron as a tonic, strength and blood-builder has led to the offering of numerous substitutes and imitations. Investigation shows that many of these instead of being organic iron may be nothing more than a metallic iron compound which may in some instances produce more harm than good. Such instances have led physicians to emphasize that health officials and doctors everywhere should caution the public against accepting substitutes for Nuxated Iron.



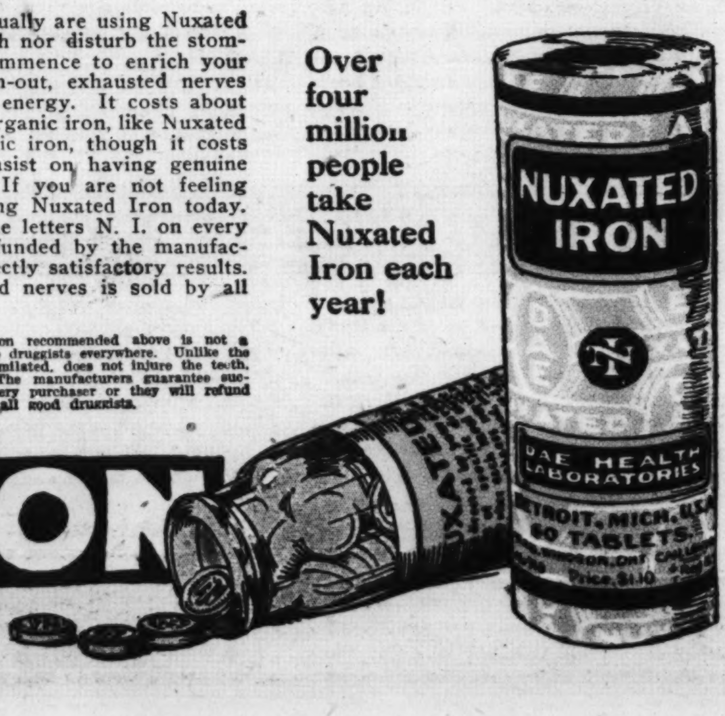
OVER 4,000,000 PEOPLE annually are using Nuxated Iron. It will not injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach. A few doses will often commence to enrich your blood, help revitalize your worn-out, exhausted nerves and give you new strength and energy. It costs about eighteen times as much to make organic iron, like Nuxated Iron, as it does to make metallic iron, though it costs you but little more. Always insist on having genuine organic iron—Nuxated Iron. If you are not feeling quite up to the mark start taking Nuxated Iron today. In tablet form only; look for the letters N. I. on every tablet. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if you do not obtain perfectly satisfactory results. Nuxated Iron for the blood and nerves is sold by all druggists.

MANUFACTURER'S NOTE: Nuxated Iron recommended above is not a secret remedy but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by all good druggists.

Get Back Your Grip on Health!

You can tell which people have a firm grip on health—strong, vigorous folks with plenty of iron in their blood who enjoy life every minute. They are the happy mothers of healthy children, the men who dominate in business, the athletes who win in every competition. You say they are lucky, but your doctor will tell you that it is not a matter of luck, it is a matter of rich red blood full of health-giving iron—the kind you get from organic iron—Nuxated Iron—as you can easily prove to yourself in two weeks' time.

Decide today that you will be well and strong. The manufacturers of Nuxated Iron have educated the public to the value of genuine organic iron, hence all the advertising you read about iron containing foods. Remember, however, that there is as much iron in one dose of Nuxated Iron as there is in a quart of vegetables and as much iron in a single bottle of Nuxated Iron as there is in $50 worth of raisins. The same is true of other foods in varying degrees. Your doctor will tell you that the quickest and surest way to get health-giving iron into your blood is to use Nuxated Iron.



Over four million people take Nuxated Iron each year!

NUXATED IRON

For Red Blood, Strength and Endurance

big, nor very little, but just exactly right. She had hair like California sunshine and eyes like the California sky and a mouth like the sweetest of California roses. She had the air of a little princess who rules by divine right, and she was dressed entirely up to the fashion hints for a day after tomorrow—no, for week after next at least.

"Whoever loved, who loved not at first sight!"

Our poor Lysander felt a weakening in the knees, a tightening of the chest, a lift and plunge of the heart before it fluttered out of him into the keeping of this pearl of all girls!

"Phyllis," said her mother, "do be careful, this place is just full of grease."

Phyllis! Delicious name of Phyllis. Could she possibly have been called anything else? Positively not. O, Phyllis, Phyllis.

They did not appear to notice Lysander. They did not even deign to smile at Henrietta, though once mother stood so near that poor Henrietta was almost obscured, if you happened to be looking at her head-on.

To the enchanted Lysander it seemed not more than two fleeting minutes until the chauffeur had closed the door on the royal family and was taking his place at the wheel of the magnificent one. It could not be that she was going out of his sight forever—fate could not be so cruel. This was the love of his life—one knows that surely in a moment as well as in ten years. And here he stood idly while the miles multiplied between them! He flung himself into Henrietta, who stirred with a squeak of protest.

He pursued the dream along the sunny highways that lead to the City of The Angels, and the country's charm seemed a part of that dream. The pepper trees, gorgeous in their clusters of red beads, the orange groves hung with gold and white, bungalows nestling in bright blossoming vines, skyline of mountains, all the vivid colorings of poppy and hibiscus and bignonia, made it the land of enchantment where he was to pluck—O, soon and surely—the flower of life. And as Henrietta jolted and rattled and snorted along, like a complaining but industrious old lady, Lysander was rehearsing a series of highly romantic ways in which he would make Phyllis's acquaintance. He had rescued her from every peril of a movie serial and received pledges of lifelong fealty from her grateful parents, when he sighted a gas station from which was just departing—the car.

No use pursuing, and Henrietta needed attention, so Lysander stopped.

"That was some car that just left," he suggested hopefully to the lean gas man.

"You said it! B'longs to F. J. Willard, I un'stand. S'got more millions than they is nickels in a dollar, they tell me. Stopped here to use the phone. Seems like the old lady lost a nawful costly chain, plat'num and diamonds worth about a mint, somewhere along, or maybe some guy swiped it off'n her. They was callin' up a garage back about Lankershim to see if they'd sighted it, but they hadn't."

Lysander was deeply interested. A lost chain! If he had—if he only could have found it! "O, it's nothing, Mrs. Willard, don't mention it. So glad to be of service. Why, yes, I'd be pleased to call sometime——"

He missed a bit of his informant's monologue. The daughter of a millionaire. You could see him, Lysander, taking her for a spin in Henrietta, now couldn't you! There was the whole thing in a nutshell. And yet what were all the stories about if not the winning of the princess, the attainment of the great wish, the coming true of the dream! Certainly he had not taken Greeley's advice to seek failure and disappointment; rather was he in this land of golden promise for the very purpose of plucking success to wear like a rose in his buttonhole.

With such high thoughts came the dauntless Lysander into the city, of whose beauty, bustle, and intricacies of traffic we will omit descriptions. The prospect pleased him immensely, and he regretted that it was too late in this particular day to begin putting his magic salt on the tail of the bluebird. In the first place he must have lodgings. Back in Iowa, old Lafe Burdage had insisted on giving him the name of his niece's sister-in-law, a "widow woman" who he thought kept some roomers. A Mrs. Josephine Sills, it was, at 954 Balboa street.

It was a rambling old house needing paint, set back from the street in a somewhat tangled garden, brooded over by a gigantic and gorgeous pepper tree. A driveway ran back to a shed which stood in the place of the snug garage usually to be seen in every Los Angeles backyard. Henrietta wheezed into the sideyard with symptoms of an imminent relapse.

A tired looking but kindly woman answered Lysander's ring, her eyes softening as, with his unconsciously ingratiating smile, he explained his errand. Well! so he was from Brinville! Yes, she had a room he could have—would he like to look at it? Lysander guessed he'd take it without inspection, and could he put his car in the garage?

"'Fraid it isn't much of a garage," she was beginning when she caught sight of Henrietta.

"Not much of a car either," Lysander grinned. "But—well, I'll just put her in and get my grip."

Henrietta had given up again, but the driveway sloped a little and Lysander rolled her easily into the shed, then, wicker suitcase in hand, he hesitated in the hall. From what he judged to be kitchenwards a fresh young voice was caroling: "Love me—and the wururld is mine!"

Mrs. Sills opened the door, and the singing stopped. "O, here you are. Amy——." A slim girl appeared and stood looking at Lysander.

"My daughter, Mr. Pratt. Just show Mr. Pratt his room, Amy, will you?"

Amy acknowledged the introduction; said "this way," and preceded him upstairs.

The room proved to be small, but there were two windows, from each of which, as Miss Sills adjusted the blind, Lysander glanced. From one a glimpse of far brown hills across red and green roofs; from the other a yellow street car clanging past a corner where no less than three little box buildings displayed great signs announcing they were offices.

"Everybody here in real estate?" he laughed. "Must have passed about a hundred of those places on my way out here."

"Well, the city's growing so fast, you know," returned Miss Amy, "and that makes a big demand for all kinds of real estate. Some people have made a lot of money in it."

"Have they?" said Lysander thoughfully.

"The lucky ones have." She moved to the door. "I hope you'll find everything all right. And dinner's at six."

Lysander thanked her—and for full five minutes remained at the window.

Perhaps it was destiny. Surely this had been a fateful day, for in it he had met her, and it was impossible that he had been given this tip by Fortune herself.

His fellow boarders were a Miss Burd, a school teacher, and a facetious plumber named Tilbury. Lysander was preoccupied with his two problems—how to meet Phyllis and how to make a fortune this week or next. He cursed his silly lack of purpose and ambition hitherto.

He was thrilled when the plumber began to talk rents and real estate, unaware that the subject is never neglected long in any California company. Mr. Tilbury had noticed that the bungalow court down the street was for sale again. It had been sold four times since he, just for fun, had been keeping an eye on it. And every man jack had picked up a few thousand on his deal. It's a great game, all right, if you're lucky. Talking about luck, he knew a fellow who started in on a shoestring and cleaned up twenty thousand dollars in less'n a year. Yes, sir! Just on a shoestring.

"How—how did he do it?" breathed the fascinated Lysander.

"O—hustled around and made a couple of good sales, got a few hundred dollars, you know, and then got options and maneuvered around. Smart fellow, all right."

Very encouraging, although Lysander could not but regret that the recipe was so indefinite. Made him think of Aunt Jane's telling how to make her famous cookies—well, you take a little oatmeal, 'bout as much as you think you'll need, and a little flour, and if you got cream you can use that or—— Still, Lysander felt that undoubtedly opportunity was knocking.

The next day Lysander, all spruced up, opened his campaign by presenting himself in turn at each of the three boxes with blackboards announcing bargains in residences, lots, and income property. Nobody needed a salesman, and the last man declining his services observed that "the real estate game is awfully overdone in this town—lot of loafers after easy money. That's what you want, too, I suppose."

"Sure," Lysander grinned. He walked—thoughtfully—down the street. Well—he would look about a bit—and believe in his luck.

He walked miles, going into all the houses open for inspection, tried to outline a selling talk, talked to several owners and agents, learning prices, saying he was just looking around. His spirits rose. Looked easy. Once you got in the game, that is. Now a bungalow like this sold for twelve thousand dollars: at five per cent commission would be six hundred. Pretty good day's work, what? Of course, unless you were on your own, you wouldn't get all of that and, of course, if you were on your own you might find it a little difficult to get listings. Anyway, after you'd sold a few houses, you'd have a tidy sum for—ah—options, and that? Yes, it looked good.

Here was another attractive place of Spanish type, for sale by builder. He went in. Very nice. Everything in good taste, and—bride-y looking. He had an ecstatic vision of Phyllis!

He found only one of the owner's cards—B. W. Anderson, address and phone—and he put in in his pocket, for no particular reason. Just then an automobile stopped in front and an elderly lady and gentleman alighted, followed by a trim and sprightly figure—daughter, no doubt. She paused in the doorway to exclaim: "What a darling house! May we look around?"

"O, certainly." Lysander was smiling rather eagerly. No reason surely why he shouldn't give himself a little rehearsal "If you will allow me——" and he began to open doors for them, to call attention to this convenience and that view, how pleasant it was to have the morning sun in the breakfast room, and in short made himself agreeable in a sincere boyish fashion. The Brownings were flatteringly responsive. Really it was just the sort of place they were looking for!

"And did you design it yourself, Mr. Pratt?" Miss Browning (who was about forty) demanded.

"Oh—ah—no. No," said the startled Lysander. "It was built by Mr. Anderson."

"Then you're his agent. Really, Mr. Pratt, the place does suit us. We will talk business with you!"

Lysander swallowed hard. "Fine!" He plucked Anderson's card from his pocket with a not very steady hand and quoted the price!

It seemed to be Miss Browning who had the money and the say-so, and it was plain that she was most amicably inclined toward Mr. Pratt. Papa Browning gave some advice, but obviously when daughter made up her mind something permanent had occurred.

Lysander's voice had a strange thin sound to his own ears as he promised to see Mr. Anderson at once, arrange for him to meet the Brownings, and so forth. Miss Browning, having talked herself into enthusiasm, was determined to clinch the bargain right now. No one must get in ahead of her—get her house! All vivacity, she insisted on giving Lysander a check for a hundred dollars to show her good faith.

When he had bowed and smiled and thanked and got rid of the Brownings, Lysander mopped his brow, not at all certain whether he had made a good start for heaven or jail. Of course, he had no right to do what he had done, and he couldn't understand yet how he'd done it!—but just the same he had sold Anderson's house for him.

To put it briefly, he found Anderson, who naturally was glad to sell his house, and who had, of course, no objection to dealing with the Brownings' agent (as it seemed to him), nor to seeing the light as to a little slice of commission when the deal should be consummated.

And when, after the greatest day of his life, Lysander went to bed, not knowing certainly whether, as Aunt Jane would have said, he was afoot or horseback, the world was his! Success! It was an apple in his hand from which the size of his bites was entirely optional. He was too excited to sleep for awhile, but at last he dropped off—already a millionaire, the affianced husband of Phyllis! Phyllis, Phyllis, Phyll.

The deal actually went through without a hitch and Lysander, clothed in the confidence of achievement, turned aside to make a play toward the other goal. And, humanly, having turned one good trick, he was inclined to save invention by trying it a second time.

By the simple expedient of telephoning a question he discovered that the F. J. Willards were domiciled at the Hotel Ambassador, thus adding Sherlock Holmes to his rôle of Monte Cristo. Then he hiked through the Wilshire district like a location man spotting the home of the queen of society. Why? He was looking for a suitable residence for the Willards!

Having at last found one with what he considered possibilities, and with a representative on the spot, to whom Lysander hinted that he was scouting for somebody big, he was assured that anybody he brought would be treated with consideration—which costs nothing. This accomplished, Lysander went home, dead tired, calling it a day and inventing a tune to "None but the brave deserve the fair"

After dinner, though, he wandered out on the porch, his spirits sagging into an unaccountable pensiveness. He felt, all of a sudden, terribly forlorn. And why! He had accomplished wonders—well, anyway, a good deal. In all the stories he'd read he couldn't remember a hero who had started out more propitiously on such a campaign. And come to think of it, that hero always won with an original idea like this. Invariably he turned some clever trick that introduced him favorably, and then—since "they" were made for each other. Still, Lysander felt blue. Miss Burd smiled and said it was a pleasant evening as she tripped out to a lecture. Mr. Tilbury, all dolled up and wearing an incredible necktie, waved a salute as he set out.

The screen door creaked, and Amy Sills came out.

"O," she said, "I didn't know you were out here, Mr. Pratt."

Lysander smiled his smile.

"It isn't going to make a difference, is it?"

"I guess not." And she smiled, too. And they spoke of the weather, and then she said: "Do you think you're going to like California?"

"No future tense necessary. I do right now. Look what it's done for me!"

"What has it done?" inquired Amy with rather a disconcerting directness, which she seemed to recognize herself, for a little color rose in her cheeks, though she did not try to modify the question.

Some color rose, too, in Lysander's. He could not very well confess that California had already brought him the mystery of love, and he had not, oddly enough, considering his youthfulness, crowed over his initial triumphs at the Sills' table.

"Well—ah—I've been awfully lucky."

"Yes?"

"Yes, you know I was anxious to get into something here—quickly. And that first night I came we spoke about real estate—you remember?"

"Yes." She seemed interested.

"Well, it struck me as just what I wanted. Something quick and——"

"What's your hurry?" asked Amy with a hint of archness.

"O—well—reasons." He was disconcerted for a moment, then finished with some excitement. "The next day if I didn't sell a house!"

She was plainly incredulous. "But—how could you!"

He told her gayly, not having before realized how pleasant is a confidant, and she listened with a little frown at first, but soon seemed most gratifyingly to share his triumph, saying:

"Wasn't that funny!" and "What do you think of that!" and "You've certainly made a fine start."

He admitted modestly that it wasn't so bad.

"And what are you doing now?" she inquired. "Have you gone in with this Mr. Anderson? Or will one of the big firms take you on?"

"Well, Anderson has a couple of other houses he said I could try selling, but just now I—I'm working on another idea——" He broke off with an embarrassed little laugh.

"O," said Amy. There was a pause. Perhaps she was waiting for him to go on, and he felt suddenly as if he would like to tell her all about it! But, of course, he couldn't do that.

It was dark now, and someway wonderfully sweet and peaceful. The air was soft as a caress from the hand of—Phyllis—and delicately perfumed with the mingled fragrances of many flowers. A few stars appeared, those wonderfully close seeming stars of California skies. Suppose that Phyllis were here with him in the sweet dusk! Amy was sitting quietly in the low porch chair, her slender figure relaxed, clear profile youthfully grave, something of wistfulness about her. An awfully nice girl, you could see that—and friendly, too. He cleared his throat.

"Didn't I see a movie down here a few blocks? Would you—what do you say we stroll over?"

"Why—yes, I'd like to," said Amy.

There is the confidence of assured position, that of the merely sophisticated, and that of the blissfully unaware of just where they are treading. Our dauntless Lysander, serenely trustful in his luck and in romance and in the coming right of things, artlessly (though he himself thought it most artful) entered the Ambassador Hotel and inquired for Mr. F. J. Willard!

And just as he had taken a card from his pocket, he happened to glance up and there crossing the lobby were Mr. and Mrs. Wildered that he had been such a fool as to assign himself to futile guard duty without having first reconnoitered. The situation seemed plain enough to him, and he was glad that Nancy was not there to ridicule him for his folly. The bootleggers must have landed their surplus consignment and hidden it in or about the shanty, leaving one or more of their number to guard it. Whether or not Sylvia had been landed also remained to be discovered, and Matt's pulses quickened on reflecting that this might very possibly be the case, as by this time the marine search had been abandoned as offering no further hope of success.

Matt now proceeded to organize his armed reconnaissance, which he hoped might prove a strong and fruitful offensive. He hauled the extinguisher from the blanket roll and assured himself that it was primed and ready for business. Then, placing his effects under the lee of a rock, he approached the cabin with the wary tread of an Indian brave.

The cabin was about fifteen by thirty feet in dimensions, with a door and two windows, which, as he approached, he discovered with surprise to be provided with glass panes. Disregarding the idea that any picket might be stationed on the outside on such a night, Matt walked softly to one of these windows and looked in, then caught his breath and stared a litle harder. For the briefest scrutiny showed the interior, while rough, to have been put in a condition of no small degree of comfort and more cleanliness than Matt would have suspected the bootleggers of caring to bother about.

By the bright shooting flames of the driftwood fire Matt could see evidence that the rough plank floor, worn smooth under the tread of sea boots, had been scoured, and it was spread with home made braided rag rugs of pleasing colors. There was a deal table with a student's lamp turned rather low, some books and magazines, a carafe of water, old fashioned chairs with seats of woven rush, and a looking glass over the mantel.

The cabin was divided into two rooms, the large living one and a smaller one partitioned off at one end. Matt observed that this partition had been freshly covered with heavy felt paper of the sort used for this purpose in camps and summer cottages. In one corner of the living room was a camp cot which appeared to be quite new, and lying on this was a figure over which a gray army blanket was spread. Even in the dim light and although a cushion of the sort used for launches or veranda hammocks prevented his view of the sleeper's head, Matt's heart gave a tremendous bound as he recognized the unmistakable contours of a feminine figure.

Matt's exaltation at this discovery might be likened to that of the hunter of big game, whose painstaking stalk has brought him within striking distance of a coveted but dangerous quarry. This danger lay in the other room, where no doubt an armed guard must be stationed. But the strategic value of the situation was all with Matt. He hesitated no longer, but firmly gripping the extinguisher in one hand, laid his other upon the latch of the door, which proved to be unlocked, opened it softly and without pausing to arouse the sleeper he stepped quickly to the door of the smaller room, flung that open and looked inside.

To Matt's extreme surprise his first glance showed this to be empty. It contained also a cot, a table, and washstand, but there was no sign of any occupant. Suspecting ambush, Matt turned quickly. There came a rustle and what sounded like a stifled giggle from the couch of the living room, and Matt lurched back against the partition at sight of Nancy's face framed in an aureole of blond disordered hair in which the mellow light of the dancing flames shone and shimmered.

The extinguisher fell from Matt's nerveless fingers as he stared amazed at this prodigy. Had a Bengal tiger been spread out upon that couch, he could not possibly have been more taken aback. In fact, it is probable that the presence of a tiger would have unnerved him less, for when all was said and done, he might have employed the extinguisher to the beast's immediate discomfiture, but as matters stood this very state of being was now entirely for Matt. There was nothing at all discomfited in the gust of laughter which burst from Nancy, who swung herself up in a sitting posture and surveyed his dripping figure with an expression of infinite relish.

"I expected you a little sooner," said she. "Did you get lost?"

"Whaa-at are you doing here?" croaked Matt.

"Making myself quite comfortable, thanks," said Nancy, "which seems to be more than you can say."

"You crazy girl—where's Murphy?"

"He has taken the wagon home, according to orders. I had him set me and my few effects ashore on the edge of the rocks."

"So Murphy's crazy, too."

"Who's looney now," mocked Nancy. "You see, Sherlock, Uncle Jerry and I agreed that you were too random to be let wander around here alone without a keeper of sorts, so I detailed myself to keep you from going quite off your bean."

"Do you dare to tell me," cried Matt, "that Uncle Jerry sanctioned this act of lunacy?"

"Quite so," mimicked Nancy in Matt's own dry utterance.

"Then all I can say is that the money spent on specialists has been wasted. What he really needed was a board of alienists, and so do you and May. As for Murphy, he ought to be stoned. Have girls' reputations become a negligible quantity?"

Nancy raised her hand to her pink mouth lightly to screen a yawn. "That superfluous noun, reputation, became obsolete in the war," said she. "There never was much sense in it, anyhow. It was as your Uncle Jerry says, merely the indication of an abstract idea, like democracy or prohibition; besides, everybody's a knight of the garter nowadays, with the motto Honi soit qui mal y pense. If a woman nurse can be with her male patient unchaperoned, why shouldn't a woman attendant be permitted the same concession as keeper to a poor young man admittedly non compos mentis."

These caustic words had a tonic effect on Matt, who began to breathe more freely again.

"It is very apparent," said he, "that I am the victim of a conspiracy. I see Uncle Jerry's guile in this. I might have guessed from the few remarks he made about you on my arrival."

"Straight symptoms of paranœa," murmured Nancy. "Delusions of persecution are the first indications, followed by the conviction of conspiracy."

"He is evidently determined to be rid of you at any cost," said Matt. "I suppose that when we step ashore he will meet us on the float with a 'bless you, my children,' and a gentleman in black clothes wearing his collar wrong side before. But I warn you, my dear lady, that there is many a trip twixt the marriage cup and the lip."

"Well," said Nancy, reflectively, "that ought to be some trip."

"It strikes me," said Matt, "that this one is that."

Nancy drew her feet back on the cot, and resting her chin on her knuckles, stared thoughtfully at her fellow exile.

"Well, now, Sherlock," said she, "do you know that it has struck me a bit that way myself. I'm glad you came just when you did. I was beginning to get a little nervous."

"Impossible," said Matt.

"No, really. There's something about all this that I don't quite get. This cabin all swept and garnished and furbished up. I'd counted on striking a little shanty that might be a shelter of sorts and good enough, considering the price of accommodations. But I hadn't quite counted on real windows and rugs, and a looking glass and a student's lamp, and the latest magazines and new mattresses and all the other trimmings."

"O, come, let's cut out the stage props," said Matt impatiently. "It doesn't take long to shift the scenery between the acts, and Murphy's a handy beggar at a pinch."

Nancy looked a little puzzled. "I don't think I quite get you, Sherlock," said she. "What has Murphy got to do with it. I've been thinking that these bootleggers do themselves rather well. I had understood that this was just a fisherman's shanty, but it seems to have most of the comforts of a home. There's a new pump over in the corner, and it sucks up nice fresh cistern water. Now, Murphy could scarcely build a cistern in the course of an afternoon, and it hasn't rained enough to fill it."

Matt perceived instantly that he had jumped to an entirely wrong conclusion. More than that, there had not been much excuse for such a jump, as the briefest glance about should have sufficed to prove that the rehabilitation of the cabin, though recent, had taken considerable pains. But another idea came flopping in on top of this, as often happens in the case of fiction writers.

"I see that I've nosed off on the wrong trail again," said he. "Somebody has fixed up this shack quite recently for some definite purpose, and it's got to be the bootleggers, because nobody else has been camping out here, or if they had they wouldn't go off and leave things in such apple pie order. But what stumps me is that none of this crowd that's been out here hunting for Sylvia has reported it."

"The same idea struck me," said Nancy. "Perhaps this island is so many miles off shore that they figured it impossible for her to drift so far."

"Well, they would be right," Matt admitted. "As a matter of fact, she couldn't; but all the same somebody would be certain to land here on the off chance and look it over, just as when anything is lost somebody might look for it in some spot where there did not seem to be any possibility of its being found."

Nancy nodded. "You have your lucid intervals, Matt," said she. "To claim kin with the relative occupants of your great mind, I may say that the same idea occurred to me. Somebody must certainly have landed here, if only to comb the beach for Sylvia's corpse or the canoe."

"And in that case," said Matt, "curiosity alone would have prompted a look into this cabin, and then they must have wondered who the devil had fixed it up and why."

"And where the devil they were?" said Nancy.

They stared at each other for a few moments in silence. The rain was beginning to drum upon the roof and the east wind, so deceptive when it starts in on a real carouse, slapped the top of the mud in the stone chimney in a manner to force some of the smoke back into the room. In the brief silence they could hear also a deep toned growl of surf which might the following day become a roar and might also be attenuated to a whisper.

Matt sank down into one of the straight backed chairs, which looked so horribly uncomfortable but were not, by virtue of their corded seats and backs and because sailor hands had made them.

"It's all past me, Nancy," said he wearily, "just as you are. I think you've done an absurdly foolish thing, and you may or may not forgive me for saying that I haven't much sympathy with this present day young girl assurance. I wish to heaven you were out of this."

Nancy, lying on her cot, braced both elbows as buttresses and clasping her hands with combative chin resting on her knuckles, stared at him with an expression which was lost on Matt because he did not happen to be looking at her. He was thinking that it was time to put another piece of wood on the fire.

"Why?" Nancy asked. "I should think you ought to be rather glad that I'm here."

Matt turned slowly and looked at her.

"That's just the trouble," said he.

Nancy sat suddenly upright and gave him an angry questioning stare. Matt rose in silence and stepping to a neatly piled heap of two foot length hardwood in the corner, selected a couple of logs, placed them on the fire, and stamped them down with his heavy hunting boot. Then picking up his blanket roll he stepped to the door of the little room.

"I'll break out at daylight to do a little beachcombing, but it's going to be a bad day, I think, so you'd better not go with me. Good night."

And he stepped inside the room, closing the door behind him.

In the gray dawn Nancy was awakened from a fitful sleep by hearing Matt moving about on the other side of the partition. She rose quickly, fastening the clothes which she had not removed, lighted the lamp, and, going to the pile of stores, got out a jar of ground coffee and another of sliced bacon with some eggs. Discovering an oil stove on the table by the window, she lighted this and proceeded to get breakfast ready. A comforting odor pervaded the room when there came two smart taps on the closed door of Matt's room.

"Come in," said Nancy.

Matt in boots and khaki breeches and flannel shirt, his face glowing and his thick wavy hair neatly brushed, entered.

"Good morning," said he. "This is mighty good of you, but you needn't have bothered."

Nancy returned the salutation a little frostily. She had not yet determined just what Matt had meant by his final remark on retiring the night before.

"I'm no slacker," said she, "and I'm going, too."

"I seem to have heard that phrase before," said Matt. He stepped to the door, opened it, and looked out. "Nothing but weather," said he. "Jolly bootlegging weather. Drizzle and a bit of wind, but not very thick."

"Shut the door," said Nancy. "You're filling the room with smoke. 'Do you think they'll come today?"

"Impossible to tell," said Matt. "It's a long shot at the best—our coming here—but it seemed to be the only clew that offered. My theory is that they cached their surplus stuff here to leave until deciding where to run it next."

"But if they've got Sylvia aboard," objected Nancy, "it wouldn't make much difference whether they had the whisky or not. They'd go to jail longer for kidnaping than for bootlegging."

"I don't believe," said Matt, "that they'll keep Sylvia any longer than they can help. The chances are that she'll get home before we do."

"Then why is this place all fixed up like this?" Nancy asked.

pers how, after McKay had looked the car over and gone, she, moved by some inexplicable impulse, had gone out and looked at it, too. She had felt—terribly upset—and had sat down on a box that was there in the shed to—to think it all over. And sitting there, just at the right angle maybe, she saw something hanging from underneath the car someway, and she had crawled under and pulled it out and—and it was this. All dirty, but she had washed it and—and—that's all.

How it came there no one would ever exactly know, since Henrietta was dumb. All that Lysander could think of was that the chain had become unfastened and fallen on one of Henrietta's wheels, and been thrown up in some way when it turned, to lodge on some little projection of her ancient frame. He got this out feverishly to Amy.

"You believe me, Amy, don't you? You know I didn't know anything about it. You believe me, don't you?"

"I do believe you, Lysander."

Solemnly his quivering young lips touched her forehead. Happy man, who when all the world doubts has one left whose faith is untouched.

But now! This costly linked mischief must be returned, and its return could be taken only by those blind ones as a confession of guilt.

"I'll go with you, Lysander," Amy decided at last. "We'll just tell them how it was, and they'll have to believe us!"

"I couldn't let you do that. I couldn't let you be mixed in it."

"I'm sure they'd believe me, and it would help straighten it out better."

"No," Lysander shook his head. "But it's mighty sweet of you. Besides, your mother wouldn't let you."

"That's a good idea," said Miss Amy. "We'll just tell her all about it and take her with us!"

And they did.

"Well," said Mr. Willard after it all, and his eyes had softened a good deal when they met Amy's spirited yet pleading ones, "it's a queer thing, but I guess I'll have to believe you, Miss Amy. And to make it right, I'm going to ask this young man's pardon, and urge him always to justify your fine faith in him." So after all he wasn't such a bad old king.

And then, just to finish it off, while the three of them waited for an elevator, the motherly woman and the pretty, eager young girl, and the solemn, boyish fellow, there emerged from the elevator the princess herself!—Miss Phyllis, all dolled up like a million dollars and leaving behind her an atmosphere of much self-satisfaction and the fragrance of an expensive perfume.

Lysander felt a light touch—Amy had slipped her strong brown little hand through his arm. Darling, stanch little pal—Amy. What if the dream didn't come true? Perhaps life is holding for you just around the corner the sweeter gift that is for you.

Lysander swallowed hard. "You know," he said in a voice he tried to make very casual, "I believe I'll go in with Alfred Tilbury after all. Seems a nice fellow, and I think I'd like it better than—real estate."

lard and Miss Phyllis! Here was the man he wanted to see surely put in his path by providence, and sublimely unconscious of effrontery Lysander started toward them.

Then a strange thing happened. Phyllis saw him, spoke a quick eager sentence to her father, and the three looked instantly at Lysander and half paused as if to await his approach! The amazing significance of this reached him even in the clouds where he walked—they remembered him. And as he stopped before them, though his knees quivered, his boyishly charming smile valiantly acknowledged the honor. The great man presented a masklike face in which his shrewd gray eyes coldly questioned the dauntless one.

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Willard," Lysander began pleasantly, all unaware how strange it was that he was not brushed aside like an inquisitive fly.

"I'm Lysander Pratt. I—I just wondered if I might speak to you about—about ——"

"About what?" demanded Mr. Willard brusquely, those eyes boring in uncomfortably.

Lysander was trying so hard not to be abashed. "I—wanted to try to interest you in a—a sort of proposition."

"What sort of a proposition?" snapped Mr. Willard.

Gosh, it was harder than he'd thought! Lysander gulped. "I thought perhaps you might be interested in a—a residence in Los Angeles."

For a second the great man stared at him, a gaze so searching that the poor boy felt the very laundry marks on his collar writhe in embarrassment. "What are you up to, anyway?" said the cold gray eyes in contemptuous speculation. Then with a suddenly cunning half smile: "I might be, at that. What's your proposition?" And he exchanged a glance with his wife and Phyllis, who had withdrawn a little.

Lysander explained in a few eager words that he merely had a house in mind that he would like to get Mr. Willard to look at.

"Just a minute," said the latter. He turned to his wife and daughter, and spoke in a low voice something to which they listened with a really extraordinary interest.

Lysander ventured now to steal a glance at his goddess, and he saw her with enchanted eyes in a "cloudy radiance." Adorable Phyllis! She had remembered him! How wonderfully things were going. Of course, he could hardly expect Papa Willard to present him at once, unless——. But no, as the great man turned back to Lysander, mother and daughter walked away leisurely in the other direction.

"Now," said Mr. Willard, "I'll look at your house. And we'll go in my car." There seemed an emphasis on the "my."

"Thank you, sir." Lysander's elation suddenly shriveled in spite of himself, for there was a something in the great man's tone, in his manner, that did not chord with this dizzying falling in with a strange young man's request. There was no amiable sympathy with young ambition on his grim face, no interest in the errand, rather a sort of watchfulness, a now just try something attitude that was squelching, to say the least.

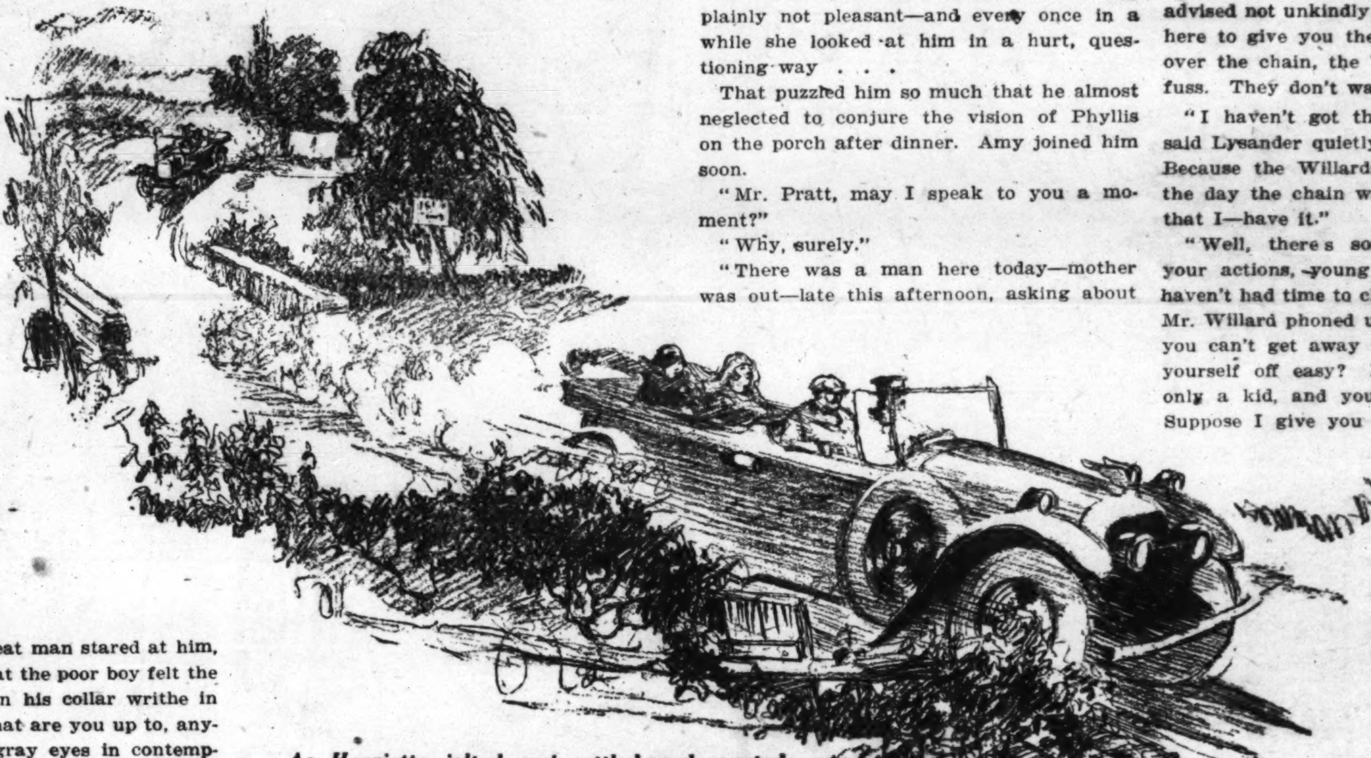
Lysander tried to think it was just his way. Besides this first conquest was nothing short of a miracle, and he must make the most of it. Why, it was the chance of his life. A great big thing to be thus piloting F. J. Willard; to be riding in the magnificent one within a week. In his wildest dreams he had not conceived more magic than this! Perhaps it was a dream. To assuage the doubt he surreptitiously pinched himself.

Having given their destination to the chauffeur, he proceeded to improve each shining moment with bright conversation. Or attempted to do so, but Mr. Willard began to ask questions, snappy questions about where had he lived, and how long had he been in California, and how came he in this business, and some others that seemed—well, sort of sly. Lysander, gulping occasionally, answered truthfully, although it really seemed that the more simple and straightforward his answers the less stock Mr. Willard took in them! Lysander couldn't understand it, but Mr. Willard acted as if he were trying to conceal that he didn't believe a word Lysander said!

They were met by the courteous agent, who showed them over the property, doing all the talking, to Lysander's relief, and treating him, too, quite tactfully. Mr. Willard acted decently (Lysander had a queer feeling that he might say something terrible any minute), and responded properly enough to the agent's efforts to interest him. But he ended the interview pretty shortly by saying that he had decided to have a country place if he bought at all. The agent assured him that his firm had magnificent places on its lists, and Mr. Willard said well, he'd see, as he climbed back into the car.

The agent shook hands with Lysander: "Much obliged anyway, Mr. Pratt, for bringing Mr. Willard around."

"Quite welcome, I'm sure," said Lysander.



As Henrietta jolted and rattled and snorted along, Lysander was rehearsing a series of highly romantic ways in which he would make Phyllis's acquaintance.

The magnificent one rolled away and he again essayed to be entertaining. Mr. Willard now merely said, "Ha," and "Hum," and "Is that so?"

They reached the hotel, alighted—but Mr. Willard did not ask the dauntless one up to meet his daughter. He looked Lysander steadily in the eye.

"Ah, thank you for your interest, Mr.—er—Pratt. Will you give me your address? In case I wish to communicate with you."

"O, certainly, Mr. Willard." Lysander fumbled for his carefully prepared cards. "Thank you so much. I—I—If I can be of any use to you, I hope you——" He stuck there.

"Thanks," drawled Willard, and for the first time his shrewd eyes showed a hint of amusement and—of perplexity.

Lysander walked away. He had done it! He had made the acquaintance of the king, and beheld the princess once more. And she remembered him. He had won to her side. The next time he would be presented to her. Had not the old man—that is the king—asked for his address, intimated that he would communicate with him! Would he have done that, said that, if he had not been favorably impressed? Of course he wouldn't. Phyllis, I come, I come. Gosh, she was lovely, O, lovely. There were at least two reels of this, and while his teeming brain dreamed them, his feet reeled off several aimless miles around and about, until he was brought suddenly back to earth by a sign which said, "Alfred Tilbury, Plumber."

Mr. Tilbury, wearing a grin on his dirty face, was just entering the shop and greeted Lysander with a cheery: "Hello, Pratt! Come on in and look us over."

Lysander preferred his dreams, but accepted the invitation by following the plumber into the dusty little shop, where he listened to a monologue on Mr. Tilbury's future plans. Little he guessed with whom Lysander had nobnobbed that day! Tilbury was going to take over a garage—had a chance to buy in good. Once Lysander would have been interested in a garage, but say, from now on he'd probably be associated with F. J. Willard!

"What you going into?" Tilbury finally asked.

"Oh, real estate, I guess," returned Lysander lightly.

"Real estate, eh?" repeated Mr. Tilbury thoughtfully. "All right if you're a big bug, but kinda uncertain for the little ones, I'd say. Thought maybe you might like workin' in the garage."

"Why, thanks. I admit I'm a pretty good mechanic, but—I tell you, Tilbury, I've got something pretty big in view just now."

"That so? Well, all right. Want to go over and look around anyway?"

Lysander submitted and accompanied the friendly plumber to the new garage, which was just around the corner. It looked a pretty good proposition—he was interested in spite of himself. But perhaps the important thing was that he and Tilbury did not get home until dinnertime.

Lysander saw at once that something had happened to Amy. She was pale, her eyes were wide as a child's who has been frightened, and she started from fits of abstraction when spoken to. It was something plainly not pleasant—and every once in a while she looked at him in a hurt, questioning way . . .

That puzzled him so much that he almost neglected to conjure the vision of Phyllis on the porch after dinner. Amy joined him soon.

"Mr. Pratt, may I speak to you a moment?"

"Why, surely."

"There was a man here today—mother was out—late this afternoon, asking about you." She twisted her hands together in a curious fashion.

"Yes? What'd he want? Leave his name?"

Amy's eyes searched him almost piteously. "He—he was a detective," she whispered.

Lysander stared. "A detective! Why, what did he want?"

"He wanted to know all about you. How long you'd been here and what you'd been doing and—and what sort of fellow you seemed to be."

"Me? Why, what——! Why, I haven't done anything. Why, that's funny!"

His obviously sincere astonishment seemed to relieve Amy and a little color came back to her cheeks. "Haven't you any idea?"

"Not the remotest."

"He even went out and looked at your car."

"He did!"

"And went up and looked in your room. And asked if any men came to see you or if you stayed out nights. You don't know—you're sure you don't know——" There was pleading in her low voice. Then suddenly: "O, there he is! He's come back!"

Sure enough! a thickset little man was coming up the walk, and Lysander, as he turned to face him, looked into steady, shrewd eyes a good deal like Mr. Willard's in a face rather hard but by no means disagreeable.

Amy had slipped into the house.

"Mr. Pratt?" began the caller in a businesslike manner.

"Yes."

"My name's McKay. See the young lady's tipped you off. Let's sit down."

"Certainly." Lysander was surprised and curious, but not frightened. Why should he be frightened?

McKay coolly inspected him. "Now, see here, my young friend, you put up a great front, but we've got you dead to rights. Why not just hand it over and save a lot o' commotion?"

Lysander grinned. "Is this a joke? Hand what over?" But his throat was dry.

"Mrs. Willard's chain," replied McKay in a steely voice. Lysander's smile went out like a light switched off. He met McKay's eyes squarely, but no words came.

"I'll just give it to you straight," that gentleman went on easily. "Miss Willard recognized you today as the fellow in the garage the day the chain was stolen. I suppose you snipped it off in the cute little way you fellows have. Of course, they thought you had it and we've been looking out for you. You had your nerve facing Mr. Willard again like you did today. Something up your sleeve, I suppose. You know you had no more connection with that real estate firm than I have. What was the big idea? I'm curious." McKay lighted a cigar and smiled complacently.

Lysander merely continued to look at him. There was a numbness about the boy's heart. They—they—thought he was a thief. Perhaps nothing ever again hurts in quite the same way as the first blow life gives to young faith in the dream. His thought of Phyllis—and her thought of him. All his fine plans. This was how she had remembered him.

"Better make a clean breast of it," McKay advised not unkindly after a moment. "I'm here to give you the chance. If you hand over the chain, the Willards won't make a fuss. They don't want publicity. If——"

"I haven't got the chain, Mr. McKay," said Lysander quietly. "I've never seen it. Because the Willards happened to see me the day the chain was lost is hardly proof that I—have it."

"Well, there's something funny about your actions, young man. Of course, we haven't had time to check you up good since Mr. Willard phoned us this afternoon, but—you can't get away with it. Why not get yourself off easy? Now, see here, you're only a kid, and you don't look so tough. Suppose I give you till tomorrow to think it over?"

"A hundred years to think it over won't make any difference."

"O, yes, it will," McKay rose. "No use tryin' to beat it, you get me? Well, goodnight, Mr. Pratt. See you tomorrow." He walked down the steps, rather jauntily, down the walk.

Lysander sat motionless. They had nothing really on which to hold him. They just suspected and were trying to bluff him. But it wasn't that.

"Lysander!" The wistful voice of Amy at the door made him jump. He rose quickly, and went in to her as she switched on the economical little lamp that made the darkness of the shabby hall visible. He could see that his face frightened her without knowing how boyishly stricken it was. She kept raising trembling hands to her throat and letting them fall again, while her eyes searched him and pleaded with him—and caressed him.

"Has he gone?" she breathed. He nodded, wondering.

She moved quite close to him, so that he could see a tiny pulse beating in her throat.

"Couldn't you—tell me about it, Lysander?"

"Why, Amy, there's nothing to tell. It's a mistake. I can't understand how——" He stopped.

She turned to close the front door carefully, and waited a moment, listening with her head on one side. The house was quiet, save for a faint tap-click of Miss Burd's typewriter away off upstairs. Outside a mocking bird trilled a few notes in the great pepper tree.

Amy held Lysander's eyes with hers; she breathed quickly and her lips trembled. She put her hand to the breast of her gingham dress and drew out—something that ran and glittered merrily through her shaking fingers like suntouched fountain spray—a diamond and platinum chain, value ten thousand dollars.

How long they stood staring at each other, with the thing like a marvelous serpent dangling between them; then Lysander wet his lips and a hoarse whisper issued: "Where'd—you get it?"

"You know," her lips formed.

"No, no. No, I don't!" Hysteria shook his cautious tones. "I don't know, I tell you." Not knowing why, he took her by the shoulders and held her so. "Tell me," he commanded.

She did not try to release herself, profound mystification frowning on her young forehead.

"It was in your car. Didn't you—put it there?"

His amazement was so genuine. "Of course not! How could it have got there?"

She told him then, in eager, panting whis-

sort of penal servitude would be the worst, but I fancy that in jail they lay off a chap so long as he behaves himself."

Uncle Jerry chuckled despite his stress of mind.

"All the same I think you'd be happier with a young and pretty and long haired jailer," said he, "and if it's a question of personal liberty, that's got to be nothing but a name, anyhow, like democracy—sort of an abstract idea."

Luncheon was announced at this moment and Matt, whose sleuthing had not impaired his appetite, did justice to it, then went to his room for a nap, for he doubted that he would get much sleep that night or any night to come until something happened to relieve him of coast guard duty.

Coming down at about 4 o'clock, he was met at the foot of the stairs by Nancy, who regarded him with hot, indignant eyes.

"Well, you're a nice one," said she.

"What's the matter now?" asked Matt.

"You went and told your uncle that you were going to use the launch tonight."

"Well, what of it?" asked Matt.

"You did it on purpose to shut me out after telling me that I was to run you out there."

"I believe I also said that you were to leave me and run the launch back," said Matt. "Have you any objection to the society of Murphy? He's a perfectly honest, level headed Irishman, who has been with Uncle Jerry for the last ten years. But, of course, one can never tell nowadays when anybody might turn kidnaper or something, so if you feel any doubt about it you had better stay home."

"Don't be silly," snapped Nancy, "or at least any sillier than you can help. I'm surprised that you're not afraid that Murphy might claim a share of the reward."

"That settles it," said Matt grimly. "You don't go. Remember I warned you about canning that reward stuff."

"O, very well," said Nancy. "Then maybe Mr. Donovan will take me."

Matt stared at her aghast. "Well, upon my word," said he. "So you've got down to blackmail."

"You seem to forget," said Nancy, "that this water part is my end of it."

"No danger of that," said Matt, "but let me tell you that if you butt in on my job, you, and Donovan, too, for that matter, your end of it will be too hot to hold."

"I guess Donovan can take care of himself," said Nancy.

"You do, do you? Then wait till I get a shot at him with the extinguisher." Matt's voice had a savage cut to it. "And you'd better stand clear where your own lanterns of the soul might get red, white, and blue."

"You brute!" hissed Nancy. "I believe you're just nasty enough to turn that thing on me."

"In the words of our late enemy, war is war," said Matt sententiously. "All right, then, come along with me and Murphy if you like."

This pleasant tête-à-tête was interrupted by May, who arrived at that moment in the car, coming from the Gates'. She told them that Donovan had interviewed the agent who had leased the old Putney place to the supposed diplomat, whose name had been given as Gonzolas of Buenos Aires. The agent had seen only the young man who professed to be the secretary, and had told him that they had come to the United States on a mission which had to do with Pan-American interests and trade agreements or something of the sort. As reference he had given a letter with the heading of the Argentine embassy in Washington and signed (supposedly) by the ambassador, and had paid three months' rent down.

"Didn't Luke Simmons look them up any more than that?" asked Matt, whose retentive memory had clung to the name of the local agent given him by his poor complexioned driver.

May glanced at him in surprise. "No, Luke did not," said she. "He was too pleased and puffed at renting a place not in good repair. Really, Matt, your acquaintanceship in this place is quite surprising."

"Not very," said Nancy, with a gleam of malice in her eyes. "Matt had probably been talking with him about what this place might be expected to bring."

Matt sighed. "O, woman with a serpent's tongue," he murmured.

"Well, I'm not all serpent anyhow, nor vulture for that matter."

"No," said Matt. "You are, as I've already remarked, a pure white dove of peace. When you go into town, May, I wish that you'd ask Luke if he's ever seen me in my life."

"Stop fighting," said May sternly, "and come out on the new veranda for tea. This thing has done me up. I'll need a nurse myself unless something happens pretty soon."

Matt avoided Nancy for the rest of the afternoon, this requiring a certain amount of skillful sidestepping, because she feared he might execute some flanking movement and steal a march on her, and it was difficult for him to go up the stairs without meeting her on the way down.

Dinner passed in a sort of trained animal way, the mastiff and leopardess with May as "dompteuse." Then when it had got dark, Matt, carrying a blanket roll in which were bailed up sundry household utensils requisitioned from his friend the chef, and other accessories of a rough camp, made his way down to the landing without taking the trouble to acquaint Nancy that the sailing hour had arrived. He found her seated in the boat, talking amiably with Murphy, a stanch Hibernian of middle age and the discretion which should accompany these years.

They put off in a thick viscid darkness resembling that of the night before, but without the fog. The conversation was not animated as they sped over the inky surface, but once or twice when Matt addressed some casual remark to Murphy, he got the curious impression that the faithful Irishman was secretly amused at something. This puzzled Matt, who could not see anything funny about it, and for Matt to be puzzled was for him to seek immediately to know the reason why.

"What are you grinning at?" he demanded presently when Murphy turned away his face as though to hide such evidence of silent risibility.

"Me grinnin', sor?" asked Murphy in a tone of hurt surprise. "Sure, now, and why should I be grinnin' at the idee of your stoppin' out there, all alone on the off chance of them bootleggers secretin' their liquor there," for Murphy had been informed to some extent of the object of Matt's exile.

"That's what I'd like to know," said Matt, "but all the same you were. Come now, where's the joke? I'd like to give my own face a surprise by cracking a grin at the prospect ahead of me."

"Sure, now, Misther Holmes," said Murphy, "in these dry times 'tis enough to make a Paddy grin to think of stumblin' on lashins and lashins of liquor. Now do ye not think 'twould be better if I was to stop out there wid ye and lave Miss Nancy drive the wagon home?"

"No, I don't," said Matt. "If we were to find it you'd probably be singing 'The Rocky Road to Dublin,' and scare every bootlegger out of the place," and at this statement Murphy found excuse for ridding his system of a series of chuckles.

"Murphy," said Matt sternly, "I'd never have thought it of you. You're the only one I've seen who seems to be able to laugh when everybody else is holding back their tears, and you've known Miss Sylvia since she was a little girl."

"There now, Misther Matt," said Murphy, "'tis because from the first of this turrible business I have had a hoonch that she is in no great danger. Sure, and have I not seen her get into her canoe fully dressed and upset a purpose and sphill the wather out and get back into it again just be way of a stunt."

"You have, have you?" said Matt. "Well, then, all I can say is that you might have given Uncle Jerry and Mr. Gates the benefit of that assurance."

"They have seen her do the trick themselves, sor," Murphy answered, "so why they should insist on Miss Sylvy's bein' drowned is more than I can understand."

The motor was running well, as good motors should in damp night air, and it was not long before the dark outlines of the island interrupted the flat, inky waste ahead. Matt examined it through the glasses which he had slung about his shoulder.

"The only place where you can land me, without the risk of wiping your screw on a rock, is a little cove about half a mile from the eastern end," said he.

"I know the spot, sor," said Murphy. "There is a bit of sandy beach."

Matt was steering the boat, and presently they glided in between ledges which put out on either side. Cautiously approaching one of these, the boat's bow was laid up against it, when Matt flung his blanket roll and sack of provisions out on to the wet kelp which covered the rocks and managed to get ashore dry shod.

"Good night," said he curtly. "You needn't come for me until day after tomorrow night at this time. But you might take a look out here every night at about this time. If anything happens so that I want you, I'll burn the old shanty down there on the eastern end and you can see the blaze."

"A foine idee, sor," said Murphy. "We shall be on the watch for your beacon. Good luck, sor," he chuckled again, and the launch backed quietly away, then turned and headed in for the shore.

Matt carried his impedimenta back some distance on to the moor, then sat down and lighted a cigarette. He had no intention of spending his nights in the shanty, no matter how bad the weather might turn. In fact, he did not expect to avail himself of the shanty at all, feeling sure that this was the spot where the bootleggers would land, and wishing to keep it under constant observation. The character of the ground lent itself excellently well to an ambush, for there were big boulders and a number of scrub cedars tenaciously gripping with wide spread roots the rocky base just under a thin layer of mold.

It then occurred to Matt for the first time that he had let himself in for a weary vigil and without much to go on, so far as any great hope of success was concerned. He had leaped at his conclusion about the bootleggers having a cache there, just as he had leaped at that of the pseudo-diplomats having some good reason for their extreme measures for privacy. But it was at least comforting to reflect that since the first guess had hit the mark, so far as an unlawful motive was concerned, just so might this second one be productive of some result.

Still, it is one thing to form a theory and another to put one's self to considerable discomfort in acting upon it. Matt's nature was cheerful and gregarious. He liked to be in the midst of people, nice people when possible, but anyhow, people. He might have made an excellent sleuth if called upon to follow a trail through populated communities, but it is doubtful if he possessed the temperamental qualities which we are told on the best authority go to make the Royal Mounted Police such indefatigable man hunters of criminals who seek to lose themselves in the vast solitudes of the great northwest.

Such would not have been Matt's game at all. He would have preferred to see every murderer in the Dominion of Canada get clean away and live happy ever after to spending a week with no other company than himself and nature, notwithstanding the fact that he had nothing against either. But now, because of the limitations of such companionship, he found himself feeling astonishingly dismal, and the prospect of a good many hours of such society gave him what our English kinsfolk describe as "the hump."

To make matters worse, the weather, which a lying porch barometer had registered as fixed fair, did not back up the costly instrument, and a fine drizzle began presently to fall. It was the sort of drizzle which plants roses in the cheeks of Scotch and Irish girls and plants discontent in the breast of a solitary man when there are no such flower beds in his vicinity. Matt possessed a rather catlike distaste for cold dampness, more so, in fact, than for the freezing wetness he had suffered in Flanders without a murmur of complaint, for, like many high strung natures, Matt's was of the sort to be more disturbed by the buzzing of a mosquito inside his tent than the roaring of a tiger just outside it. The bite of a flea might have driven him nearly wild, whereas the bite of a mad dog he would have accepted with a calm and oriental fatalism.

Sitting now on his blanket roll with the drizzle gaining in force and volume, Matt came to the conclusion that he had been hasty in deciding to do a solitary sentry go on Hog Island. The action was too rallentando, to use a musical term. After the way in which the time machine he had been riding for the last thirty-six hours had been hitting up the pace, the relaxation of his present position was of a sort to make him feel as though being whirled off a rapidly revolving planet to drift through the negative atmosphere of interplanetary space.

Then, as the heavy minutes dragged past and the drizzle became an actual searching drenching rain, with a chill east wind driving it on to do its worst, Matt became seized with a sudden bitter exasperation, this directed principally against himself. He felt that he had been a fool to let himself in for this sort of thing. It was not his style of job, but the sort that might have been filled much better by a professional policeman content with the pay he was drawing for the service and of a turtle-like patience, so that he might draw himself within the carapas of a waterproof hat and cape and make his mind a blank until something came along to register an impression on it.

Matt's trouble was that he could not make his mind a blank, and that tormenting little devils were dancing through it. Most of these mocked him with Nancy's face, or kicked at him with a flash of Nancy's ankles, or "sassed" him in the accents of Nancy's voice. And Matt realized with fury that, like the fool she justly claimed him to be, here he had voluntarily exiled himself far beyond the reach of retributive chastisement of these little devils. He had set himself this unpleasant task and dignity compelled that he see it through. To quit now would put him in the position of the imprisoned martyr to a cause who had announced that he is going on a hunger strike and then some hours after dinner time falls for a hot roast beef sandwich.

It had been Matt's intention to stand watch through the night and get his sleep throughout the day, an arrangement which should have been feasible enough in the middle of July, when no continuous rain should be expected.

But there was something now in the tang of that gentle northeast wind which seemed to say, "J'y suis j'y reste," or here I am to stay. Taken full and by, Matt's position soon became about as dismally uncomfortable as one can very well imagine, and his thoughts turned toward the shanty about half a mile away across the moor. He remembered it as a loosely built but sound enough two roomed cabin, which the local fishermen had thrown together for a sort of club, as one might say, to foregather in to save the time, and of later years the gas consumed in going to and from the cod and pollock grounds.

Finally Matt's scanty supply of patience gave out. He rose and shook the water from his raincoat.

"The shanty for mine," he growled to himself, and gave an inverted inward grin to think how pleased Nancy might be in her comfortable bed at the thought of his perching out there like a cormorant or dejected bittern. Nancy had predicted something of this sort for him and it had come to pass. He was almost sorry that he had not permitted her to share his vigil.

Having by this time worked himself into a rage which to some extent mitigated his chill, he slung over one shoulder the sack containing his supplies, and hoisting his blanket roll over the other, he started across the moor in the direction of the shanty, reflecting that he might at least keep warm and dry until daybreak and then patrol his beat and search for the cache which he felt sure the bootleggers had made.

It was very dark, and Matt bolstered his pride by the reflection that no bootlegger with a fluid drachm of sense would try to approach the island with its outlying reefs and ledges on so thick a night. In fact, it required no small science of navigation to lay a course across the moor for the fisherman's shanty, owing to the inequalities of the ground, which was studded with rocks as if cunningly arranged to impede his progress, like the pins in a bagatelle board which prevent the marble from rolling merrily into its goal. Two or three times Matt distributed himself and his duffle in the dripping gorse and barked his shins and was, when all is said, suffering far less from cold than heat, when on making his way around a hummock he saw not far ahead that which fetched him up all standing, as sailors say.

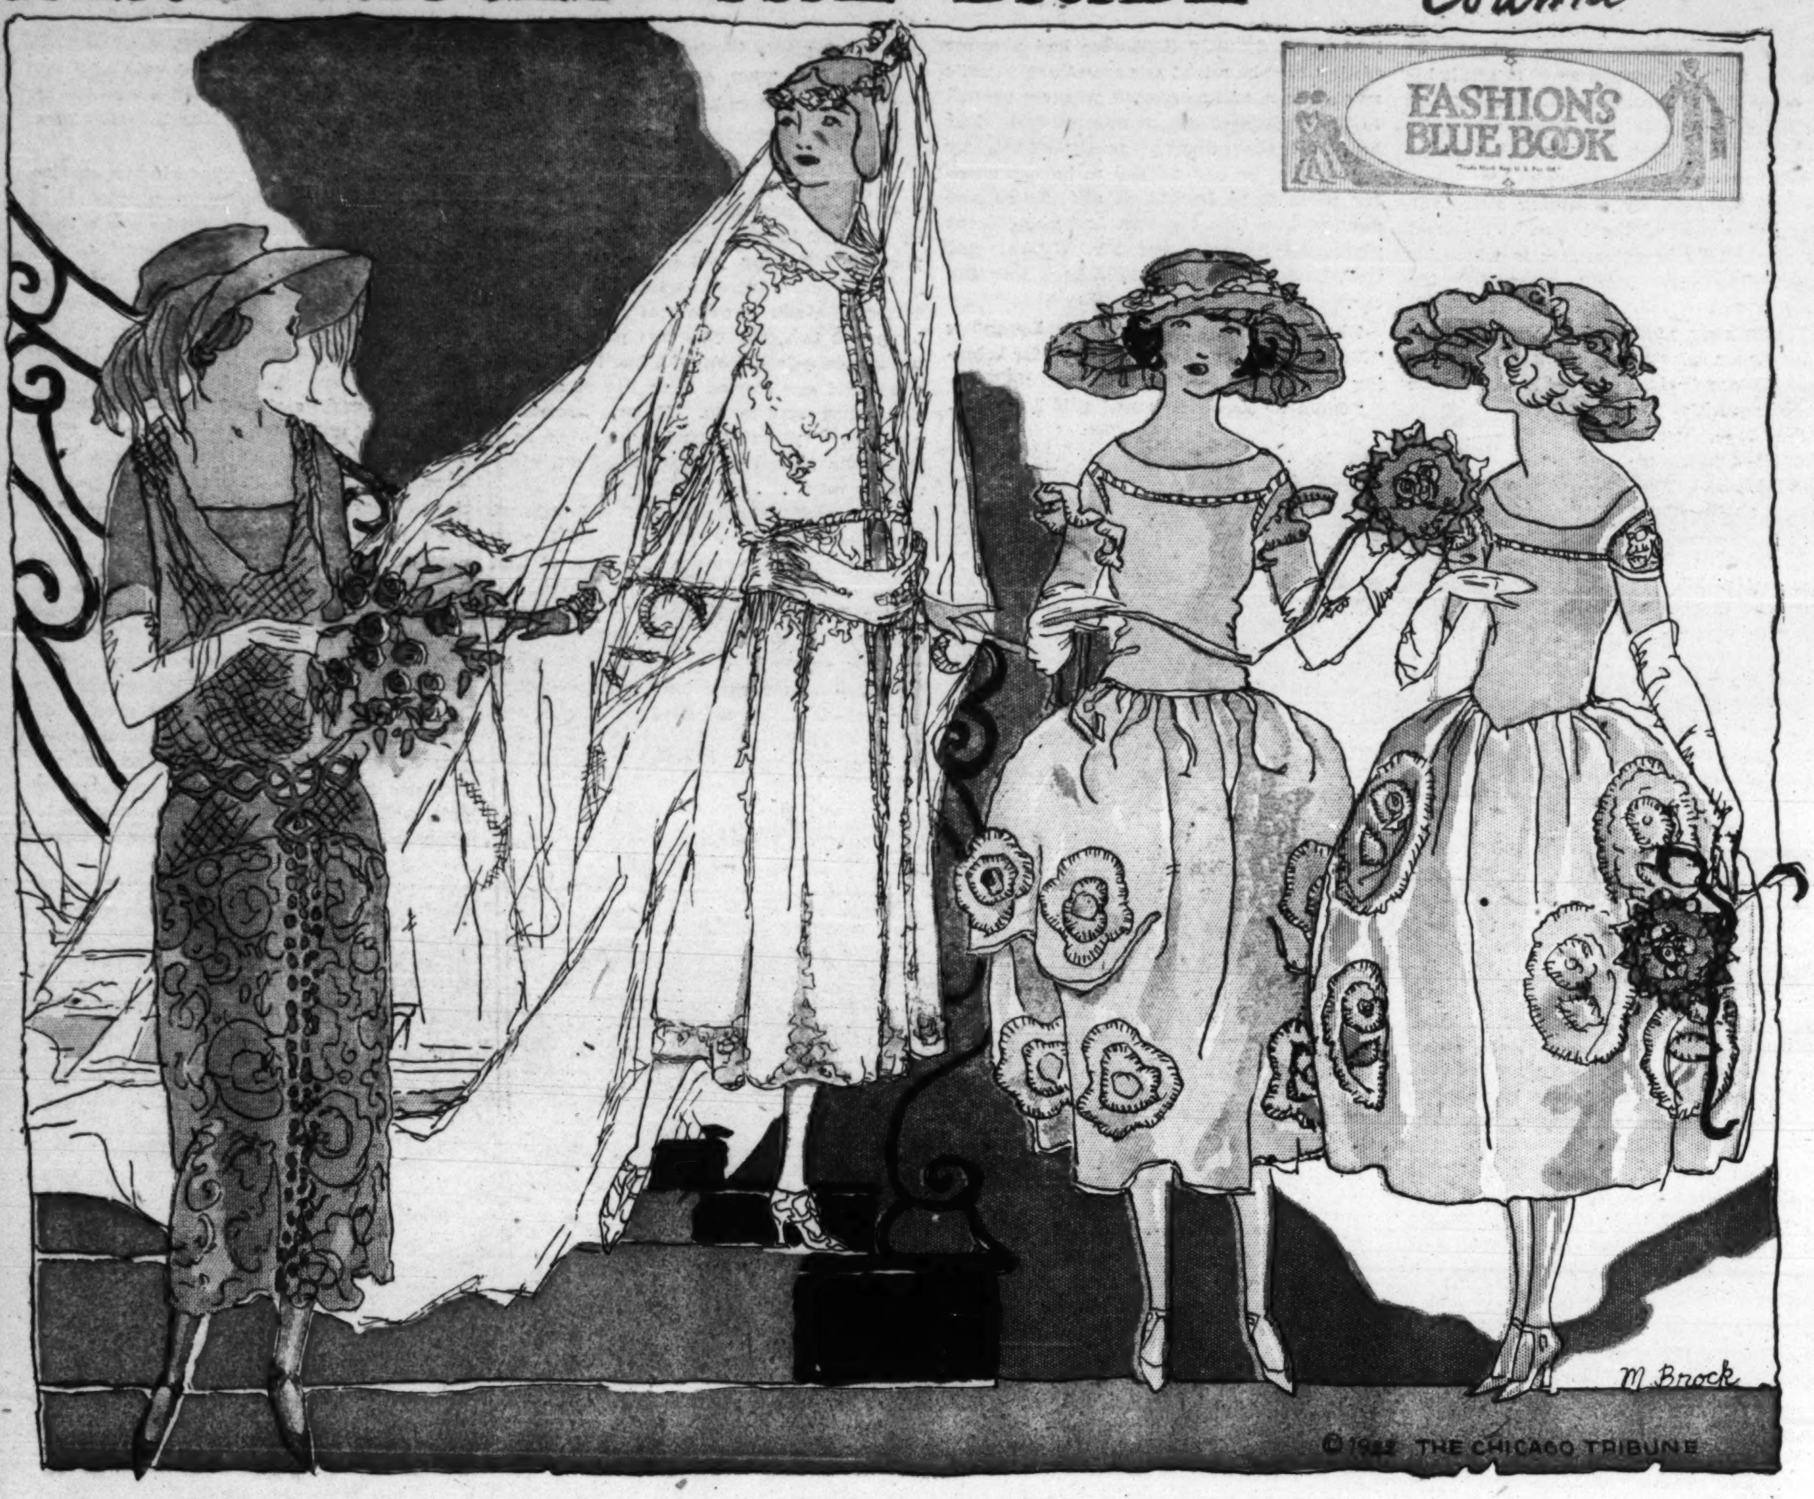
This came in the form of a faint glimmer of ruddy, flickering light. At the same moment the soughing east wind, which blew from the cabin to him, brought to his nostrils the unmistakable and at most times comforting scent of wood smoke.

Matt sniffed that tainted gale with a tremor similar to that of the stag which at eve had drunk his fill. But there was this difference between stags, that Matt, much as he might have enjoyed doing so, had not drunk his fill, because May ran a teetotal establishment, partly because she was strongly in sympathy with the movement which had dismayed a good part of the country and was instrumental in causing the present crisis, and partly because a large part of Uncle Jerry's illness had been due to a bachelor indulgence in beverages containing more than one-tenth of one per cent of alcohol. This not extreme, yet working havoc with the uric acid diathesis of a strong man of sedentary life. Uncle Jerry, by rights, should have spent two or three hours of each day in knocking gutta percha balls into small holes in the ground, but had preferred employing the same amount of time in knocking ivory ones into the pockets of a pool table.

Matt's first emotion was one of triumph in his theory and a pleasant indication of his wisdom in no longer keeping a wretchedly uncomfortable vigil on the moor when his quarry was comfortably ensconced within this rude but sufficient shelter. He won-

HERE COMES THE BRIDE

by Corinne Lowe



A BRIDE in silver cloth and silver lace is attended at the left by a matron of honor in blue satin draped with lavender lace, girdled with silver metal, and wearing a hat of silver cloth decked with gray uncurled ostrich tipped with silver. At the right a bridesmaid in rose taffeta, with appliqued flowers of the same material, establishes a relation between the other bridesmaid in blue taffeta, trimmed a little differently with the same flowers of self material, by a lavender taffeta hat and a bouquet of violets. Both gowns have a touch of silver thread on their trimming. All attendants wear long white glace gloves.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—In the days of our mothers a wedding gown used to go off like a rocket. It was so separated from the clothes of every day, so intensely ceremonial in its contours and texture, that it could seldom be mustered out for post-wedding service. At times it was made over, but this remodeling was so patent you could always tell what one flippant young bride called an "altar-ation."

Today the wedding gown is usually an intensely wearable garment. This is due to the fact of an expanded range of fabric possibilities and to our modern tendency toward making the dress for the important day a reflection of other modes. Of course, we are fortunate in the latter respect. For our every day modes, borrowed from classic drapes, from long waisted medieval gowns, and from either Spanish or Second Empire full skirted fashions, are infinitely better adapted to the pageant of the bridal procession than were the every day fashions of, say, 1900.

For today's page I have selected a medieval gown of silver cloth adapted from a model of Lanvin's. I selected this with what I admit to be a mental bias. To my mind there is nothing more stately, more fitting to the drama of the day, than these medieval gowns. Yet by choosing this mode one pays no toll to Hymen. For the gown when dismantled is perfectly adapted to any ordinary function.

The model opens in front to show the same silver lace forming the cuffs of the long, tight sleeves, and revealed by the shortness of the skirt in the back. Silver cord marks the natural waist line, while a wide girdle of self material dipping down in front produces the emphasis on the moyenage contour. A cowl collar is used here, but for this may be substituted, of course, the more conventional bateau shaped neck line. In conjunction with the gown is a cloud of white tulle fixed to a wreath of orange blossoms in a design which recalls poignantly, as the dress itself, the Florence where Botticelli painted and the DeMedicis held their court.

This same frock may be carried out, of course, in other materials. A white satin brocade, for example, would be beautiful. However, the "silver wedding" has been pushed forward twenty-five years, and every season there are more brides who decide upon the glittering metallic cloth in preference to white. Frequently the silver is confined merely to trimming, however, witness to which fact is found in numerous lovely white tulle frocks made in Second Empire style which introduce silver ribbon to edge bodice and skirt flounces. One of such frocks, inspired by a model from Lanvin, has a quaint bertha defining the off the shoulder line, and this is encircled by a garland of tiny silver rosebuds made of ribbon and repeated at the hem of the long, wide skirt.

These Second Empire bridal frocks nearly always have short sleeves—often of the puff variety. In other modes, however, one observes a growing inclination for the long sleeve. In this connection one recalls the beautiful wedding gown which was designed this autumn by Poiret for his niece. This gown, echoed here in America by several fashionable establishments, had a long, rather tight fitting corsage with a bateau neck line and a circular skirt which, gathered over the hips, nearly touched the floor. The sleeves were long and bell shaped, and they flared over puffs of white mousseline reaching well down over the wrist. But the design of this frock was really subordinate to the material, which was a marvelous piece of white satin brocade in which doves appeared in relief bolder than the floral design where they were entrenched.

This mode points not only to the long sleeve but to the circular skirt. This latter, like spring, is coming slowly down our way. And it is undoubtedly true that many April brides are bound to appear in this mode.

The veil and its fastening leave us free nowadays for much self-expression. One of the most popular fashions in this accessory at present consists of the Spanish comb in white over which is draped—in a way picturesque as the mantilla of Barcelona—the long tulle veil. Sometimes the comb is supplanted by a stiff piece of lace imitating its contours. Another mode—and this was suggested by M. Poiret—is to fit the veil closely to the head by means of orange blossoms and then, permitting the face to show through an opening in the veil, drop a front length of tulle to the hip line. In the back, of course, the veil is as long as the skirt.

For the bridal party velvet has registered just as strongly as it has at other social events. Thus, Miss Adelaide Kip Rhinelander was attended at her marriage last month by a maid of honor in dark red velvet and by six bridesmaids in king's blue velvet. All of these wore hats, shoes, and stockings to match, and even the ribbons tying their bouquets were included in this harmony. However, many brides continue to insist upon more variety, and for those of this mind we suggest the costumes shown today. This color scheme has been worked out in the orchid tones, which will probably always be favored for the wedding party. The bridesmaids' frocks may be of either taffeta or faille.

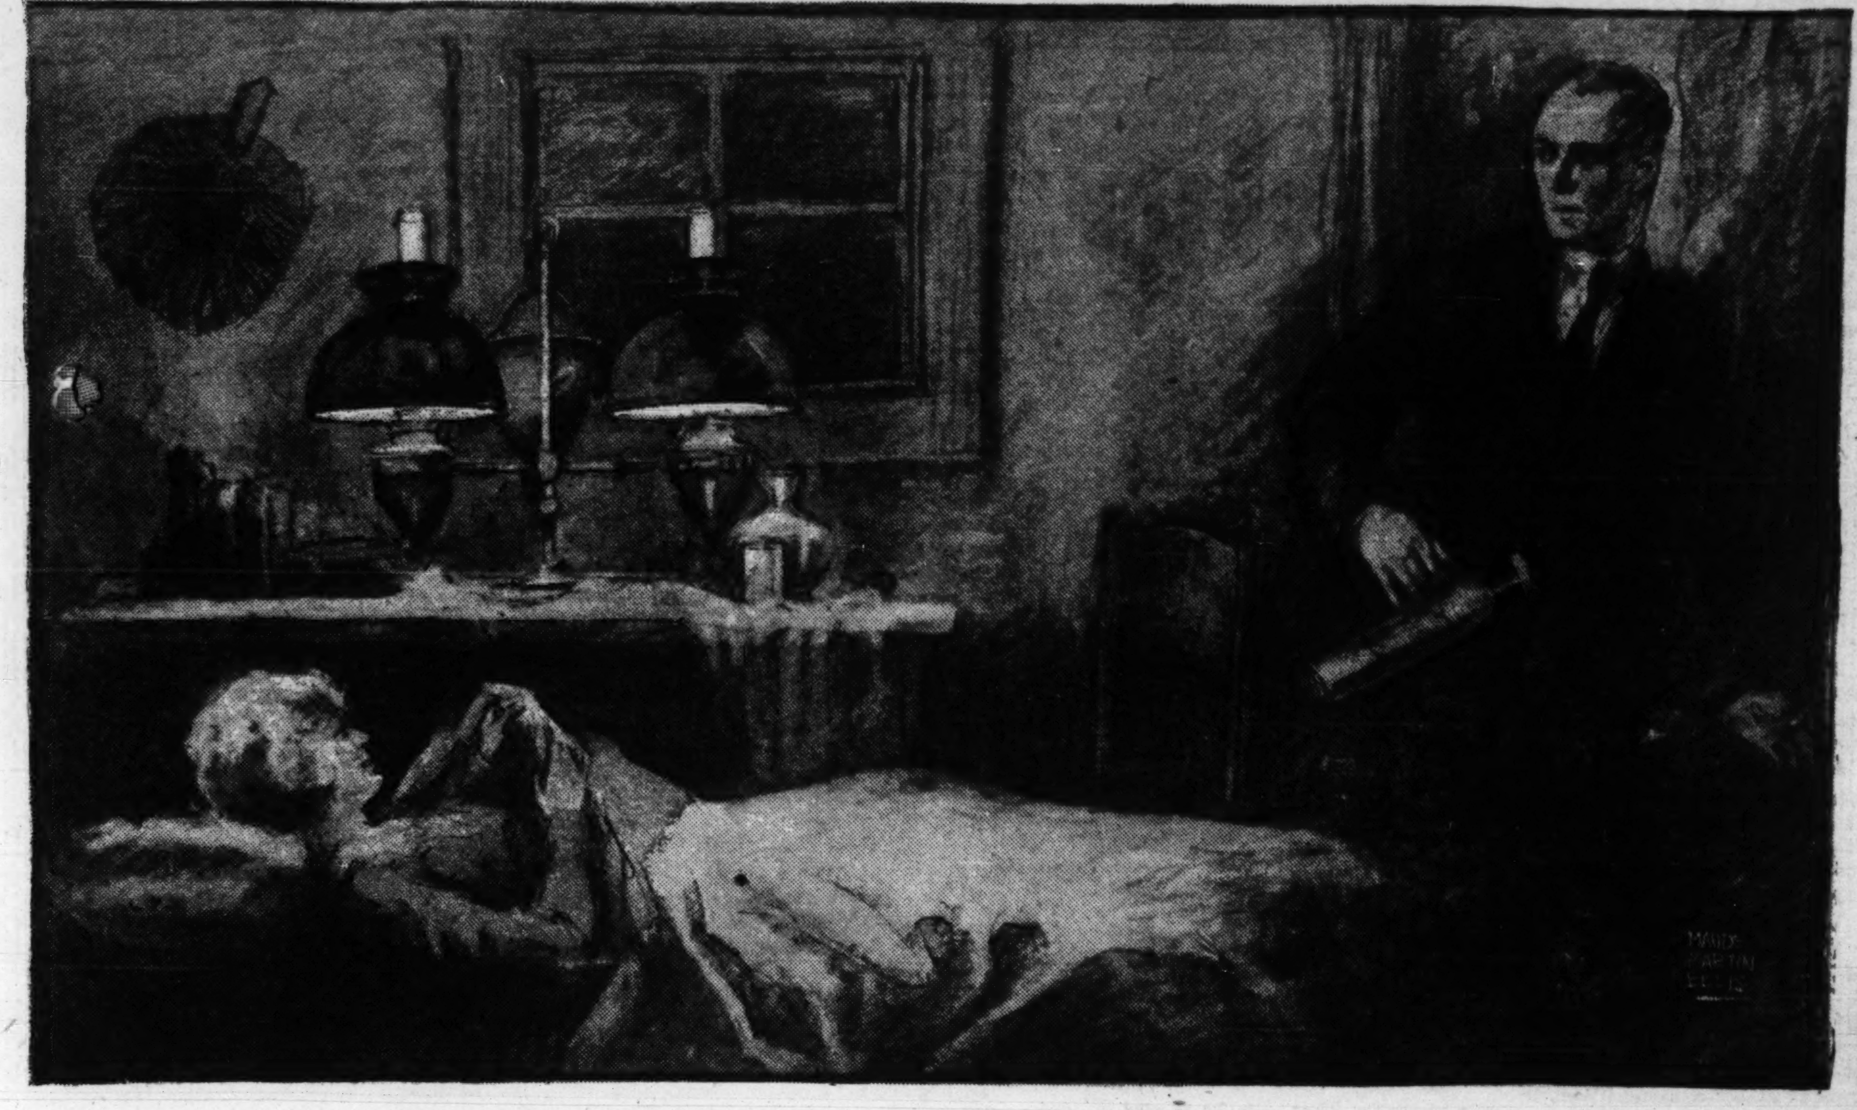
$100,000.00 Reward!

Blue Ribbon Fiction

by HENRY C. ROWLAND



The fire extinguisher fell from Matt's nerveless fingers as he stared amazed at this prodigy. It was Nancy!

SYNOPSIS.

Matthew Holmes' speed boat is wrecked while he is on his way to interest his uncle, Jeremy Taylor, in a new fire extinguisher. Landing at the old Putney place, he is greeted by three ferocious dogs and a mysterious foreigner. He turns the extinguisher upon all four and is taken away in a car piloted by one Bill Emerson. Bill reveals that Sylvia, heiress of Hiram Gates, the millionaire, and fiancée of Freddie Griscom, has disappeared while canoeing. Much to his surprise, Matt is greeted warmly by Uncle Jerry, who has risen from his supposed deathbed to marry May Upton, his pretty nurse. Matt has been in disfavor with both, but now Uncle Jerry regards him as a rescuer, as beautiful Nancy, his wife's sister, is "running the place." Nancy and Matt promptly clash in a battle of wits. Nancy asserts Sylvia either has been drowned or has eloped with Sam Sprague, the shipbuilder. Matt declares she has been kidnaped for ransom, having in mind the foreigners at the Putney place. Nancy whisks him over to the Gates place, where they find a reward of $100,000 has been offered for Sylvia's return. Accompanied by the fire extinguisher and Nancy, Matt visits the Putney place and sees a launch glide out. "Sylvia is being taken away," he thinks. But the launch takes no passenger. Soon it returns and three men load its cargo of wooden cases into two limousines. "Whisky runners," cry Matt and Nancy, disgustedly, and go home. Nancy advances the theory the bootleggers may be holding Sylvia captive, and the two trail a suspected "bootleggers' ship" to a nearby island, then turn back, much to Nancy's disgust. Next day they raid the Putney place, but too late. The foreigners have fled.

SIXTH INSTALLMENT.

The Secrets of the Island.

"PERHAPS you are right," said Nancy. "As Donovan said, the rum runners knew that the region would be searched, and they could not stand investigation. Then your own invasion of the Putney place at noon with your extinguisher might have aroused suspicion."

"Yes," said Matt. "they might have thought that I was a whisky scout and that I'd dumped the boat on a rock as a pretext for demanding aid and comfort and to get a chance to snoop around the premises."

"Well, so much for post mortems," said Nancy impatiently. "It's not much comfort to think that it wouldn't have made any difference anyhow, whether we'd gone last night or not. But it would have made a lot if you'd reported what you suspected yesterday afternoon."

"Quite so," said Matt, "and it would have made a magnificent fool of me if they'd turned out to be harmlessly disagreeable diplomats after all."

"That wouldn't be such a novel experience, would it?"

"Perhaps not, but none the less unpleasant. You may recall, however, the way in which you received my kidnaping theory."

"You did not give us all the facts on which you based it."

"I'd given them to Uncle Jerry, and in many ways I consider his intelligence quite on a par with yours. He almost persuaded me that I was tilting at a windmill, but fortunately not entirely."

"Well, then," said Nancy, "to get on with your plans and not to waste any more time in vain excuses, what was your objection to telling Donovan about our expedition in the launch? And if you ever give me another jab with your elbow like that you're apt to get one back with something even sharper."

"I held it back," said Matt, "because I was afraid that if I told them what we knew they would go flocking out to that island and scare our birds away again. I consider that to be a one man job, and I propose to tackle it alone."

"I'll go——"

"No, you won't," Matt interrupted, "or at least you may go, but you can't stay. If it's a clear night, you can take me out there in the launch with a blanket roll and three days' rations, and then if you don't hear from me by the end of that time you can come out again and bring me some more."

"Do you mean that you are going to stay out there alone?" Nancy asked.

"Yes. There's an old shanty on the eastern end of the island, and I can camp there and go on coast guard duty."

"What's the good of that?" Nancy asked.

"What I think," said Matt, "is that they had a big consignment of booze which they intended to put ashore at the old Putney place. Then, on being scared away from there, they unloaded only as much as the cars could carry, and thinking that the schooner might be overhauled they went out to the island, which may or may not be a rendezvous, and hid the rest of it somewhere out there. I may be able to find this cache from their tracks, and if so, I shall stick around and wait for somebody to come after it."

"That's not a one man job," said Nancy.

"Well, I propose to make it such," Matt answered stubbornly

"You are a glorious fool."

"Thanks for the 'glorious.' Now if you'd said avaricious our partnership would cease. You may not believe me, but I don't think I'd take this reward, anyway. I've about made up my mind to compromise by letting them pay my income tax."

Nancy was silent for a moment, possibly through some faint, almost atrophied sense of discretion. Then she asked. "Do you think they had Sylvia aboard the schooner?"

"I do now," said Matt. "Last night I thought she was in the house. But since they had made up their minds to fly the coop it would have been safer to carry her off aboard the schooner than in a car. As soon as they get all their booze distributed they will probably set her ashore in some lonely place and do a fadeout. The chances are that they are nearly as anxious to get safely rid of her as we are to get her back."

"When do you want to go out there?" Nancy asked.

"After dinner tonight."

"Have it your own way, then," said Nancy, abandoning to Matt's surprise, any further objections to his scheme. "I must admit that May is right in saying that if you are a fool you are at least a nervy one."

"That's worth a little," said Matt.

"You'd better take something with a longer range than that extinguisher."

"It's hardly necessary. If there is any scrapping it will be close up and the good old extinguisher has got about fifty rounds. Besides, you're not apt to miss, as you can swing it like a machine gun, and I'll take some more ammunition."

The plans of the campaign were interrupted by their arrival at Uncle Jerry's, where they found May awaiting them with a disappointed face. She had already learned by telephone of the failure of the raid, and she looked at Matt with, as Mr. Chesterton might say, "a sort of hopeful hopelessness."

"Donovan thinks he may still catch them up," Matt told her, "which makes me think Mr. Donovan is a natural born optimist. But whether he does or not, I still believe that we are going to hear from Sylvia before long. Does Uncle Jerry know?"

"Yes," said May. "He got too hard to hold and I had to tell him. He wants to see you right away."

Matt found his uncle sitting by the open window in a Morris chair. There was a gleam in the deep set eyes, and the corrugated face, which suggested the face of a bloodhound, wore an expression which had struck fear into the heart of many a business or other adversary.

"Confound you, Matt," said Uncle Jerry, "why couldn't you have ordered this raid yesterday while there was yet time."

"Well, Uncle Jerry," said Matt, "I've always had so much respect for your acumen, that when you hooted the theory down I decided to do a little scouting first."

"That's what makes me so sore," said Uncle Jerry. "It struck me as wilder than bobcats, but I might have reflected that almost anything is apt to happen nowadays. Look at that morning paper. Nothing but holdups and bootlegging fights and kidnapings and graft. The world's gone crazy since the war. What is there to do now?"

"I've got a sort of a kind of a near hunch, uncle," said Matt, "that I may be able to pick up another loose end before long. I'm going to start after it tonight."

"You've accomplished one thing, anyhow," said Uncle Jerry. "Hiram Gates called me up and said that you'd saved him from going off his chump. See that you don't let him down again. Now what about this hunch?"

"I think that Sylvia has been carried off aboard the rum boat," said Matt, "and I'm going to try to get a line on her. That's about all I can tell you just now."

"But you haven't seen the boat," said Uncle Jerry. "Darn it! I wish I could get hold of Sam Sprague. I called up his yard, but he's still off down east somewhere, they don't know exactly where. Anything you want? A boat or car or money?"

"I could do with a little of the latter commodity," said Matt modestly, "and I'll need the launch a couple of hours tonight."

"Help yourself from that upper side drawer in my desk," said Uncle Jerry, "and I'll tell Murphy to put himself under your orders. You can depend on him to do as you say and keep his mouth shut."

"Thanks, uncle," said Matt cheerfully, and stepped to the desk. "How much shall I take?"

"Take the whole damn roll. You don't think Sylvia's come to any harm?"

"No, sir. Neither does Donovan. Bootleggers are not exactly like the regular criminal thug."

"I hope not," said Uncle Jerry. "If they were this country would have a criminal population of about everybody opposed to the Volstead act." His eyes softened a little as they rested on his nephew. "Glad to learn that you and May have come to a better understanding."

"So am I, uncle."

"Now if you could manage to do the same with Nancy, you wouldn't have to worry about your income tax."

Matt raised his eyebrows, which were black and heavy and would no doubt one day bristle with guard hairs like those of his uncle.

"Well, as for that, uncle," said he, "I haven't yet quite made up my mind which

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

SQUARING THE SHOULDERS.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—(Special correspondence.)—It looks a little like a Roman toga, doesn't it? They say that Roman influence is strong, and this would appear to be some variation of it. On inquiring what the difference between the Roman and the Greek influence might possibly be, I learned that the Roman flows and the Greek is more square. In other words, if your shoulders slope you can wear Greek lines and pay the cost of squaring them a little. But if they are square—"boyish," as one rather elderly woman describes hers—you would better favor the elongating influence.

Mme. Sorel is presumably somewhere approximately the normal as to shoulders, for she has placed the order for one gown each representing the two influences. One of them—would you believe—is modeled on the Winged Victory's costume. Somebody inquired whether an electric fan went with it to blow the gathers, for the movement to the draperies is the feature about them, I believe, that is prized in art.

But the dress of the illustration is the one showing the Roman influence. You see it is composed of about a mile of material that swings downward from the shoulder and flares over one hip, whence it crosses the back and is caught on the other hip.

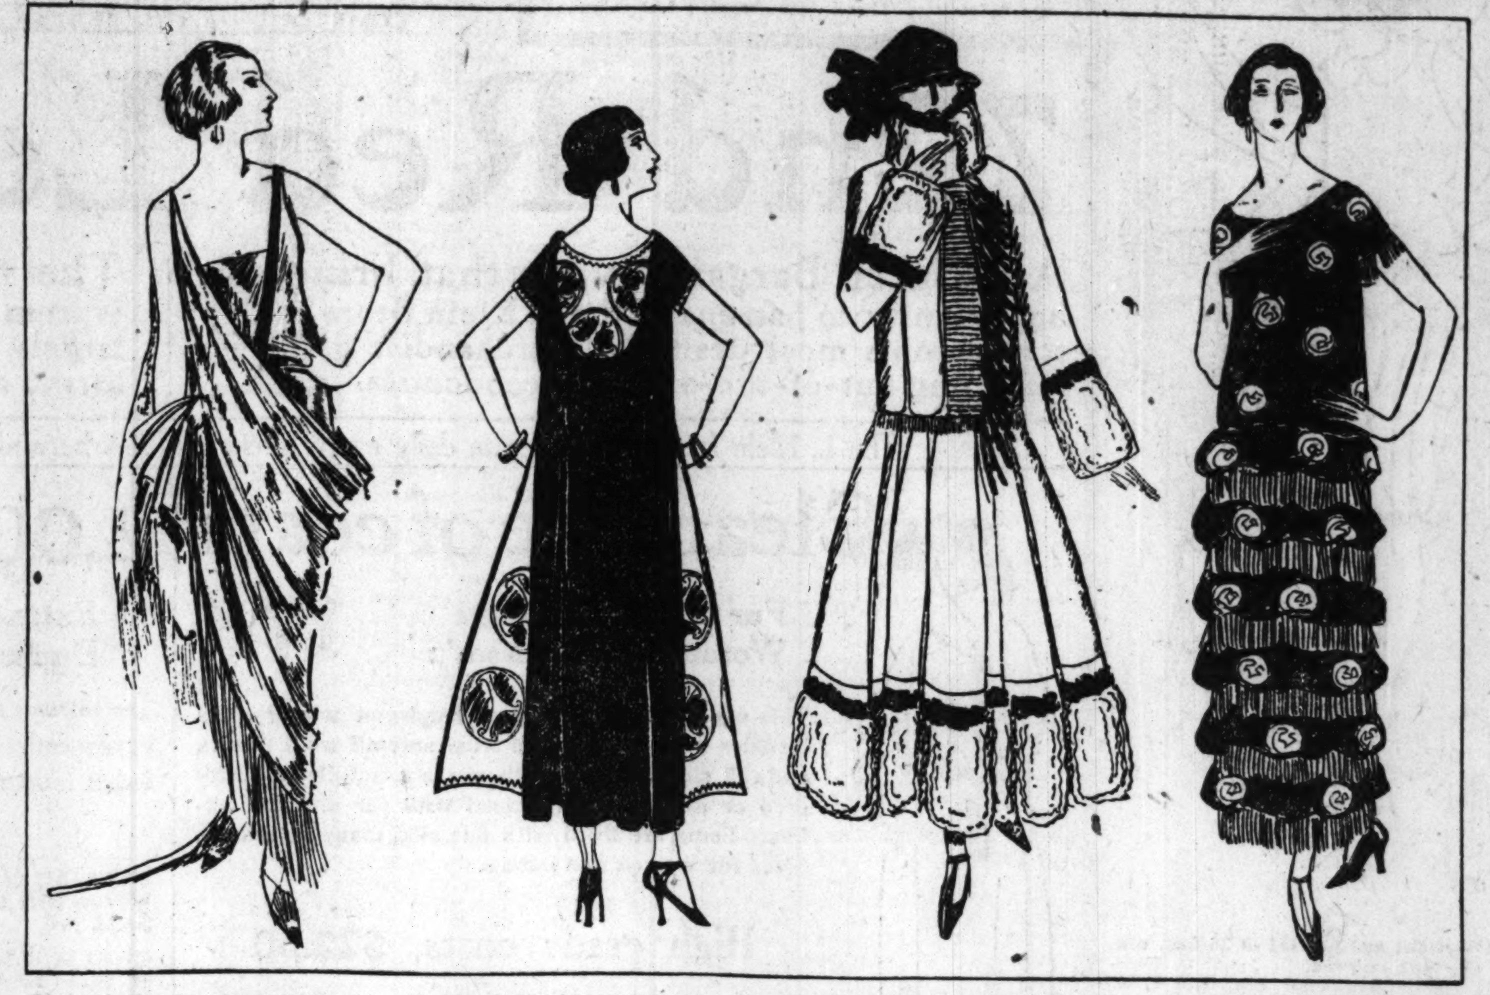
All the movement of the dress begins on the one shoulder, and, starting from this point in the back, this Roman toga experienced what you might call an anti-climax into modernity by coupling itself with one of our present day capes. And yet not quite one of these, but something more individual. The piece of material falls from the one shoulder only and, therefore, into a half cape with a flare to it, the other, as well as the back of the neck, being left perfectly bare.

But only a part of the story of this costume has thus far been told; the second part carries even more of a message regarding all fashions. The material is double faced, of gray and white satin, heavy; goods with two surfaces to them will be popular this spring.

Of course, the two colors used together constitute a garnishment. The other item of importance is that the V shaped line down the left side of the front of this dress is of bright red. It is fashionable for gowns of a neutral color to have a length of red somewhere on them.

Indeed, the styles of the moment are concerned with colors. Which will be fashionable and what shades go together? All the dressmakers' horses and all the dressmakers' mannikins have not yet killed black, but they are using it as a foundation and piling it with colors in beads and embroideries. Red beads on black are smart. So also is the chemise frock. I think it will take its place in history along with Greek Winged Victory costumes and Roman togas. Indeed, the costume presented herewith of Mme. Sorel's is nothing but a chemise dress with a Roman toga over it. Molyneux is the author of this one and the Winged Victory costume as well.

At least I did not deceive you in the matter of the capes. I have a feeling they will only come into their real vogue this spring. The accompanying evening dress by Worth carries one as garnishment. The dress is Italian renaissance in spirit and is of black chiffon, embroidered in motifs of gold, yellow, red, and blue—all dull in tone—thus illustrating the above point about black carrying heavy garnishment in color. Red outlines the curving bodice. The tooth shaped edging to the cape is in silver.



Of double faced satin in white and gray, showing present tendency to classical drapery.

Evening dress with cape hanging from shoulders. Red outlines the curving bodice.

Coat showing what promises to be line for spring; full skirt gathered on straight bodice.

Gold and black brocade showing Victorian movement; puffs of material between ruffles of fringe.

This is a winter coat, but I had it drawn because I think it carries a lot of line that will be fashionable this spring. Poiret clings to this silhouette, usually more exaggerated, through all the fluctuations of style, and it would appear he would come into his own presently. I sometimes think he draws his in too much at the waist for us. But the one here outlined is perfect for Americans. It is straight as a die to the waistline, and then fastens to a gathered skirt. It is smoothly tailored over the shoulders; perfect shoulders are essential to this type of coat.

The present model is of mustard colored yellow kasha, edged round bottom with gray Russian lamb, to carry out the effect of the collar and the cuffs of the same fur. It is banded in an edging of beaver, and a gold dull band edges this second fur. The Russian movement is continued in the ornamentation down the sides, that might be a part of an officer's uniform. It consists of horizontal tubes in black braid, finished with tassels. Molyneux made it.

The hat accompanying is one of Spinelly's new ones. It is in black satin with a big bow on the right side.

The fourth offering reminds me of the Victorian pictures of the day when bustles prevailed. Rodier decreed that this period should live again, and at his word it is springing into life. The dress is of black and gold brocade. It is circled with old gold fringe that matches the design in the material. Between these ruffles of fringe runs rows of the puffs of old. Poiret is the designer.

Without going too far, that umbrella movement might be said to have taken. Vionnet is using it with a vengeance. She is halving not one umbrella and for the hips only, but she takes a second, performing the same operation on it, speaking, of course, always in figures—and hangs it fore and aft of the skirt.

The other night there were four of these Vionnet dresses at the dinner dance at the Ritz. For dancing they give a beautiful effect, being fairly straight in line until one steps, when they flare like a ballet dancer's.

Is Marriage a Failure?

Why do so many marriages go wrong? What are the underlying causes of happy marriages? Are there any happy marriages? What is the matter, if anything with marriage, the institution?

W. L. George, the English novelist, investigated 150 marriages. One hundred and sixteen cases he eliminated as unsuccessful; in five cases the husband was unfaithful; in ten it was the wife; the husband disliked the wife in three cases and in seven it was the wife who did the disliking. Only nine marriages, Mr. George says, were "apparently successful." "Marriage," he adds, "is on its trial before a hesitating jury."

Look over the marriages you know yourself. How many are successes; how many are failures? And why?

The Tribune will pay $1 for each letter published on the question: Marriage—what do you think of it? Address Marriage Editor The Sunday Tribune.

Thrown On Her Own.

I married a southern girl, two years out of college. Her contact with life and her ideals were exclusively social. She had never peeled a potato. Her mother, I often thought, would be shocked to discover any practical tendency in her daughter. The business of a woman, in her view, was to shine socially. Nothing else mattered. If daughter wanted a book, she called Rosa, the servant. She had never dressed without Rosa's help.

On her wedding day she started with me for the east. And there we set up housekeeping at once. Today she is an immaculate housekeeper, a topnotch cook, and a responsible mother. There is no affair of the home but she administers it, accountable alike for the buying of necessities and for adapting them to use. In acquiring personal responsibility she has lost none of her southern aptitude for society. She dresses well, is a charming hostess and a social favorite.

It gives me pleasure on every occasion to express to her my appreciation, commend her cookery, praise her hospitality, admire her dresses, buy her a hat—when I can—kiss her when I leave the house, greet her similarly upon return, discuss with her all plans and designs, and make her my pal. I choose her company in preference to any other I know.

Whatever success we have had we attribute to our determination to subordinate every consideration to the welfare of the home—and to noninterference from outside influences.

The talk of marriage as "on trial before a hesitating jury," like the talk of the eighteenth amendment as on trial, is merely talk in "bohemia." It's the worthiness of the contracting parties that's on trial. Successful marriage is a matter of personal character, of moral standards. J. A.

How They Change.

"Before Fred and I were married," said a young matron, "he couldn't be careful enough of me at downtown street intersections. 'Let's wait until the traffic slows down,' he would say, drawing my hand protectingly through his arm, 'I'm not taking any chances with my precious girl along.' But now Fred puts junior on his shoulder and strides through the crowd, while wifey straggles behind with the baby's bottle and blanket and three parcels. On the opposite side Fred glances over his shoulder with, 'Made it, eh? You did pretty well to dodge that auto, and how you got ahead of that street car I don't see. Here, hold the baby, will you, while I get a cigar?'"

Which is half the trouble with married life. We don't keep up the pretty politenesses of courtship and honeymoon days. Mrs. Ten-Years-Married, once so charming in lavender morning dress when she poured her intended's week-end coffee, sometimes eats breakfast in bedroom slippers and dusting cap. And her husband, who shaved twice a day when sweetheart was around, alternately takes in a mouthful of hot cakes and a paragraph of the morning paper, entirely collarless.

Little Miss Delight used to save up bits of gossip, funny stories, happy surprises to tell Prince Charming the next time he called, but Mrs. Housekeeper too often regales her tired business man with complaints of the milkman.

And the lover who told his sweetheart that their fireside evenings at home should never be interrupted is the same man who now goes to the phone and says, "Hello, Bill. Can we arrange a little game tonight?" L. H.

All the Horrors of War.

Sherman's definition of war has nothing on the state of matrimony, as I view the scene of carnage on the floor of the living room after ten husky youngsters have deposited their holiday wreckage. I feel like sending a riot call for the state militia to police the house and clean up the débris.

Marriages are popularly supposed to be made in heaven, but they have a generous portion of the opposite locality sprinkled along the route. The monotony of married life exists only in fables. In reality it is just one thing after another, and the poor mother has no respite from the rapid succession of convulsions, croup, contagious diseases, broken bones and scalp punctures.

The crown of parenthood is full of thorns and the sleep of a mother of ten is only a state of exhausted semiconsciousness when the loud dropping of a pin on the floor brings her instantly upstanding, while the father turns over on his good ear and leaves her in undisputed possession until daylight, when he again assumes his despotic sway over the entire household.

Take my advice, girls, don't do it. Wear a hair shirt for a constant irritant, get a bulldog to growl, a lamp chimney to smoke, train a parrot to swear, and you will have all the comforts of home, with the added advantage that you can ditch the whole business whenever you care to. A. C.

How to Use the Patterns

EVERY woman who does her own housework will welcome a pattern of an apron like No. 9941. One is usually dressed in something pretty and attractive for afternoons at home, and unless there is a large apron at hand that is easy to get in and out of one is apt to come to grief during the getting and serving of dinner.

Percale, gingham, sateen, or unbleached muslin will be fine. If the material has some design in it, finish all edges except the bottom with a bias binding of some contrasting plain color. If the material is plain, like unbleached muslin, face the tops of the pockets and finish other edges with bindings of gaily colored chintz. A solid color in percale or gingham would be attractive with the finishing edges done in checked gingham.

After the pockets are basted in position on the apron, baste a small piece of linen tape on the under side at the top of each pocket at each end so that when the pocket is stitched to the apron the stitching will go through the tape and will help to prevent the pocket from tearing the apron if it should be caught in something.

The front of the waist extends into a belt at each side, extending around to the back, where it should be fastened with two buttons and buttonholes. A strap extends down each side of the back from the shoulder, and is stitched to the belt at the waist line. Shrink the material before cutting into it, and be sure to make the belt loose. It will then go easily over a sash—or at least will not crush anything that is underneath it.

No. 1253 is straight of line, simple in detail, and up to date in style. It is made to slip on over the head and should not be difficult to make. Thirty-six inch material will cut to good advantage by this pattern, and the chart shows the best way to lay the pattern on the material. The front is cut in one piece, so is the back. The slight fullness at the wast line is confined by stitching casings on each side of the front and back at places indicated by perforations on the pattern. Through these casings elastic is run and stitched through to the dress at each end to hold firmly in place. The waist line is intended to be slightly low. See that the perforations for the casings are in just the right place before stitching.

The string sash should be made of the dress material, and for this style dress long sleeves would be preferable.

These sleeves are made to fit well by means of three upward turning plaits at the elbow on the under side. Before stitching them down baste them in, baste the sleeve together, and try on, taking care to have the sleeve pulled well up where it belongs; then bend the elbow to see if the fullness is thrown where it belongs.

Pateern No. 1254 is made with a seprate slip-on blouse, opening at the back at the neck, and with an underwaist closing down the back, to which is attached the straight skirt.

The underwaist would naturally be the first part to be made. It should have large armholes, an easy fitting neck, and be loose at the waist line. Lay the hems down each back piece, and in fitting see that they lap exactly their width. A fitted facing about two inches wide makes the right finish for the armholes.

The skirt pattern is marked for plaits, although it can be gathered if one prefers.

The overblouse is not at all difficult to make. In finishing the opening at the back a narrow facing should be attached to the left side, so that if it spreads a little it will not be noticeable.

If this pattern is used for a 4 or 6 year old child, some sort of wash material will be suitable; if for an older girl, either wash or woolen material will look well.

No trimming is needed, but if one wishes some little decoration—a small monogram on the left side of the front—will be smart looking. Not elaborate letters, but something rather severe in design. Of course, contrasting color or colors can be used.

A Little Dash of Powder and a Little Dash of Paint

by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—This story is not for the flapper, the deb, nor the subdeb. It is for the girl of umpity years, to whom the little dash of powder and the little dash of paint will make the said young lady the colorful dear she ain't.

The young thing in her 'teens has all the colorfulness of youth, or should have; therefore, she is going to spoil a good cause by robbing the toilet table of her older sister. And she is hereby urged not to do it, for the reason that sister's toilet table represents sister's strife to attain the thing the young girl already possesses. If we could only get that truth planted into the youngsters' heads there would be more pretty young misses floating up and down the avenue, wouldn't there?

But, as I said, this is not a sermon for young girls. It is distinctly for the girl of more mature years, whose confining work, perhaps, or whose neglect to keep up physical exercise leaves her a trifle faded and jagged and on whose cheeks a deft touch of nature faking, if deftly applied, gives a brighter note to the general impression.

Nature Improved Upon.

There's no use arguing against the use of beautifying cosmetics. Being beautiful is too much a woman's business these days to expect her to restrain herself in the face of the pleading ads and the possibilities of makeup well done. So instead of standing on the side of the road and ranting as the parade goes by, says I to myself, "I'll just find out for the benefit of my readers a few tricks of applying makeup so that the curse of the extreme moralist may be modified by clever application."

Although it may be loose moralizing from a male point of view—this excusing rouge application on the grounds of artistry—there are few of us umpity yeared women who do not put some faith in the cabinet that hangs over the wash bowl or in the manifold shaped boxes that line our dressing tables.

So, if we can't be cured, how we can be more happily endured seems the right angle of approach, does it not, girls?

Masculine Point of View.

My first idea was to aproach a man with a good slant on woman, and I chose Otis Skinner, knowing how he slants whole matinées of them, and has been doing so for years. But Mr. Skinner, true to his sex, indicated a strong preference for the lady sans rouge, sans lipstick. Yes, he even said he'd rather kiss a girl without than with. Undoubtedly his stage kisses have surfeited him, for stage lips are necessarily heavily laden.

He said, "Well, any way, a pretty woman doesn't need it, and a homely one doesn't make herself prettier by the paint box route, does she?"

Which I granted was a good enough argument from a male point of view, but how does a poor male know whether the pretty one is not pretty because of a wee dash. That's why I realized the futility of approaching a man on a distinctly feminine topic.

So, hearing that Ina Claire had the reputation of being the best makeup artist on the stage, I corralled her in her dressing room, and gathered some of the good tips I was looking for.

A Tip for Nonprofessionals.

"I don't know whether she uses makeup on the street or not," said the person who introduced us, "but if she does, she does it so well you are in doubt about it."

Which, in my opinion, is the highest form of flattery in the art.

As luck would have it, Miss Claire was dressing for the street as I dropped in back stage, and was dusting a powder puff lightly over the faint bits of coloring lightly applied to her lovely skin.

And, by the way, she was but another important bit of evidence in what the daily application of cold cream will do for the skin. Stage women, I have observed, with hardly an exception, have extremely clear, well cared for skin, due, undoubtedly, to the cream and massage necessary in applying it daily or twice daily. Just a little tip for women not in the profession.

What the Wind Does.

"The best bit of advice I could give," said Miss Claire, "is to apply rouge to the face the way the wind blows color into it. Most girls make the fatal error of reddening the whole of the cheek, instead of leaving some of the skin white. A slight daub of the right coloring for the individual type on the upper cheek bone and again on the lower is enough. Spread that lightly until it is smoothed evenly and does a fade out, as it were, of its own free will, leaving, as I said before, sufficient white on the cheeks to give a good imitation of a windblown coloring.

"Put the rouge on first, and then tone it down a shade or two with powder. Use a hand mirror to get both sides right. You can hardly make a good street appearance unless you use daylight for the makeup, and treat both sides of the face the same. For daylight purposes one must be sparing of color. In a brilliantly lighted room at night you may be more lavish, but even then it is better to be under than over done. Stage makeup is a quite different thing, of course; we are speaking of artistic makeup for the street.

MISS INA CLAIRE.

Varieties of Rouge.

"It is difficult for me to say what should be worn, for skins vary so. Good rouge makers have arrived at quite a number of colorings with which the individual must practice until she gets the color that blends most evenly. A brunette, for instance, cannot wear a brilliant, high toned coloring without advertising where her complexion came from.

"There is an ocre rouge and powder which works in beautifully with the olive skinned girl. As a matter of fact, this coloring is used by many of the smart women even though not brunettes. But for my type of blonde (a silvery blonde with hazel eyes) the pink is better.

"The main thing is to get away from that loud, cheap looking red or bright pink which is so unmistakably unnatural and to experiment with several different shades suitable to the different types until you have arrived at the one best, erring on the subdued rather than on the too brilliant color.

Study Face Contour.

"There is nothing uglier than a pair of brilliantly lighted cheeks and a nose made more deadly prominent by the strong liquid white. It hits you like an auction sale sign.

"An elusive, soft, natural tone is to be striven for. Some skins are better for a mixture of pink and tan powders, or cream and pink, but these have to be experimented with on the individual face and by the individual person.

"The contour of the face has to be studied, too, as, for instance, if the face is narrow or if the chin recedes a little, build up with an extra touch of coloring. If the cheek bones are high or face full, reverse the treatment.

"The prominent nose should not be made more prominent with a white powder, whereas the tiny nosed girl may use it.

"When the eyes are treated, instead of shading the entire lid with blue or gray or black grease paint, just touch the outer lid at its edge with the shade that tones into the eyelashes. The under lids are better left au naturel. Unless expertly done when they are darkened they impart a hardness and a distinct unbecomingness.

"Women give a tremendous amount of study to lines of dress and hats for the sake of a smarter appearance. Why not make as much business of making up as long as they are buying cosmetics in the vast quantities trade statistics prove? What is becoming in makeup to one woman no more holds good for another than in dress. Each has to study her own coloring, the lines of her face, get the shade, and apply it in such a way as to leave no hint of suspicion as to the package from whence the coloring comes."

STOMACH UPSET?

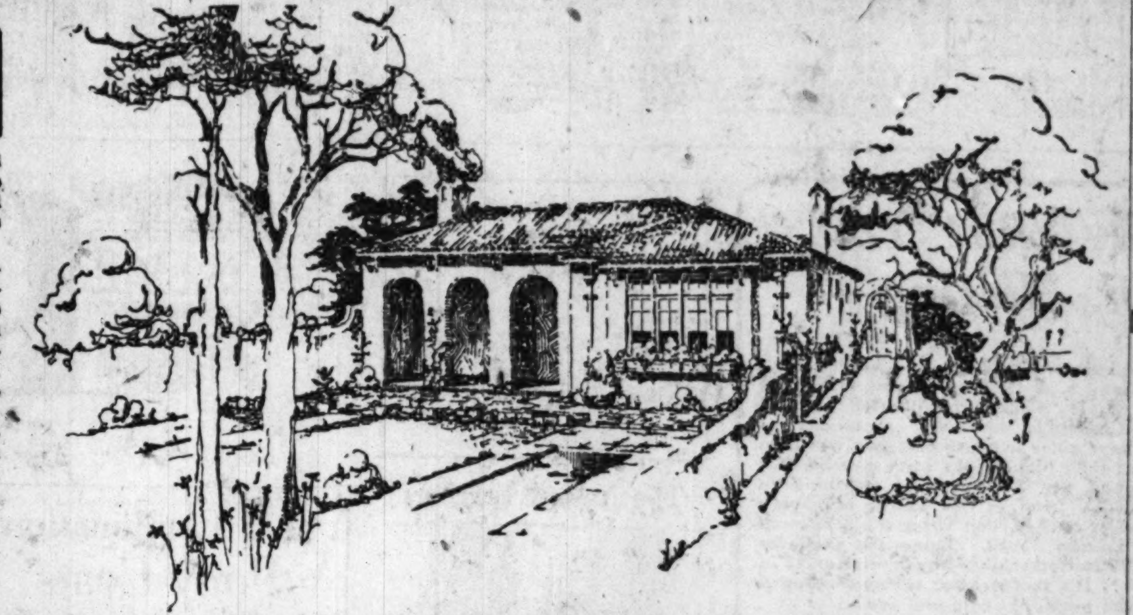
Much of the Beauty of the Small California Home Is Easily Transferable to Any Climate

By Anita de Campi.

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.



A SUGGESTION of Spanish and Italian style of architecture is seen in the arched over paved loggia and the tile roof of this California type stucco bungalow.

Nowhere, perhaps, has the small bungalow attained such widespread popularity as on the Pacific coast, and it is there that the architecture of the small bungalow has reached a correspondingly advanced stage of developments. Bungalow court apartments are quite as common in Los Angeles and San Diego as their more pretentious and expensive prototype, the court apartment building in the midwestern and eastern states.

The generally mild weather prevailing on the Pacific slope has been also another prominent factor in the development of this type of dwelling, as the open fireplace which suffices to keep the room comfortable in inclement weather makes it quite unnecessary to provide a heating plant. This saves all the expense of excavation and deep masonry walls. Even the foundations carrying the main walls need be carried down only a few feet, or just below the top soil, as here the frost never penetrates, as it does in the northern climate.

Because the cool ocean breezes counteract the heat of the summer sun, a high attic or air space to keep the main rooms comfortable is unnecessary. Consequently, steeply pitched roofs give way to those gently sloped on these bungalows.

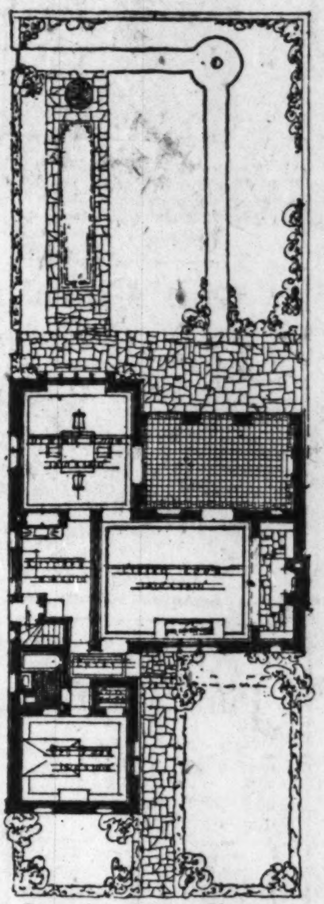
However, much of the beauty of the small California home is easily transferable to any climate by slight adaptation. In the first place, there will be the excavated basement when a heating plant is required; foundations in other parts must be dug below the frost line—a depth of four feet is sufficient for the more rigorous climates, and lastly, the roof, if it be a gable or pitched roof should have a pitch of not less than 30 degrees, or offer means of ventilation or both. These are practically the only changes in construction that are needed. However, workmanship and material on houses built in locations where great variations in temperature are the rule, must, of necessity, be of high quality to withstand the action of the elements.

The architects of this modest four-room bungalow have produced an attractive layout with no waste space at a comparatively small outlay for materials.

A crushed stone walk carries one past a well-trimmed hedge, which just hides a sundial and a lily pond. The latter, about four feet wide and eighteen feet long, the kiddies may prefer to use for a wading pool. Through a gate we reach a walk paved with flat, irregular shaped flagstones from between which rise tufts of grass to give a rustic appearance.

We enter the loggia, which is readily screened in for fly and mosquito days, and thence the living room. This is exceptionally large and roomy for such a small home, being 23 feet long by 14 feet wide. At one end is a fireplace nook. With its built-in settees banked with soft cushions and flanking bookcases, it is a place of enchantment for the fairy tale teller, reverence for the family gathered round, and bliss for the lover. All about the brick hearth we find the quaint old fashioned flagstone pavement. For the weekender we have provided a large, comfortable bed davenport in this room.

Off to one side is the dining room with four large casement windows facing the front, just opposite the lily pond. It also communicates directly with the loggia and the living room by separate entrances.



Ground and Floor Plan.

We note an unusual convenience built into the wall between the dining room and kitchen. It is a combination china cabinet and server with sliding glass doors in both rooms. Ordinarily it is used as a china cabinet, and, being next to the sink, dishes are easily washed and laid away without extra steps.

As a server: The lower shelf is first cleared of dishes. The food is placed on it by the cook in the kitchen and removed when desired by way of the glass door in the dining room. In the servantless house, this is especially convenient, as here all the hot food can be stored at the start of the meal, and served by the hostess without leaving the room. A portion of the lower shelf can be used for soiled dishes. Upon upper shelves will rest the guest china, and drawers below will provide space for cutlery and tablelinen.

The kitchen, we find, has a kitchen cabinet built in to fit a particular corner.

The bathroom with its tiled floor has not only a direct entrance from the little hall, but also one from the bedroom, a desirable convenience in the small home.

The bedroom is well lighted and contains a fair sized closet. This room can readily be ventilated, not only by its four windows, but by the clever arrangement of doors and windows in other parts of the house.

The basement contains the laundry, heater, and coal storage. Only one-third of the area covered by the house is excavated, and considerable expense has been saved without inconvenience.

This little home can be built of cement or lime stucco on metal lath placed on wood studs. By back plastering the metal lath, the wood sheathing under the stucco can be dispensed with and a permanent and rigid structure of great beauty erected at moderate cost.

Architects Levi and Minkus of Chicago are the designers of this bungalow.

Aged and in Want.

"I am writing for an aged woman who is badly in need of warm clothing, mostly warm underwear. I know she will be grateful for whatever help she may receive. MRS. L. H."

Offers Velocipede.

"I have a velocipede which some little fellow about 8 years of age might like to have. MRS. H."

Some little 8 year old will be happy, I know, to take advantage of your offer.

A Pair of Baby's Shoes.

"I should be grateful if some reader has a pair of baby's shoes—size 4—to give. I have a baby boy, 2 years old, and his heels are out of his shoes. I don't know where the money is coming from to get him any more. Also, if any one has a folding go-cart I should be grateful and could make good use of it. The baby is much too heavy for me to carry, and he cannot walk because his shoes are in too bad a condition. M. A. W."

May we have the comfort of passing on this mother's address to another mother whose baby has outgrown both shoes and cab?

Offers the Opportunity to Learn a Highly Paid Profession for Women

Beauty Culture is most appealing to the woman who would follow a profession, either from choice or necessity. The work is very interesting—various kinds of treatments prevent the monotony that is an accompaniment of so many professions.

The money-making possibilities are remarkable. A woman who can conduct her own business may make a snug fortune to provide for years of comfort and an independent old age, while even the salaried operator is far better paid than in most professions for women.

You will use good judgment to study Beauty Culture at the Burnham School. We have been established over fifty years and follow the most scientific and up-to-date methods of teaching.

The name of Burnham is famous in the beauty world and carries prestige amongst the most fastidious class of women. Your Burnham diploma will attract the most desirable clientele.

The following courses may be taken either singly or collectively:

Hair Dressing Marcel Waving

Hair Dressing course includes Shampooing, Bleaching, Dyeing, Scalp Massage, Cutting, etc. Also fancy hairdressing for costume parties or the stage.

Marcel Waving is a separate course and is taught by a highly skilled instructor.

Manicuring

A most valuable course and a profession in itself. Course covers care of hands as well as nails and teaches every detail of manicuring by the most delicate method.

Facial Massage Skin Bleaching Electrolysis

Facial Massage includes treatment for complexion, sagging muscles, puffiness around eyes, blackheads, wrinkles, etc.

Skin Bleaching. Instantaneous treatment.

Electrolysis. Course teaches permanent, painless removal of superfluous hair, warts and moles.

Hair Cutting

Includes Bobbing for both women and children; Bang Cutting; Singeing; Shingling for Boys; Cutting of Fringe.

Scalp Treatment

A course that in itself is profitable for specialization. Teaches Hot Oil Treatment; Hot Oil Shampoo; how to improve circulation; how to relieve dandruff, and every other contributing cause to falling or premature graying hair.

Turkish and Electric Light Baths

Two highly scientific and remunerative courses.

Turkish Bath course includes body massage, the salt glow, correct bathing and Hydropathy.

Electric Light Bath course teaches toning of system by the eliminative process.

School of Manufacturing

We teach the manufacture of all kinds of hair goods—switches, braids, puffs, curls, etc. This is a very practical course and is profitable used in itself or in connection with general beauty culture.

Scientific Body Massage

A highly profitable branch of Beauty Culture.

Includes Swedish movements. The value of these treatments is understood by ladies of social prominence; also by actresses, as they recognize fully the necessity of suppleness of form and grace of movement.

This course brings the operator in touch with physicians who recommend it to their patients.

LUNCHEON CLOTH AND NAPKINS

THIS attractive looking luncheon set is made of Indian head cotton and measures fifty-two inches from point to point. The straight sides of each extension measure fourteen inches and they are eighteen inches wide. The extension to the point, of course, measures eighteen inches, and this makes the square part left in the center measure eighteen inches also.

The edges are turned in for a quarter inch and edged with the blanket stitch done in blue or any preferred color. Of course, the blanket stitch is taken the depth of the hem.

Above each point is a pretty basket, the handle done in the outline stitch in brown and the lines making the basket done in the same stitch. The flowers are small circles worked in the eyelet or over and over stitch, in blue, green, and pink. The small centers are in black. Then the leaves that are scattered around and between the flowers are in the laid or over and over stitch. The little spray each side of the basket should be easily copied from the picture. The stem line is in brown and the flowers in colors.

In the center of the cloth, making a circle ten inches in diameter, are three smaller baskets and the same number of stem lines and flowers.

The napkins are fourteen inches square, with the edge of each finished the same as the luncheon cloth, and in one corner of each is a basket, matching those on the luncheon cloth. The basket measures three inches from top to bottom and one and one-half inches across where the flowers are.

The lines for the basket could be lightly drawn on the cloth with a sharp pointed pencil, and then the small flower rings and little marks for the leaves. This is an excellent thing to try to copy without having any stamped pattern, for it is simple in design, and the picture should make it easy to follow.

It will pay to shrink the material first. Of course, it must be perfectly smooth before working on it or cutting out.

Answers to Sewing Queries.

Mrs. B. W.: I am sorry, but there was no pattern of the luncheon set. With the aid of the picture and description given, however, you should be able to copy it easily.

Mrs. C. H. H.: There will be one or more sweaters shown before long, with the working directions. Am sorry not to be able to send you any directions at present.

MY MOST EMBARRASSING MOMENT

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life." Address Embarrassing Moments, The Tribune, Chicago. Please write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Knew Where It Came From.

I was a probationer in a hospital when I had my most embarrassing moment. While standing to gossip in a hallway with a group of nurses an interne whom we all disliked passed.

In a spirit of recklessness, after he had passed us I danced out into the middle of the hall and kicked my foot after him. To my horror, my white canvas pump flew off and struck him squarely between the shoulders.

Was I embarrassed when he turned, retraced his steps with the slipper in his hand, and handed it to me? My cheeks were scarlet, and I expected to be sent home in disgrace that day. I was not, but you may believe I carried myself with more dignity after that, at any rate when he was around.

M. B.

How Extremely Feminine.

Carrying in my arm a heavy glass bowl—a gift I had bought for mother—I was about to step into a music store when I was suddenly confronted by an immense dog. Frightened, I screamed, dropped the bowl, which shattered to pieces, and grasped the arm of the first woman who came flying to my aid. When I had sufficiently recovered to speak I looked again in the direction where I had seen the dog. It still stood there all right—a plaster model. I was so embarrassed over the foolish scare that I refused to explain the cause of my fright, pushed my way through the crowd that had gathered, and went right home. That was enough excitement for one day.

B. K.

So They Went Back Home.

Father's club was giving a dance, and as he did not go to the last meeting to get the tickets the committee sent them by mail.

My friend and I decided we would make use of them. Arriving at the dance we went into the hall, and my friend handed in the two tickets.

Imagine our embarrassment when he politely requested, "$2.20, please."

We did not have $2.20 between the two. After standing around for about five minutes we had to go back for our wraps, and leave.

G. C.

Making Up Time.

The motorman of the street car must have been late on his schedule, for he fairly jumped the track, he was driving so fast. As I pushed through the aisle I had all I could do to keep on my feet. Suddenly the car gave a jerk; I went forward, then backward. Attempting to gain my balance I grabbed at the first thing in sight, and when I did regain my feet again I found I was still holding on to the life saver—the bone buckle of a woman's coat, an ornament she had for the center of the belted back of her coat. Everybody was staring rudely, while I, stuttering, stammering, returned the buckle, offering to sew it on for her some day—but at that particular moment I was so anxious to get out of the car I forgot to offer her my card.

B. S.

She Wanted to Please.

I am employed as a stenographer in a bank. The other day I was called upon to take dictation from one of the officials for the first time. Being a new employé, the head of my department took me down to introduce me, and the official, in a gracious manner, shook hands with me. After the introduction he must have asked me to have a chair. "Chair" was all I heard, and without hesitating made for the chair standing in the direction of his glance, took it, and with a swing set it down beside him. The astonishment expressed in the faces of both the official and the man with whom he was evidently discussing matters of importance caused me to realize my mistake. Never was I so embarrassed as when he told he his office was in the adjoining room and that I might wait in there.

L. R.

Facing the Truth.

It was just after pay day in our army camp. I decided to show the girl of my heart a good time. We went to the theater in the afternoon and to a hotel for dinner. It was my first chance at a menu card, and I went through it recklessly, thinking only of the girl across the table. From oyster cocktail on down I plunged, until she herself called a halt at dessert.

While waiting to be served, I began to think in terms of figures. My pay was $33. I had paid my insurance; my allotment had been deducted. There was something for taxi, flowers, theater, already spent. Burning question: How much was left? Wildly I began to figure up, trying to appear unconcerned; trying to keep up a trivial conversation; trying not to be caught scrutinizing that card! I discovered I should have about $6.25 in my pocket, and that I had ordered in a strange hotel about $8 worth of dinner!

Between courses I invented a forgotten but pressing phone call, and sought the manager of the hotel. He listened smilingly to my story and told me to sign the check. But he must have told the waiter something else, for when the check came, it was for $6 even. We took the street car home, and I arrived at camp that evening with 4 cents in my pocket and a great deal of newly acquired wisdom underneath my campaign hat.

Bright Sayings of Children

The Tribune will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

Jane and her grandmother were sitting on the porch. A man on horseback passed. Jane said: "O, look! that man's out buggy riding without any wheels." F. R.

Charline likes to dine with one of our neighbors who has a large family. On returning one day from one of these trips she heaved a deep sigh and said: "My, but it must be nice to have a party fambly." O. D.

Jean skipped a grade at school. When asked if she was surprised at being called to the principal's office and informed of the fact, she replied: "Well, no; but I had no idea I was so bright." S. B. K.

Our family consisted of father, mother, three sons and three daughters. A new neighbor asked my small brother how many sisters and brothers he had. He replied, "I have three sisters and three brothers, but I am one of them." H. G.

Andy was playing with his brother Dick and a neighbor boy, John, when John and Dick began to fight.

Andy came in the house, and I asked him why he didn't interfere and stop his brother from fighting.

"Because," he replied, "I just told Dick that if he was determined to argue he could battle his own fights." J. C. K.

The other Sunday Robert's father took him for a walk. When they came home I asked Bobbie if they had a nice time.

He said, "Yes, and we stopped in to see Aunt Mary."

"Anybody else there?" I inquired.

"Miss Mabel was there, but papa and me was the only men," he replied. L. W.

One day Hale and his mother were in the conservatory at the park, and when his mother was not watching him Hale darted away from her and could not be found for some time.

When at last he was found mother said, "Hale, you nearly got lost. You must always stay with mother."

"Why, I didn't get lost," he replied. "You are the one that got lost." C. C. C.

The twins, Paul and Pauline, have a favorite aunt who is soon to be married, and they are going with their parents to Chicago to the wedding.

When the news was first made known to the twins, their mother said: "And just think, children, aunty is going to have two cute little train bearers. Won't that be lovely?"

She omitted telling them they were to be the train bearers, thinking to happily surprise them later.

A day or two after Paul was overheard saying to Pauline: "I fink aunty's weddin' is goin' to be lots of fun, don't you, sister? I fink weddin's must be des 'bout like circuses, wiv trained bears and everyfing. E. C. B.

Mamma and Uncle Harry were all dolled up in evening attire New Year's eve, when Richard came into the room. "Mamma, you look beautiful. Uncle Harry, you look swell, just like a butler in the movies," he said. J. K.

Lucy was turning in for the night when a dog next door began howling.

She remarked, "If Bulger keeps up that noise I can't sleep."

I asked how she knew it was Bulger.

She replied, "I knows his singing voice." Mrs. L. S.

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $5 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possessions you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Doris Blake, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to retain possession of.

ENLISTING DAUGHTER'S HELP.

DEAR Little Vivian: This morning I unlocked my treasure drawer. It is just such a drawer as a wee girl like you would like to put upon the floor and rummage through; and as you scattered the treasures about, your mother, standing by, would recognize a few: A lace and ivory fan, retaining all these years a hint of that fragrance which always hovered about her; a dance program when she gave me five waltzes; two or three letters in which she was sweet and gracious to an anxious worshiper.

But, really and truly, why did I unlock the drawer this morning? To search among the treasures for a small white card. There it was! "Vivian," then the date, then your father and mother's name. I have kept that card among the things I love because your mother sent it to me, remembered me; because another Vivian had come to make a somber world brighter. Oct. — and not a minute to lose, if a 3 year old girl was to have a doll for her birthday!

So I went down to the store where I used to window-shop with your mother, that other lovely Vivian, in the days when I hoped I might be the favored one. Twice she let me buy her a trinket. Tell me, does she ever wear them? A long pin, set with bright things, and a necklace of sparkling red stones? And if she sometimes wears them, does she ever look at them as though—— Thank heaven, little Vivian, you are not a man child! Your privilege it will be to choose and go your way. You cannot know of the heartaches left behind.

Then twelve flights up to the toy shop! And the biggest, the bluest eyed, the curliest haired, the silkiest dressed doll should be in your arms by the time this letter comes.

Little girl, I sent you this doll with a purpose. I admit it, recklessly, shamelessly. I want to line you up on my side. I want you to help me talk to your beautiful mother. Wouldn't you like to have some one to stand in the place of the daddy who was taken from you? Who would buy you dolls, and make you playhouses, and send you through college, and love you as his own?

Well, then, will you please tell your mother about it? Will you ask her if she remembers an evening five years ago when she told a despairing suitor he was the second best man in the world, but never the first? Will you tell her that he is still willing to be second best if she will only give him the right to love and protect you two?

Talk hard for me, Vivian, you and the big doll. Put your arms around her neck and tell her she needs me, and I'll do anything you ask of me, except to be third best man!

Devotedly yours, G. H.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Luster to Hair

That beautiful even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous.

THE TEENIE WEENIES

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

THE LITTLE FOLKS MEET A TEARFUL RABBIT.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

WELL, here is another picture for all the little friends of the Teenie Weenies to color with their water colors or crayons. If you have not already won a prize of a Teenie Weenie book for coloring one of these pictures, or even if you have, get to work on this one. When you have it colored just as well as you know how to make it mail the picture to the Teenie Weenies, care The Chicago Tribune, and see if you cannot win a Teenie Weenie book. Remember, The Tribune will give ten books each week, one to each of ten little boys and girls who make the neatest pictures.

The sky should be colored blue and the trees a sort of greenish brown. The rabbit can be colored gray brown and shadows on the snow should be very light blue. Gogo has a brown face, the Chinaman a tan one, and the rest of the Teenie Weenies have pink faces. The Teenie Weenies' clothes can be colored to suit your own fancy.

Be sure to give your name and address correctly. Use this coupon if you like:

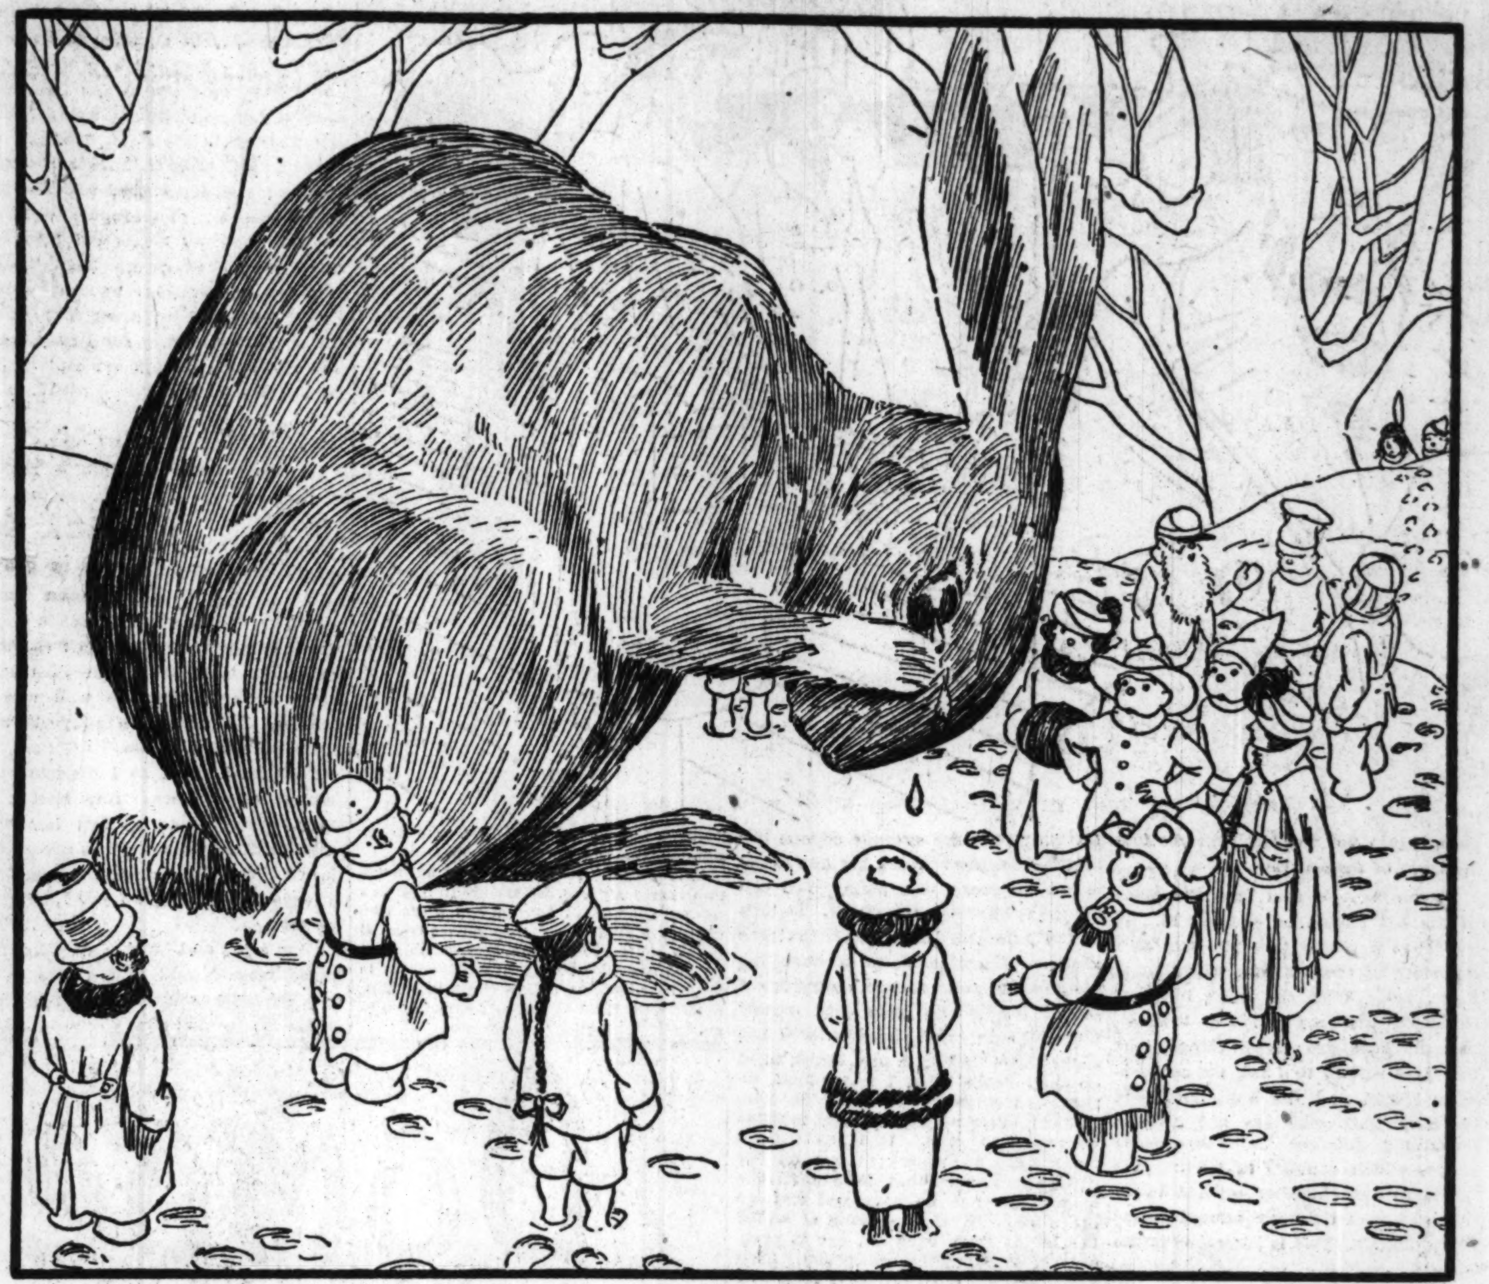
TEN more big Teenie Weenie books were sent out last week to boys and girls whose work was considered the best in coloring the Teenie Weenies picture printed last Sunday. The books are autographed by Mr. Donahey and went to the following:

Ernestine Tangeman, 416 West Cherry street, Bluffton, Ind.
Loren Lown, 601 West Adams street, Muncie, Ind.
Virginia Horton, 421 North Huron street, Ypsilanti, Mich.
Margaret Goetz, 697 North Howard street, Akron, O.
Jerry Kapp, 2217 Glenwood avenue, Toledo, O.
Raymond Collins, 1120 Oak street, Beloit, Wis.
Bobby Heyman, 6332 Greenwood avenue, Chicago.
Keith Rapp, 904 Reed street, Red Oak, Ia.
Billie Zoeller, 820 6th street, Dixon, Ill.
Eleanor Stewart, 67 Ann avenue, Battle Creek, Mich.

[Copyright: 1922: By William Donahey.]



IT was very quiet and peaceful under the rose bush. It was Sunday and a day of rest for the Teenie Weenies. A light snow lay on the ground, and inside the old shoe house a bright fire blazed in the tiny fireplace. The Teenie Weenies had eaten a wonderful dinner, the tiny dishes had been washed and put away, and the little folks sat dozing about the fireplace.

"Well, folks," cried the Doctor as he glanced around at the nodding Teenie Weenies, "this is no way to spend such a lovely day. Get on your wraps, and we'll go for a walk. It will do us good."

It took some argument to arouse the sleepy, well fed Teenie Weenies, but soon they bundled themselves into their warm hats and coats and set off through the soft snow.

For some time they walked along towards the big woods, and just as they had made their way up a big hill they suddenly heard sounds as though some one was crying. Cautiously making their way towards some bushes, they came across a big rabbit, who sat up on his hind legs weeping as though his heart would break.

"What's the matter?" asked the General kindly as the Teenie Weenies gathered around the rabbit.

"O-O-O-O d-d-d-dear!" wailed the rabbit, and tears ran down his furry cheeks in a regular stream. "O, O, O, O, wouldn't it be terrible? Wouldn't it be terrible?"

"What would be terrible, Mr. Rabbit?" asked the kind-hearted little Lady of Fashion.

"Mrs. Rabbit," corrected the rabbit, glancing through her tears at the Lady of Fashion. "It makes me feel terrible whenever I think about it. O dear me!" And the rabbit burst into another torrent of tears.

"But what's the matter?" asked the Doctor, who thought the rabbit was suffering from shell shock.

"O, O, O! I can hardly bear to tell you, the idea makes me feel so sad," answered the rabbit. "I was thinking a bit ago what a terrible thing it would be if there were no carrots, or clover, or bark to eat, and it came over me suddenly that I'd starve to death." The rabbit burst into another flood of tears and wept so hard it made the Teenie Weenies feel very sorry for her.

"Boo hoo hoo!" bellowed the Dunce, joining the rabbit in a weeping duet. "Wouldn't it be awful if there was no more candy or sugar to eat! O, dear me, I think I'd drown myself in a cup of water if there was no sugar or candy," and the Dunce cried so pitifully that half the Teenie Weenies were rubbing their red noses with the backs of their mittens.

"Jus' think what a poor world this would be to live in if there wasn't no mo' watermelon," sobbed Gogo, and he cried so loudly that the rabbit stopped weeping to glance at the little fellow.

"For the land's sake," cried the doctor in astonishment, "is this a sob party? What, in the name of sand spurs, are you weeping for? There are plenty of carrots, clover, candies, and watermelons, so what's the use of crying about something that isn't?"

"Great grief!" growled the rabbit, glaring at the Doctor. "Can't I have a nice little cry without some one takin' all the fun out of it? I'm goin' off to a hollow log where no one will be botherin' me and I'm goin' to have my cry out, so I am," and the rabbit disappeared over the hill in about three leaps.

"That rabbit is like the boy that cried for the moon," laughed the General.

"Tell us about him," begged the Lady of Fashion, touching her nose with her tiny powder puff.

"Well, I'll see if I can remember it," said the General as the little folks walked along. "Let's see. O, yes—

"There was a boy who sighed and sighed,
He stamped his feet and cried and cried!
He cried and sighed, this silly loon,
Because he couldn't have the moon."

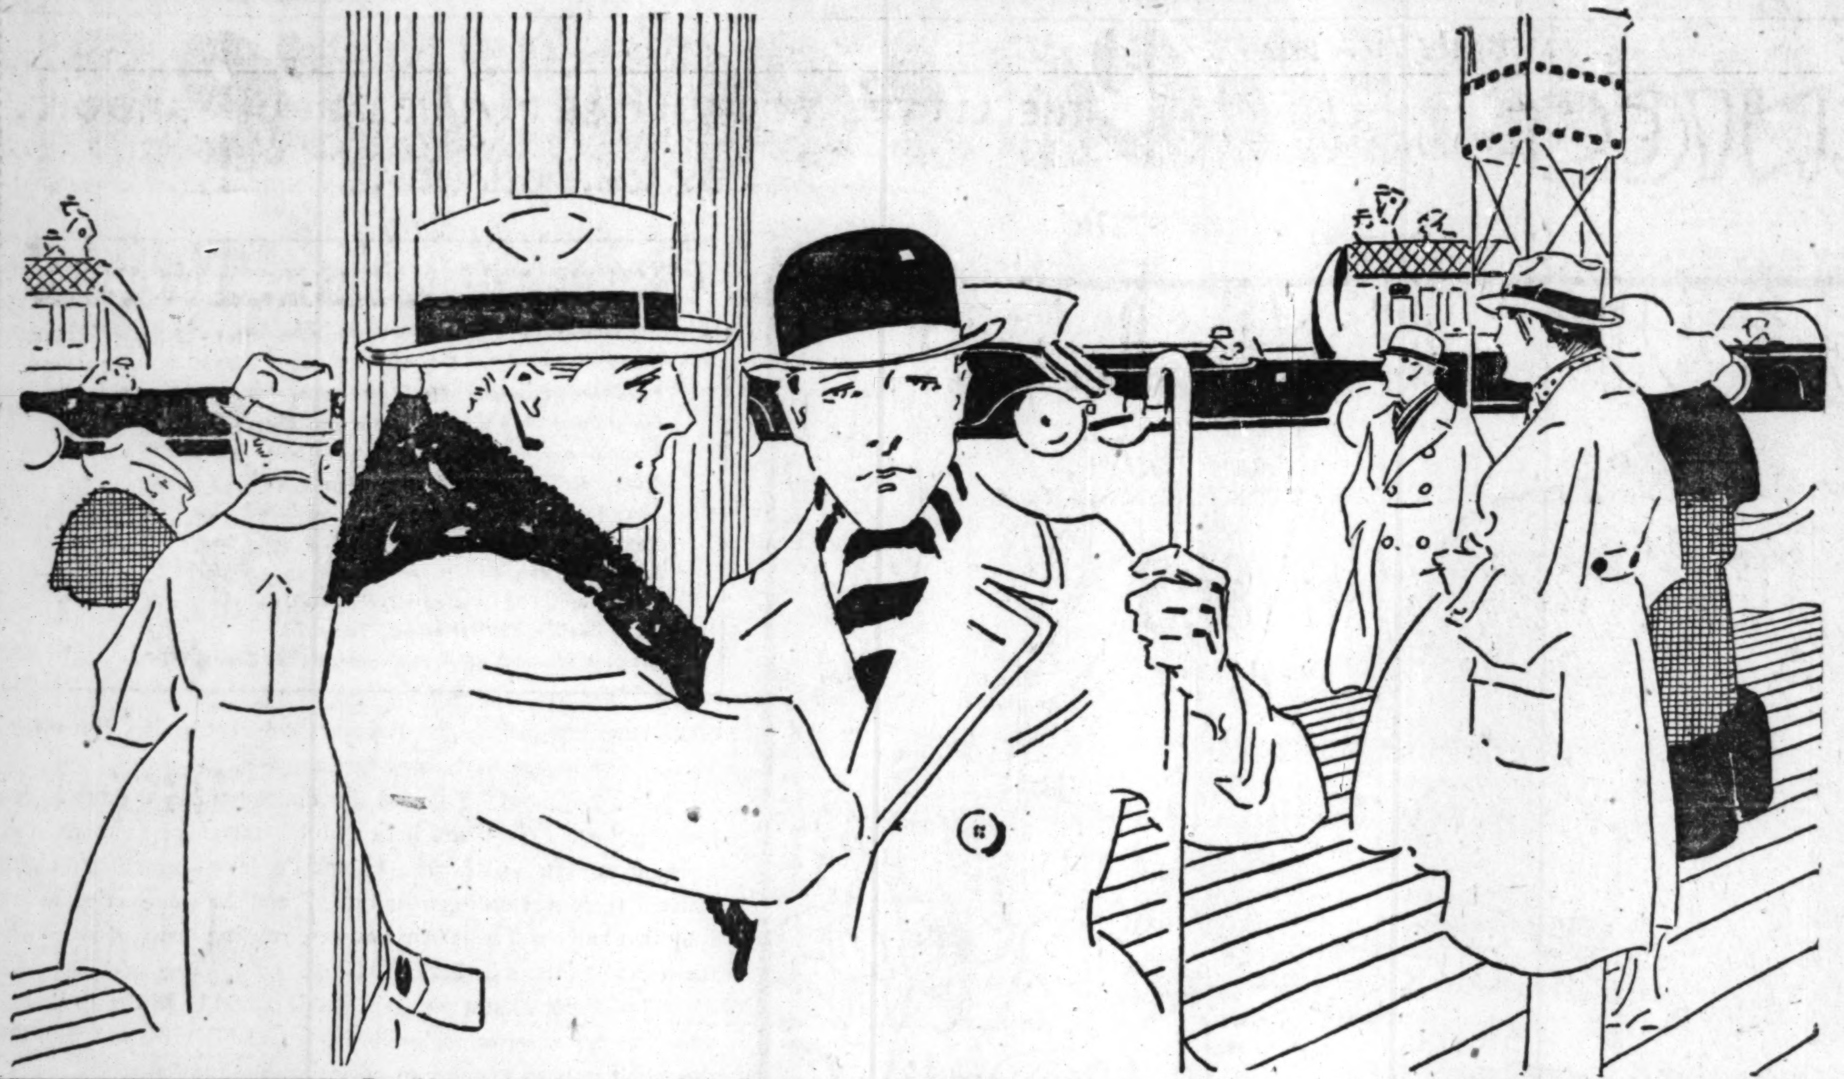
MEN'S FASHIONS



This department will be glad to answer any questions regarding men's fashions and the correct thing to wear on different occasions. Address communications to A. T. Gallico, Chicago Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

STYLISH HATS CONSERVATIVE.

By A. T. Gallico.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—As the bus I was on slowed up for traffic, I glanced out of the window and observed a workman pause in his labor to remove his hat, soiled and nearly ragged, and carefully and deliberately crease it into the conventional fedora shape. In doing this the workman probably did not realize that in a simple manner he was expressing fashion in men's hats.

For it is only by the shape or the creases or the angle of the hat that any variation is achieved. From year to year the soft felt hat has but slight changes, but being slight they are all the more important. The secret of a fashionable hat is in the roll or the width of the brim. This is the only standard of style. For instance, last winter the popular hat was that on which the brim was wide and rolled up all the way round. This is now passé. If you see such a hat you can tell that it is a last season's model. For this year the brims have been made smaller and have been flattened, especially in the front. Notice this in the picture.

Out of one of these soft hats many shapes or styles may be created. The brim is never tampered with, for that is set by fashion, and if you wish to be in style you leave it as it is. The crown you are liberty to do with what you will. You can push it in or you can pull it out. You can pinch it and dent it to suit your wildest fancy.

It is a matter of interesting conjecture as to how many men when they go to purchase their hats pay any attention to whether a hat is becoming or not. It is fortunate for salesmen that men are not as hard to please as women who, after trying on at least twenty hats in a milliner's, wander on unsatisfied to the next store.

But a man should give some thought to the shape of his hat in connection with the shape of his head and face. Of course, there is not much variety in the shape of the hats as they come from the store, although some brims are a little wider than others and some crowns a little higher. But with any crown much can be done to transform it into just the hat your particular style of face needs.

If you have a thin face the sides of the hat should be crushed in. If you have a plump face you can pull the sides of the hat out, widening it to fit you. With the same hat you can make the crown high or low. Although there are many things that may give variety to a hat, the conservative shape, and the one most seen on older men who are not seeking something different is the fedora shape, which consists in leaving the hat with sides neither pushed in or out, and with the conventional crease in the middle. This is portrayed in the illustration.

Opposed to this style of long standing is one which is a more or less recent departure from the ordinary and which may have come to stay among the members of the younger generation, who started it and now uphold it. It is noteworthy that the college man is independent of the fashions of the rest of the male population, and has often started little fads of his own which sometimes stay with us and sometimes do not.

The extremely peculiar and original way in which the average college boy or the youngster wears his felt hat it is not necessary to explain. You can see it anywhere on any street. To look at the hats you might think that the shape and angles of them were the most casual and careless arrangement—that the young men had merely picked them up and squeezed them into some shape and form and stuck them on their heads. But I wager that, although the produced effect is nonchalant, every crease and dent is made with studied care. It is as though there were an unwritten law on the college campuses that thus shall the brown felt hat be arranged and no other way. Even the angle at which the hat is worn over the eye is probably of mathematical accuracy. This style is never seen on older men, but belongs exclusively to the younger generation.

As I have hinted, the college boy's hat is almost always brown, but brown predominates in 5th avenue as well as in college towns. Grays are the next in popularity. A gray hat can be worn with any overcoat without clashing. Grays come in smoke, slate, and pearl shades, and usually have black bands. Green is in the minority, although with a coat with a green tone it looks well. Black hats are less noticed, perhaps because of their inconspicuousness. Binding is now popular, but on hats of good taste is always the color of the hat and not a darker shade, like the band.

The angle at which a hat is worn can make a great difference in a man's appearance. For instance, I have two friends of entirely opposite physical types. One of them wears a small gray hat at a decided tilt, and the result is smartly effective, while the other man, if he tips his hat more than two degrees to the side, looks tough.

How I Met My Better Half

Do you remember when you met the Only Girl and decided that you need hunt no longer for the ideal life partner? Those were the happy days, weren't they? Why not tell about that joyous, romantic time, and share your pleasant memories with the folks who have had like experiences? Just take your pen in hand and write your story. Then send it to the Romance Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune. The Tribune will pay $1 for each letter published.

Playing Make Believe.

I met my better half when I ran away one day in summer to investigate my new neighbor's proceedings. I was five years old at the time and spent a delightful hour playing house with the neighbor's small daughter of my own age. After making believe eat her mud pies I proposed and she accepted me. My mother soon collared me, marched me home and held me under the shed pump from which flowed water from 33 feet underground. This did not cool my ardor more than the former switchings, for I have married my early sweetheart and really eat her pies now. W. G.

Whistled and She Came.

I met my better half in a rather surprising way. So much so, in fact, I should like to tell others of it.

Some years ago I was tramping across the country letting life soak into me. Along the gulf coast I was tramping up a dusty road when I ran out of tobacco. Pretty soon I came in sight of a farm house. Perched on a ladder high against the wall was a painter. "There," said to myself, was my chance for a smoke.

I whistled. Just as I expected the painter came down. Her bucket of paint was rubbing against her blue overalls. A smudge of green ran across her forehead, but she had the laughingist eyes I ever saw. I knew I had met my fate.

I got a job and finished painting the house myself, and now I live in it with the little painter who was perched on the ladder that sunny day. K. A.

SYRUP PEPSIN IN OLD AGE

Much used by elderly people for constipation, biliousness, headaches, etc.

MANY men and women, as they grow older, suffer constantly from little ills. The cause is the poisons produced by chronic constipation, resulting in headaches, depression, bloating, sour stomach, bad breath, etc. A single bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will prove to you that you can so regulate yourself that elimination will occur promptly every day. Increased doses are not necessary. It is a combination of Egyptian Senna and other simple laxative herbs with pepsin. The cost is only about a cent a dose.

In spite of the fact that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has been on the market 30 years and is today the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, the formula has never been improved upon. It is safer and better for you than salts, minerals, calomel, coal tar and such drastic purgatives.

Half-Ounce Bottle Free

Few escape constipation, so even if you do not require a laxative at this moment let me send you a Half-ounce Trial Bottle of my Syrup Pepsin FREE OF CHARGE so that you will have it handy when needed. Simply send your name and address to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 514 Washington St., Monticello, Ill. Write me today.

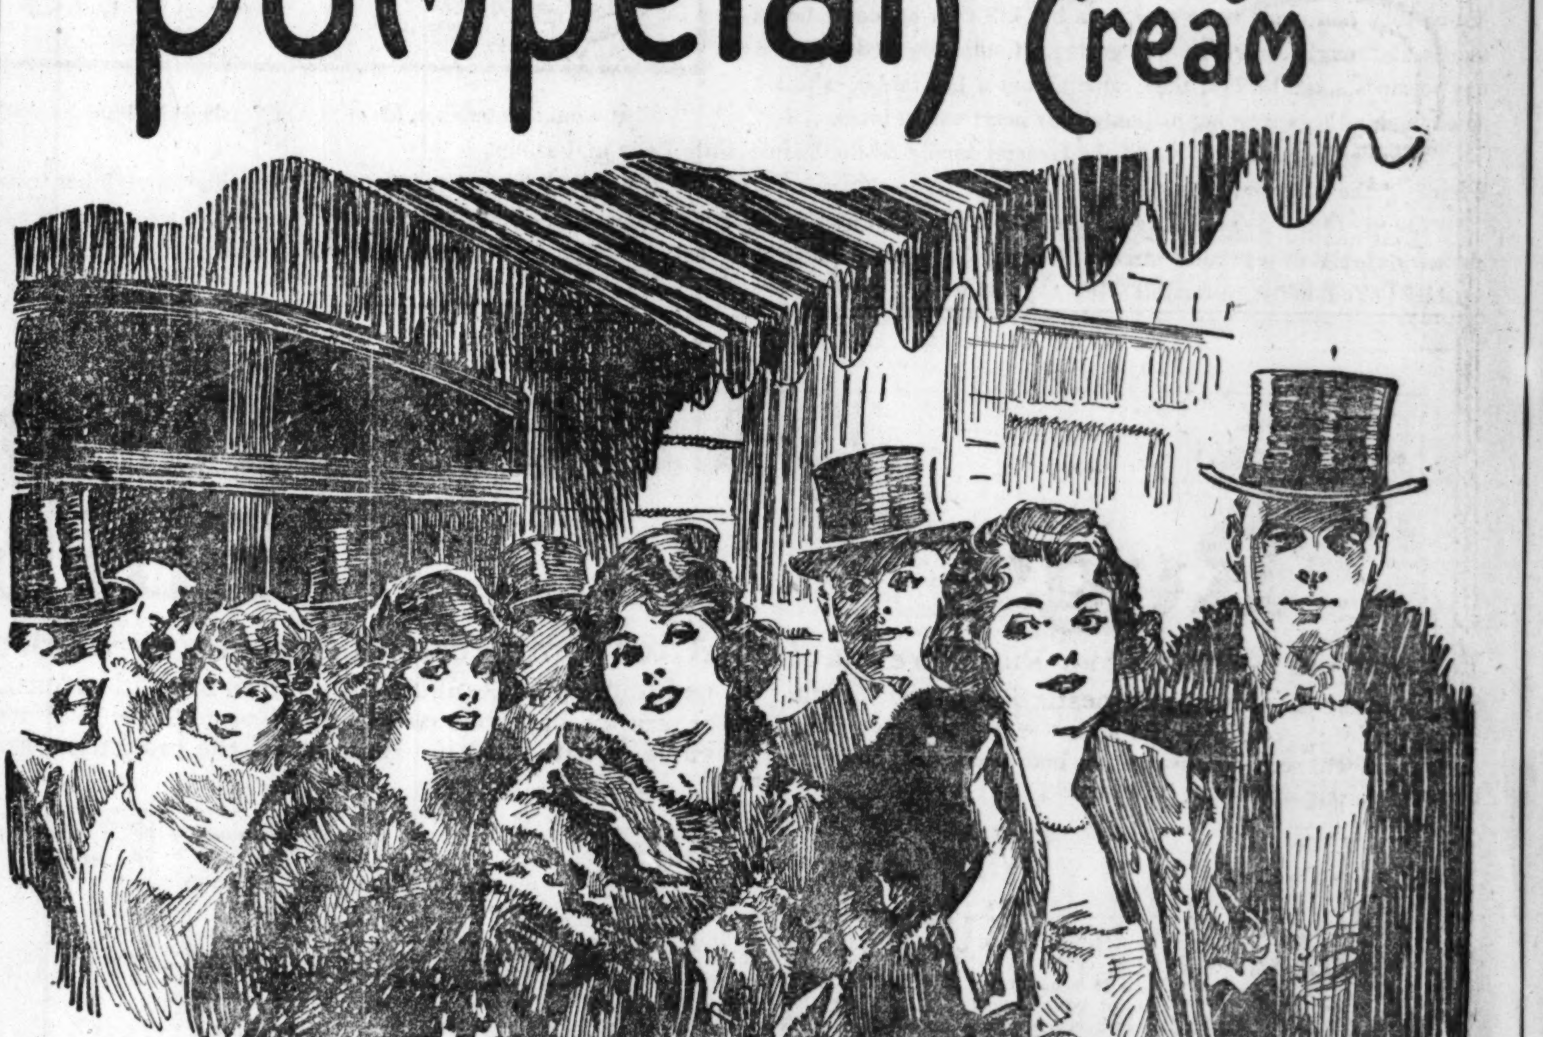
Pompeian Day Cream



Which is the Chaperone?

THEY all are beautiful—but can you tell which is the chaperone? The clear, warm coloring of youth is on each cheek. One is the chaperone, but her loveliness defies you to guess which she is. She knows the secret of Instant Beauty—the complete "Pompeian Beauty Toilette."

First, a touch of fragrant Pompeian DAY Cream (vanishing). It softens the skin and holds the powder. Work the cream well into the skin so the powder adheres evenly. Then apply Pompeian BEAUTY Powder. It makes the skin beautifully fair and adds the charm of delicate fragrance. Now a touch of Pompeian BLOOM for youthful color. Do you know that a bit of color in the cheeks makes the eyes sparkle with a new beauty? Lastly, dust over again with the powder, in order to subdue the Bloom. Presto! The face is beautified and youth-i-fied in an instant! (Above 3 preparations may be used separately or together. At all druggists 60c each.)

How to Tell Fortunes by Cards

says DORIS BLAKE

LAST week and the previous Sunday I unfolded for your ingenuity to embellish two simple outlines for telling fortunes by cards, reminding you to treat the fortune telling as a game only, and under no circumstances to allow yourself to believe that a pack of cards could reveal anything of truth or importance to you.

Repeating the warning, I present to you today a method which will require a little more memorizing of the meanings of the pasteboards and their combinations.

As the meanings change with the reversing of the cards, you must get a brand new pack and mark them in such a way that you may see at a glance whether they are reversed or not.

You might use an X to indicate the card reversed. Then, too, it might aid you in memorizing the card values and make their reading quicker if you write the meanings on top and bottom of the cards. Either that, or cut out and paste on a piece of cardboard to be laid before you for ready reference the meanings as I give them today.

This method requires thirty-two cards, although only twenty-one of them are used in the process. Discard all sixes, fives, fours, threes, and twos. The inquirer chooses a card to represent him or her, according to the complexion; diamonds for the fair; hearts, medium coloring; clubs, brunettes with brown hair; spades, dark complexion. A king for a man; queen for a woman.

Shuffle and cut the thirty-two cards with left hand; dealer then takes off the first eleven cards and throws them aside. From the twenty-one left in his hand he takes the uppermost card and places it apart for the surprise before dealing out the other twenty and placing them in order before him, beginning at left. If the card representing the person is not among these, the whole process must be repeated from the beginning. The significance of the cards must be read, taking care to notice any set of two, three, four of a kind, as their collective meaning should be added to the individual explanation.

But begin the fortune telling from the twenty cards laid out before you. Start from the left, take the cards up in order, and link their meanings together as a continuous message.

The cards must now be taken up again, including the eleven discards—shuffled and cut as before, leaving only the surprise out. The dealer then makes them into three packs, having been careful to place the first card apart for the surprise. Two of the packs will consist of six cards and one of seven. The inquirer is then asked to choose one of the packs, which must be exposed face upwards. These six or seven cards are read from left to right, as before.

The operation is repeated again, leaving only the surprise cards on the table, the eleven dealt off, the top card set along with the other two already laid aside so that the surprise consists of three cards altogether, which are not read until the last. Again, inquirer chooses one of the three packs, now six cards in each, and dealer reads fortune as before.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

By Jane Eddington.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NUTS FOR WINTER.

If we could quiz the squirrel as to why he stores nuts instead of apples and other fruits, which in the country are so accessible to him, we might learn some animal wisdom of great value for our own animal bodies. Being the quintessence of energy in a small package, he needs nuts all the time, or some other high energy food, to keep him going.

A nut is a piece of highly concentrated food. In particular it contains a great deal of oil, or fat. That is the sort of food cold weather demands. It is the food that puts us through the winter so that we do not have an "all gone feeling" when it comes spring. It is the food that helps us to fight the cold which is leeching the heat and energy out of us with every breath. On the coldest days we can see the heat going out of our mouths as the heat goes out the spout of a tea kettle.

A man who was in Onalaska in winter has told me that at 40 below zero a piece of raw salt pork tasted as sweet as candy to him. We not only need fat foods for winter, but we have a taste for them.

Dainty Food Fat.

Fat foods can get into great disrepute, have been in great disrepute among us, when they are treated as "grease," but you can hardly treat the fat of a nut in that way. In other words, it is the daintiest package of fat food we possess, and it is well to train our digestion to its use in cold weather.

Take Brazil nuts for instance. The nut meats cost about two-thirds as much as butter and have more than six-sevenths as many calories, or heat units. The butternut and black walnut, which come nearest of all the nuts to being "greasy," have almost as many calories, only a hundred or so less, are cheaper, but harder to crack. Pecans have the largest percentage of fat of all, or over 71 per cent.

The English walnut in comparison with the black is called "soft shelled." While the Brazil nut meats average 3,265 calories per pound, the English walnut averages 3,285, or just twenty calories more In the shell a pound gives an average yield of 1,375. It is important to notice this fact, if comparing its value with butter. At the price it is sold it is, of course, more expensive than butter, which yields about 3,600 calories per pound. Brazil nuts in the shell yield on the average 1,655 calories.

The proportion of fat in a Brazil nut meat is over 66 per cent, while in an English walnut it is over 63 per cent. The neglected filbert which the French use so much in candies contains 65 per cent of fat, and a pound of the nut meats contains 3,290 calories, or five more than a pound of English walnuts. Our own native nut, the hickory, contains 3,345 calories, or over 67 per cent of fat.

Definition of Hickory.

There is a world of entertaining lore about our American nuts, which used to be well known when wild nuts were gathered and taken in small quantities to market. Our old Webster reads: "Hickory [North American Indian pawcohiccorra (Capt. John Smith), a kind of milk or oily liquor pressed from the pounded hickory nuts. "Pohickory" is named in a list of Virginia trees in 1653, and this was finally shortened to "hickory." J. H. Trumbull.] (Bot.) An American tree of the genus Carya, of which there are several species. The shagbark is the C. Alba, and has a rough bark; it affords the hickory nut of the markets. The swamp hickory is C. Amara, having a nut whose shell is thin and the kernel bitter."

There is no doubt about the hickory being a native nut. That "hiccorra" of the second part of the Indian name is good proof of it, but note: We think it is a new thing to make milk and butter of nuts, and there was the famous Capt. John Smith finding it among the Indians and made of the hickory nut! Nut milk in cookery is a most promising topic for investigation We know the cocoanut milk well for cooking, but what about some others?

Discrimination in Buying.

A man writing of the New York markets of 1866, at which time the characteristic American foods went to market, as they never do in these later days, names four sorts of hickory, the choicest of which was the shell bark or shag bark, having a thin shell. "They are also flatter made, with eight edges at corners, and easily to be cracked. The next best is called mocker nuts or thin shelled hickories—these are smaller and rounder but of a very thin shell, while the kernel is small but sweet."

These are the best hickories, or the only real food nuts of their species, which this writer describes thus minutely so that buyers could discriminate. By the way, he mentions the English walnut as "Madeira or English walnut," and says: "Great quantities of this foreign fruit are annually imported here and found in fine groceries, fruit stores, and markets. The Grenoble nuts are considered the best, and are in season throughout the year." Think of the progress that has been made in raising this nut in our own country! It is really a romance.

Pecan Held in Esteem.

The other nuts of the old New York market mentioned, in days when nuts and raisins were a frequent home dessert, and always served at the end of holiday dinners and banquets, are interestingly described, but we can but mention two, the chinquapin nut or dwarf chestnut, and the pecan, both American natives. Of the first the old writer says: "It is seldom seen here, but quite plenty in the markets of Baltimore and Philadelphia." I judge from my own experience that the people of the Carolinas, at least, and probably of other southern states still value this nut.

Of all the agreeable nuts most people would give the palm to the pecan, which has been extolled in New Orleans —perhaps first there—in the pralines and in the Creole nut cakes. Of all the pralines, that with the pecans has perhaps secured the widest market.

To show the native American wastefulness, we may cite the tale to be found in one of the Dotty Dimple books —I read them all. In one of these beloved girl stories of long ago Dotty goes to visit her uncle in Indiana. They all go nutting to get pecans for molasses candy. To save himself trouble the uncle cuts down the pecan tree. And this was in the period when we were a great moral people! We have yet to learn food morality, though when the fruit trees of France were recently cut down we guessed it.

By the old writer we learn that the pecan was also called "Illinois hickory," an interesting fact it seems to me. He says: "It is almost an inch long, as long as the end of a common sized finger, with a smooth shell and oblong shape. They are of an agreeable taste and wholesome. Brought here principally from the southern states and Texas." You see they were rather rare then, and we are more fortunate now in our supply of this nut so deliciously sweet and well flavored.

Almonds.

The most cosmopolitan of nuts is the almond. They use it a hundred ways in Europe in cookery where we use it in one, in the marzipan and almond tortes, in the crisp French nougat, which is something quite different from the soft French honey nougat, which is sometimes called Turkish nougat.

My own idea of one of the best ways to use the almond is to pack it thick on the top of butter cakes, wash it over with egg white and then let it get a delicious browning or roasting as the cake bakes. The cake may be some quite common raisin cake or one with nuts and pecans.

An almond soup, which is made by adding finely ground almonds to some simple, thin white sauce, preferably one celery flavored, is considered a de luxe soup in Europe, and is a good sort to give to some one who needs to have small portions of agreeable food crowded with calories. Flesh and energy may be so acquired, but to those who have not accustomed themselves to this sort of thing it seems over mild.

Salted almonds are not as wholesome as those roasted on the top of a cake because fat is used in browning them. By the way, we can use the almond on the top of a nut bread as well as crushed and added to the batter. We can chop them and sprinkle them on a soft icing on buns or loaves of bread. Halves of the thinner almond meats are a favorite decoration and flavor for the thinnest of rolled out wafers, and may be used in the center of any cookie. The time of cooking for these things, however, is hardly long enough for them to brown as they will on cake.

Plain blanched almonds make excellent eating, and there are some people who recommend them for indigestion—a doubtful remedy, or at least one with no chance of being universal. Certainly, if a man has indigestion from overeating, almonds would not be the remedy to apply. If one had indigestion from eating the first mouthful of something which politeness forced one to consume, a resort to almonds right after might be an excellent thing. I have that sort of indigestion, and probably many other people have something similar.

At any rate a box of almonds simply shelled and blanched is an excellent supply for the traveler. They are an excellent supplement when meals secured are either scanty or unpalatable. From twelve to fifteen almond nut meats yield 100 calories of energy or a pound of these nut meats averages 3,030 calories. Divide that by sixteen, and see what an ounce yields.

The Peanut.

And the greatest bounty of all among our nuts is not a nut at all—the peanut—but it answers every purpose of a nut, and today, as in 1866 we may say: "After being roasted may be found everywhere in the markets, on the street corners, apple stands, basket peddlers, etc." The long description is headed: "Peanuts, Earth Nuts, Pindar Nuts, or Ground Peas."

Raw peanuts may be cooked exactly like peas, and have been selling this winter as low as 14 cents a pound Few nuts contain anywhere near so high a per cent of protein or vegetable meat as these do. The Brazil nut has only 17 per cent, while the peanut averages over 25 per cent. It has less fat than most of the nuts grown on trees, but a pound of nut meats averages 2,560 calories.

Other Nuts.

The chestnut is the least oily of nuts, since it contains but a little over 3 per cent of fat. It is used in Italy for breads, since it is so largely starch. Because of being largely starch it contains but a few more calories per pound of nut meats than the food seeds like wheat, rice, etc.

The piñon or pine nut is as common a food among our Indians of the southwest and of Mexico as it is a fancy food in Italy, where it is used interminably on the top of sweet iced buns It contains over 61 per cent of fat, and the Indians have unconsciously reckoned on that fact in some of the uses they have made of it. They sell it to travellers as well as use it on journeys

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago.

THE INEVITABLE HAPPENS.

My chum is a slender wisp of a girl with mischievous black eyes and curly, black, bobbed hair. She spent her summer with an aunt living in a little cottage on a lake. Though she had a number of friends at the big hotel across the lake, her mornings were usually spent alone with her aunt.

Mrs. Meredith, her aunt, had a small piano, and on this the girl loved to play. Every morning involuntarily she spent most of her time singing little snatches of song, playing her own accompaniments, for she had a clear, sweet voice and Mrs. Meredith loved to hear her sing.

One morning as she was singing a dozen or more boyish voices joined. She was so startled she almost stopped—she did stop singing, but she had the presence of mind to finish playing. As she turned quickly she saw a group of young college boys grinning at her through the low open window. One of them spoke.

"Hello! I hope you'll pardon us, but under the circumstances you can hardly blame us, can she, fellows?"

Loud response in the negative, and "O, no," smiled Miss Peggy. "I enjoyed your part of the concert immensely."

They all laughed, but Harvey, the spokesman, deemed some explanation necessary.

"You see, we fellows are taking a walk around this old pond, so to speak. We're staying here for the week-end drink of water? We're sort of all in."

"Why, certainly," said Peggy. "Come right in and help yourselves."

So the dusty boys trooped out into the pretty, sunny little kitchen and were duly refreshed. Peg must have looked sweet, for Harvey hardly took his eyes from her, and she was equally popular with the other boys. Harvey begged for permission to come over again during their stay, but Peg firmly refused, as she knew her aunt would not allow it.

Finally the boys betook themselves off, declaring they had never tasted such good water or been entertained better in their lives. And they all shook hands with Peggy and Harvey managed to be the last one to go. And where was Peggy's aunt all this time? Peggy never knew, but she had to smile when she remarked "the dust settles so fast in this kitchen."

Peggy had a good laugh over the boys, and as she played softly admitted he was rather good looking.

This happened when Peggy was only 17. That fall she went to the university and the inevitable happened.

As she was walking across the campus one crisp afternoon she was startled by a voice behind: "Well, I'll be jiggered if it isn't little Peggy." Turning, she beheld a smiling Harvey.

They are engaged, as they should be, and sublimely happy. He will be graduated next year, and while he is getting established in business she will be learning how to manage a home, for if nothing goes wrong they are going to have one of their own as soon as she leaves college.

Mother Cannot Go.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 16. Among the boys and girls I go with there is one whom I like better than the rest. I have known this boy since I was 1? years old. In fact, when I'm invited to parties my mother forbids me to go unless he's going. I want to know whether it is all right for me to go with him unchaperoned.

"SYLVIA."

Under the circumstances it would be all right, although mother should find a substitute for herself in the event she is unable to accompany you.

Broke Her Word.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going with a young man nine months, but he has just broken up with me because I went to a dance after promising him I wouldn't go. Do you think he ever did care for me? If he did love me once shouldn't he forgive me? What shall I do?

ANN."

If he ever did care for you he has no right to keep on caring after a thing like that!

"Sensational?" Hardly, but Sloppy, Surely! Alack! Alas!

"THE HEART OF THE NORTH."
Produced by Griever. Presented at Barbee's.
THE CAST.

Maupome, Sergt. John Whitley	Roy Stewart
cia	Louise Lovely
The Priest	George Morrell
Briac	Harry von Meter
Archibald	Roy Justine
De Briac	Betty Marbin
Pierre Maupome	William Leon West

By Mae Tinee.

THIS film will undoubtedly have many bookings because it has been advertised as "sensational" and because there is a certain glamour about tales that have to do with the Northwest Mounted police in their picturesque haunts. Had the director (whose name I don't know) nursed it along a bit more carefully; had some one with human intelligence been permitted to edit the subtitles, it might have deserved to cut a swath. As it stands, however, it is a slouch. Nice hair, but untidy. Good clothes—but an underskirt showing.

LOUISE LOVELY.
[Hartsook Photo.]

The plot concerns twins who are separated in childhood. One is adopted by a bandit and becomes a notorious outlaw. One is taken by a captain of the mounted police, and, in the course of time, is known as a brave and gallant officer.

It becomes his duty to capture the brother he has never seen.

Roy Stewart in the double rôle is convincing when he is given any leeway at all. He is a bold, passionate, and picturesque bandit. He makes a fearless, good looking, and energetic arm of the law. But, hampered as he is by sloppy production, he doesn't get a fair show. Neither do the members of his supporting cast, who are all capable players and do their best to hide the pictorial safety pins and run down heels.

One of the features of the picture is a forest fire—which reminds me I want to ask you something: Do men put out forest fires by slapping at them with their coats? Maybe they do. However that may be, the one in question is a stagey looking thing to me, and I don't believe they treat it right.

Some of the scenery is beautiful, and the photography is all right. But that doesn't make up for the fact that French is spelled with a small "f."

CLOSEUPS

How "Vurr" Was Born.

For several years fans—curious, excited, disgusted, or irritated—have demanded to know why this department uses the word "vurr" when there ain't no such word. This morning we tell you, tell you. Read on:

Once upon a time there was a GREAT MORNING NEWSPAPER. The G. M. N. employed many reporters who got the news and wrote it up in great old style. The G. M. N. was proud of its staff.

Suddenly a cloud no larger than a man's hand (apologies to the Bible) arose in the sky. It was caused by a mere WORD of four letters that seemed here, there and everywhere. It appeared in every "head." It lent emphasis to every adjective. It stuck out like a thousand sore thumbs from every edition of the G. M. N., of which the owners were so proud.

An ultimatum went forth.

"Hereafter," said the powers, "the word '——' is not to be used excepting on Sundays and holy days!" (Or words to that effect.)

Gee whiz, what a blow! What would the writers do without their daring adverb! However, they bowed (as bow they must) to the supreme powers and "——" was no more.

The motion-picture department, feeling at an utter loss, decided to try something once. "Vurr" was the something.

It got by.

It was tried TWICE. Again—SUCCESS! We patented, copyrighted, and made carbon copies of it, and sicked it on a steady job. It wagged its tail and met with some degree of favor, withstood a number of kicks, and is still guarding the adjectives. At last reports it was husky and thriving. BUT:

After this explanation it will probably be fed a bit of poisoned meat and consigned to the tomb of its despised ancestor.

RUDOLPH VALENTINO.
[Evans Photo.]

You've heard of Rudolph Valentino? Yes. Well, his p. a. says he gets to the studio every morning at 8 o'clock. That p. a. was sure hard up for something to write about!

"Bull" Montana has been to Honolulu, where he went to take part in a wrestling contest. That was his job before he scared a director, broke a camera, and landed in the movies as "the homeliest man on the screen."

The pretty girl in the drug store where I buy a large buttermilk every morning—not because it's good for me, but because I like it—was awfully excited the other day.

EARLE WILLIAMS.
[Stacy Photo.]

"Say," she say'ed, "you know that picture where the girl rides on a log jam to save the hero? The picture the producer said never again would he allow his stars to take such chances? Bunk! I sat close to the screen, and I know the girl on the logs was a double during the dangerous part. How? The wig slipped. I saw it. And right after in a closeup, the heroine wasn't a bit wet and the girl on the logs DID get wet.

"You tellem we fans have got eyes and when they put one over on us they have got to show SPEED."

You're going to have a chance to see Beverly Bayne and Francis X. Bushman in a vaudeville sketch at the Palace next week.

We have heard that Earle Williams and his wife are on the eve—or dawn—of separation.

ASK ME! ASK ME!

STAR LOVER: All right, here's your answer, and glad to be of service. Lila Lee and Agnes Ayres may be reached in care of the Lasky studios, Hollywood, Cal.

B. T.: Charles Chaplin's "permanent address" is care of Charlie Chaplin Film company, 1416 Le Brea avenue, Los Angeles, Cal. I imagine a letter would reach him with nothing on it but his name. Don't you? But if the message you have to convey is vurr' important, better not take a chance.

BERNICE: That letter sure cost you some thought, didn't it? Write some more, Ilikareadem.

OLD TIMER: It's a shame they had to take the picture off and disappoint you! O, well, even if Christmas IS over, you'll like it just the same. Keep your eye on the movie directory, and you'll see where it's showing.

AMBISHUN: Glad you're mine "heart and soul" and that the column reminds you of your girl. Glad you'd walk a mile—and I'd walk two to see you try. Glad you like the name. Glad you wrote. And if you'll send a stamped, self-addressed envelope, you'll sure get the "dope" on scenario writing.

MARION M.: Address Rudolph (what did you say his last name is?) at 7139 Hollywood boulevard, Los Angeles. Y'wekkum.

LOST CHORD: Hist; Wait! More later!

GWENDOLYN: Jack Mullhall will receive your letter if you address it like this—5857 Harold Way, Hollywood. Reckon you mean Ben Deely. Haven't his address or age. Sorry.

FAN: No, I'm afraid you wouldn't call what Harry Myers wears now a man size mustache. But joost doesn't it make him look divilish, though!

PERSIMMON: I'll say you are. Don't do any more worrying on that score. Remember!

LILLIAN J. M.: I would send you a picture if I could, but unfortunately that is impossible. Why not write to Miss Hampton, herself? Address her

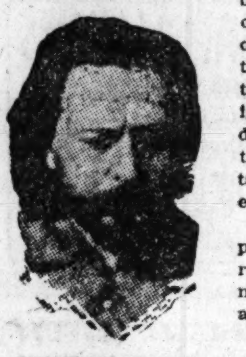
Andreyev's "He Who Gets Slapped" Transcends Prosaic Stagecraft

By James Whittaker.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—"He Who Gets Slapped" is Leonid Andreyev's dramatization of his personal, Russian, mystic, pessimistic philosophy. It is introspectacular. It was written in the belief that all Andreyev's soul was a stage. Self is its center, and the Theater guild, producing it, has gone diametrically wrong by forcing the play into the mold of the objective theater.

The script of the play is dreamlike. The guild has tried, with many paraphernalia of practical stagecraft, to wake it up. The script is strictly symbolic. The guild's production is full of hard headed, concrete properties. The writer's language is full of overtones, of words that suddenly suggest that they are echoes of a large thought which is not detailed. The guild actors' delivery of it is prosaic. It ignores the ellipsis of a phrase. It frequently reduces the form of Andreyev's visionary speech to the formula of stage repartee. Andreyev's people talk of themselves. The actors in the guild talk to each other.



LEONID ANDREYEV.

Part of the failure of the guild's production is pardonable confusion. But another part of it is rank treachery to the author. The stage directions made by Andreyev, for instance, are clearly precise about the unreal quality of stage he wanted.

He writes of the locale of the play:

"A very large, rather dirty room, with whitewashed walls. To the left, in a niche, is a window, the only outside window in the room, opening on a courtyard. The light from the window is so dim that, even by day, the electricity has to be turned up.

"At the very top of the center back wall is a row of small, dusty windows. They open on the circus hall. At night, when the performance is going on, a bright light shines through. By day they are dark. In the same wall is a large white door, reached by two stone steps, and nailed fast.

"On the right, almost in a corner, is a high, wide arched doorway which leads to the stables and the ring. By day it opens into pale darkness; at night, into pale light.

"The room is used for many purposes. It is the office of Papa Briquet, manager of the circus; here he keeps his little desk. It is the cloakroom of some factors. It is also the room where the actors gather between calls during rehearsals of performances. Again, it is a checkroom for used circus property, such as gilt arm chairs, scenery for pantomimes, and other wares of the circus household. The walls are covered with circus announcements and glaring posters."

This is specifically a vast and barren space, a world in which items seem stray and lost. There is no intimacy here. It is unfamiliar, unfriendly—an inclosure which imprisons, rather than befriends, life. Patently, it is a symbol of a larger world. It is to be as bleakly separate in the "pale darkness" of outdoors as is the earth (which it symbolizes) in the "pale darkness" of interplantetary space.

On the cluttered Garrick stage this dim room of the French circus is kind and intimate. It is rosy with many companionable furnitures. In it there is none of the suggestion of dank isolation which, in the written play, is thrown like a shroud about the many miseries of the persons who people it. Andreyev's pessimisms cannot play the play's dooms here.

The Clown of Bitter Laughter.

What probably confused the Theater guild was that Andreyev should have selected a circus as the locale for the externalization of his philosophies. There is an American legend about the joviality and happiness of circus folk. The guild stage represents that legend, not the legend of "He Who Gets Slapped."

This legend is of the imperfections of life. It is of Consuelo, the "bareback tango queen," straight, lovely, and slender in the person of Margalo Gillmore, as she skims gracefully about the circus ring, the entrance of which can be seen at the back of the Garrick stage, pedestaled on the back of her white horse, many pairs of eyes—eyes of love, eyes of greed, of lust, of envy, hate, fiendish, servile—are raised to her. The play will carry on the conflict of this universe of passions.

MISS MARGALO GILLMORE.

In the play the author is represented by the clown, "He," whose trick is to get slapped. "He" is a clown of bitter laughter, dunce sometimes, Dunsany oftener, a Pagliacci with a bladder and many laments. "He" stands in an author's relation to the other members of the play, looking into their souls as if their flesh were transparent. "He" is sardonic or sympathetic in turns. "He" can condone, but not pardon. His interference in the lives of the play's people is drastic, directive, divine.

One sees Andreyev in him as an anarchist, as most poets are. His final remedy for the mishaps of life is death.

He deals it to Consuelo, to cure her of the greed of a father who has sold her, of the lust of an ancient, rich rounder who has bought her, of her pain of the love for the athlete Bezano who has lost her, of the misery of life, which has cheated her. As he holds her in his arms, the poison he has sprinkled into the glass in which she drinks to her venal betrothals working in her veins, he sings Andreyev's song of death, a specific, and the greatest gift.

Finer Than Its Medium.

The play is written in allegories. The characters are types of their main passions. The allegorical was the only possible method. The piece has too much scope for prose. It had to be written in the larger phrases of rhapsody. It deals in prophecies and inward visions, and it naturally fell into the manner and almost the language of the Book of Revelations.

It gains in beauty many things that it loses in reality. You cannot think of any beauty of language or rhythm of words in such a play as "Lawful Larceny." There the present day reality of theme forbids niceties of sentences. The symbols of Andreyev permit him some fine speech, kept fine in the translation of Gregory Zillboorg. At times in the Garrick you may profitably lift your eyes from the stage, or close them entirely and listen to the words. They are infinitely more pictorial than the scene.

There is the essential weakness of the play. It is a little bit finer than its medium. At most times "He Who Gets Slapped" is a poem. And the modern stage is no place to sing. The actors cannot sing. They forgot how to do that when blank verse passed. Since then there has been little but blank prose on the stage. The actors talk the plays of the day, in which metaphor has no more place than in a broker's office. There is new melody in this symbolistic speech of Andreyev. It is, perhaps, a renascence of beauty in the speech of the stage. The actors must have time to catch up.

This, Brothers, Is Acting!

The Little theater idea is immersed in one of its periodic holy of holies in MacDougal street, where the Provincetown Players, in three one-acters, have suddenly and thoroughly reverted to type.

"A Little Act of Justice," by Norman C. Lindau; "Footsteps," by Donald Corley, and "The Stickup," by Pierre Loving, are little dramatic seedlings, with a pair of bedraggled, unidentifiable leaves apiece barely showing above the mire of nonsense.

The three authors are intimately protestant, nailing all sorts of riotous proclamations on the outsides of the catholic temples of theater, and waiting, giggling, I suppose, around the corner for apoplectic beadles to arrive and tear them down.

In "A Little Act of Justice" a fearsome female sits in a kitchen chair conversing in a sour southern dialect of stews and fries, while her son is just outside the door cracking a neighbor's skull with a rock. As the rock and the skull meet she slightly twitches the lower left corner of her mouth. Brothers, this is acting!

In "Footsteps" a foolish female lies dying in a colonial bed, conversing in a sweet southern dialect of romance and rubbish while her townsfolk walk back and forth on the board walk outside her window. As she dies she slightly twitches her left eyebrow. Sisters, this is stagecraft!

In "The Stickup" the ghosts of three roughnecks stand in the center of the orbit of Uranus (this is vouched for in the program) conversing in a harsh southwestern dialect of crime and divine punishment. As Pons Winneke sweeps like a French match out of the left wings and smacks them right in the button, they sigh. Ladies and gentlemen, this is art!

The Birth of a New Art.

An experiment which started twenty years ago in an empty cigar box succeeded this week in the crowded Neighborhood playhouse in East Grand street, where Thomas Wilfred, artist-scientist, asked the world what it thinks of his "color organ," the clavilux. The world—as much of it as was in the playhouse—seemed a bit too overcome to think. The things the clavilux does are as new as was once the world's first song, which must have been more surprising than pleasant at its first performance.

The mysterious clavilux projects on an opaque screen, erected in the orifice of the playhouse stage, a composition of mobile colors. These colors grow

Civic Opera Company Confronts Its Problems of F.nance and Art.

By Edward Moore.

MATTERS operatic took a pronounced turn for the better last week, when a statement was issued concerning the new Civic Opera Association of Chicago, next spring to begin functioning as the successor of the present Chicago Opera association.

It would seem that with the exception of one fairly important matter, plans are pretty well set for a new five year term of opera. All the physical properties of the present organization, all its contracts, options, and good will—the last a more important item this year than ever before—will be taken over by the new corporation—subject to the aforementioned important matter.

MARY GARDEN.

That matter is the raising of the balance of the guaranty fund wherewith to pay operatic deficits. It has been often recited that the new plan contemplated a fund of half a million dollars a year for a terms of five years, $2,500,000 in all. Half that amount has been pledged. The other half is the first task of the new company.

It has been the ardent wish of the proponents, in fact, in terms of legal verbiage, it is a condition precedent that the company should hereafter be underwritten by the citizenship of Chicago. Coming operatic seasons will not, in all probability, cost as much as other seasons have in the past. The incoming directors are pledged to an economical administration. The spectacle of squads of principal singers with no rôles to sing will become a matter of history.

But, as matters stand now, there must be a deficit, and it will be the duty of Chicago to see that the deficit is met. It is so plainly a Chicago matter that the fact has gone into the name of the new corporation. Hereafter the singing company will be called the Civic Opera Association of Chicago.

So your subscriptions for the support of your great singing organization are urged. Pledges for from $1,000 up will be asked. The directors of the new corporation are men of affairs, financiers who are not in the habit of lending their names to failures. They will not take no for an answer. Chicago must and will support its opera company.

Sign your name on the dotted line, and smile when you do it.

Cut Useless Extravagance.

It is too early to begin predicting who will be the artists of next season. With a complete reorganization and an enormous financial task as the outstanding features of the new company, there has been neither time nor opportunity to take up the matter of singers. This column printed the first news last Sunday that Mme. Galli-Curci would be among those present in future operatic appearances. It also seems fairly likely that Rosa Raisa and Giacomo Rimini will continue.

As far as the others are concerned, new contracts will have to be made. Under the former guaranty, which expires this spring, contracts were made which would expire with the guaranty. There are options on the services of some of the artists, probably affecting most of them, but Miss Garden and C. A. Shaw, the business manager, still have several weeks before the options need be exercised.

One thing is certain. A brilliant season is being contemplated, with only the items of useless extravagance cut off. Miss Garden and Mr. Shaw are both experienced in matters of the operatic stage. They, as well as the officers and directors of the incoming corporation, will see to it that the season will be brilliant artistically and gratifying financially.

In the meantime there is a guaranty still to be raised.

Last Days of the Season.

Now is the winter of the opera fans' discontent made somewhat more boreal, for the songbirds over at the Auditorium are going into their last week, preparing to shake out their last golden cascade of notes and to pack up and go elsewhere.

The eastern port of Manhattan will receive them more or less gladly for five weeks, after which they will gad about the country for eight weeks more. Baltimore will be the first stop on a tour that will carry them to the Pacific coast and part way back again to Denver and Kansas City, an ambitious undertaking that has invariably been an artistic and financial success for the company.

ROSA RAISA.
[Daguerre photo.]

This will be a farewell season to the metropolis east of the Hudson. Miss Garden announced some time ago that hereafter the company would do no more "barnstorming in New York," a remark that seems to have invited much repetition and more or less acrimonious retort.

As far as Chicago is concerned, the organization will continue on its task of preparing and presenting a large répertoire. As things look now, two more works will come up for the first time in several seasons. Both are apparently billed for the exploitation of the newly arrived Greek tenor, Ulysses Lappas.

Puccini's "The Girl of the Golden West," which pictures cowboys, miners, desperadoes, and a sheriff in terms of Italian grand opera. In addition to the tenor rôle, there will be Rosa Raisa as Minnie, and Giacomo Rimini as Jack Rance.

Charpentier's "Louise," a standard item in the company's répertoire until last season, when the Metropolitan had it, is due on Saturday afternoon. Sharing with "The Jewels of the Madonna" the fame of having the longest cast on record—it calls for thirty-four principals—it will be sung by Miss Garden, Mr. Lappas, Georges Baklanoff, Maria Claessens, Octave Dua, Irene Pavloska, Mary McCormic, Melba Goodman, and two dozen more. Giorgio Polacco will conduct both works.

It is not the custom of this department to give serious consideration to anonymous contributions. An unsigned note was received last week, however, which illustrates what may be a general misapprehension among those who are not well acquainted with operatic affairs. For that reason only, it is quoted here:

"Miss Garden would do a wise thing to give the same répertoire the last week of the season that will prevail the first week of the Chicago Opera company in New York. Quite a number of opera patrons in Chicago are of the opinion that much better casts and productions are offered the New York public than here; in fact, Chicago is sometimes spoken of as a rehearsal season. How about 'Louise' and 'Tales of Hoffmann' that were promised us, and the three world premieres (ballets)?"

TITO SCHIPA.
[De Gueldre Photo.]

It is true that the operatic ship lightened cargo in midcourse by throwing overboard several promised shipments, among them the ballets. But rather more important losses were Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Snegourotchka" and Wagner's "Die Meistersinger." These were serious, but there was no time to prepare them. "Salome" and "The Love for Three Oranges," both due for an indefinite stay hereafter in the storehouse, consumed too much of the company's activities.

Whoever wrote the note is hereby assured that the productions in New York are the same as in Chicago, and that the only difference in casts will be that a coloratura soprano named Graziella Pareto will appear there. Consider also that another coloratura soprano, Florence Macbeth, whose abilities are known and well liked, was here for most of the season and went away without having had an opportunity to sing at all.

Singing for English Song.

The society going under the name of the Opera in Our Language Foundation sends word of a concert to take place at the Drake hotel on Tuesday afternoon. Among the participants in the program will be Edith Mason, Edward Johnson, Edward Lankow, and Charles Marshall of the Chicago Opera, Beryl Brown, who used to be of it, and a newcoming soprano, Elsa Stralia. The last named is from Australia, and comes here with the recommendation of the English conductor, Albert Coates, who says she has the greatest voice in England, and the New York conductor, Walter Damrosch, who refers to her as another Lilli Lehmann.

Appended to the numerous notices of the concert is another plea for opera in English and a statement that it is the duty of the opera companies to present operas in English and of the public to give them a just hearing.

It is fairly evident that if the second part of this duty were performed the first one would also be. It is equally evident that in past times the opera-going, ticket buying public has manifested wholesale unconcern when an English performance was announced at the Auditorium. American opera or translated opera has made little difference. Patrons stayed away in large numbers.

That is the single point at issue. In all the rest of its argument this department agrees heartily with the Opera in Our Language Foundation, although it wishes that the society had fewer joints in its name.

I know that good translations can be made if the right people take up the task of making them. I have heard Mary Garden, Edward Johnson, John

Contributing Our Bit to the Shame of the Cities

By Sheppard Butler.

IT is rather a sorry commentary on our playgoing state of mind that E. H. Sothern and Miss Julia Marlowe should leave at the end of this week with the memory of a disappointing if not a disastrous month in Chicago. As was noted in this column last Sunday, attendance at the Great Northern has been brisk in the balconies, but in the revenue producing main floor seats there has been frequently no more than a corporal's guard of spectators. This is not as it should be.

MISS JULIA MARLOWE
as Ophelia in "Hamlet," at the Great Northern.
[Schwarz Photo.]

I venture the protest on no cultural grounds; no amusement seeker is under any obligation to improve his mind if he does not want to. The point is simply that those who have stayed away have been missing top-notch entertainment. There is nothing precious or "highbrow" about these beguiling performances of Mr. Sothern, Miss Marlowe, and their associates. They are spirited and to the point, addressed frankly to the groundlings, and over nobody's head. I have seldom heard more nearly continuous gales of laughter than those with which last week's audiences greeted "The Taming of the Shrew." It was incomparably the funniest show in town. And, I should say, the best acted.

If it was neglected it was partly, of course, because people didn't know how good it was. The few who do Shakespeare well must suffer because of the many who do the bard badly. The impression has gone abroad that Shakespeare is old fashioned and dull, and none have done more to foster it than the superannuated actors and "devoted bands" of third rate players who present the comedies and tragedies in season and out of season. But Chicago knows as much about Sothern and Marlowe as does New York, and New York gave them a highly prosperous engagement last fall, in the huge Century theater. So we suffer by a direct comparison.

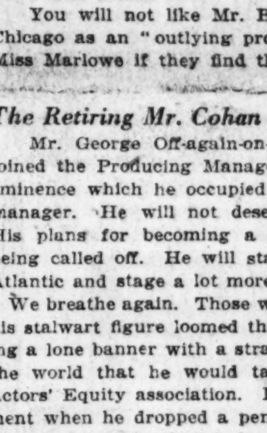
Unkind Words by a Broadway Chauvinist; Do We Deserve Them?

Heywood Broun, writing of this and that in the New York World, patted his fellow townsmen on the back last week in the following remarks:



MISS RUTH CHATTERTON
in "Mary Rose" at the Illinois.

"In paying his disrespects to the American theater in his contribution to 'Civilization in the United States,' George Jean Nathan finds, with justice it seems to us, that New York provides a more intelligent audience than any of the outlying provinces (sic). Mr. Mencken, we believe, has hailed Chicago as the intellectual center of America and, of course, tradition has assigned this rôle to Boston. Mr. Nathan dissents. Speaking of theatrical managers he writes: 'More and more they are coming to realize to their sorrow that unless New York supports these plays of the better sort they can look for no support elsewhere.'

"Chicago, boasting of its hospitality to sound artistic endeavor, spent $3,500 on a drama by Eugene O'Neill in the same week that it spent $45,000 on Al Jolson's Winter Garden show. Boston, one of the first cities to rush frantically forward with proofs of its old New England culture, has turned into a prompt and disastrous failure every first rate play presented in its theaters without a widely advertised star actor during the last five years, and at the same time has made a fortune for the astute Mr. A. H. Woods, who, gauging its culture accurately, has sent it 'Up in Mabel's Room,' 'Getting Gertie's Garter,' and similar spicy boudoir and haymow farces, together with Miss Theda Bara in 'The Blue Flame.'"

You will not like Mr. Broun better, perhaps, for his airy reference to Chicago as an "outlying province," but can you condemn Mr. Sothern and Miss Marlowe if they find themselves inclined to his way of thinking?

The Retiring Mr. Cohan Reconsiders His Retirement.

Mr. George Off-again-on-again Cohan is back in the fold. He has rejoined the Producing Managers' association and has forsaken the embattled eminence which he occupied as an "independent" manager. He will not desert the United States. His plans for becoming a London producer are being called off. He will stay on this side of the Atlantic and stage a lot more plays.

MISS LAURA HOPE CREWS
in "Mr. Pim Passes By" at Powers'.
[Abbe Photo.]

We breathe again. Those were parlous days when his stalwart figure loomed through the mists, bearing a lone banner with a strange device and telling the world that he would take no sass from the Actors' Equity association. It was a poignant moment when he dropped a pensive tear in his demitasse and bade farewell to Broadway forever. There was gloom impenetrable when he packed his lares and penates and manuscripts and announced that he would take the next boat for London.

It is better—much better—that he stay. Dramatic editors would be hard put to it to fill their columns were there not an occasional something to be said about Mr. Cohan. True, he has abated no jot nor tittle of his enmity toward the Equity and its closed shop for actors. Membership in the managers' association gives him the protection of its armistice with the Equity, which runs until 1924, but he still belongs to the Actors' Fidelity league, and to a "Fido" all things Equity are anathema.

Nevertheless, he did say good-by, and his gesture was cosmic. Now he is coming back, and the unthinking will chuckle. George always did contrive to keep us amused. And do you know any other manager who could suspend production in a bad season and get more publicity than any of those who risked their shekels and kept busy?

P. S.—They save clippings about people in THE TRIBUNE's reference room. I came upon this yesterday: "George M. Cohan said good-by to Broadway tonight. 'I'm going to leave,' was the way he put it. 'And this is an honest to goodness good-by, too. There will be no coming back for me.'" It was a New York dispatch, and was dated Feb. 22, 1913.

History does repeat itself, doesn't it?

America to See Moscow's "Chauve Souris" Players.

Many reports from Paris and London told last summer of the extraordinary vogue of Nikita Balieff's Théâtre de la Chauve Souris and the odd entertainment given by its actors. The company is now on its way to the United States under the sponsorship of Messrs. Comstock and Gest and will stage its first American performances in New York, probably next week.

MISS BETTY DAIR.
in "Under the Bamboo Tree" at the Studebaker.
[Atwell Photo.]

The title of the enterprise, of course, is the Bat (literally the Bald Mouse) theater, and its place of origin was the famous Art theater of Moscow. Before the war, and after, the players of the Art theater were accustomed to meet after the night performance in a little café and give impromptu entertainments for their mutual enjoyment. Few outsiders saw them, but their fame spread, and presently some public performances were attempted, with the atmosphere of intimacy and informality carefully preserved. A year ago the troupe journeyed from Moscow to Paris, and their success was immediate.

Their ways, by all accounts, are unlike anything in the theater. There are thirty-five people, all Russians, including designers, dancers, actors, artists and musicians. They give comedies, tragedies, songs, dances, and musical numbers in fleet succession—sometimes as many as ten in an evening. Their costumes are gorgeous and bizarre, and their scenery and lighting effects, it is said, weirdly beautiful. Besides directing the performances, Balieff comes before the curtain for each episode and explains to the audience in English just what the players are about to do. And he, they say, is a comedian of no mean ability.

The Chauve Souris troupe will be housed in the Shuberts' new Forty-ninth Street theater in New York, which will be vacated by Leo Ditrichstein this week after a brief and unprofitable showing of "Face Value." This is the play which he acted at the Studebaker last summer under the title "That Homely Henriquez." It has not gone well, and will be discarded in favor of "The Great Lover" and "Toto," which Ditrichstein will act again on tour.

"The Beggar's Opera" Again; News of the Theaters.

That quaint symposium of eighteenth century deviltry, "The Beggar's Opera," which we saw at the Central last March, is coming for another visit. It will arrive at the Olympic on Feb. 12, following Robert B. Mantell's engagement, and will stay two weeks. The company has been on the Pacific coast and in Canada; its appearance here will be in the nature of a "stopover" on its way east.

This 194 year old piece of John Gay's has proved one of the most profitable of current theatrical properties. It had an amazing run in London and is now being sung, in English, at the tiny new Théâtre Caumartin in Paris, where it is being received with delight both by French audiences and by visitors from England and America. The English company which is touring the United States proposes to continue its activities throughout the season.

I am told, though I do not vouch for the tale, that the "Gordon Dean" named on the playbills as the author of Walker Whiteside's new play, "The Hindu," is a composite person comprising the identities of Mr. Whiteside and his associated players, Miss Sydney Shields and Ian Maclaren, all of whom, it is said, took a hand at devising the lurid intricacies of the melodrama. Not many actors have the fun of making up a play as they go along.

Miss Francine Larrimore will seek adventure next Thursday afternoon by going out to the National theater on the south side and acting with the resident stock company for one performance, in her old rôle as the central figure of Cosmo Hamilton's "Scandal." "Just for the fun of it," says Miss Larrimore, "——also to see what I've learned since I played this rôle."

Observing "The Last Waltz," at the Garrick, you may wonder, as I did, where you have seen its droll funmaker, Eddie Nelson, before. He is half of the team of Nelson and Chain, which cut capers at the Olympic last season in the California revue brought by the dancing impresarios, Fanchon and Marco.

"The Silver Fox," acted in New York by William Faversham last fall, is named as a prospective arrival at the Central. Mr Faversham will not be in it, but some other members of the original cast will.

Gus Edwards, ever seeking new fields to conquer, plans an elaborate summer revue to occupy the Palace Music hall during the months ordinarily dedicated to darkness by that playhouse.

The sudden illness of Miss Alice Brady has interrupted the New York career of "Drifting," the new melodrama about China by John Coulton and D. H. Andrews. Miss Brady's rôle was offered to Miss Florence Reed last week, but she declined it, and Miss Helen Menken is now mentioned as a possibility. Meanwhile, Miss Reed is preparing to go into vaudeville in a "period" sketch, which, if you don't know, is something with old fashioned costumes.

Miss Irene Bordoni is abandoning vaudeville to appear in "The Little French Doll," a farce adapted by A. E. Thomas from the French of Paul Armont and Marcel Gerbidon. Armont is one of the authors of "Le Chevalier au Masque," which Leo Ditrichstein played here as "The Purple Mask."

Miss Grace George, having had no luck with "Marie Antoinette," contemplates a reversion to her original plan of acting in "The Exquisite Hour," by Margaret Wright.

The French Modern theater will offer its fourth production of the season in Kimball hall on Tuesday afternoon and evening. The play is "La Souriante Madame Beudet," by Amiel and Obey.

care of First National, 1540 Broadway, New York City. Glad to be of some service—sorry not to be of more.

A. H. K.: You saw Miss Kenyon in "Get Rich Quick Wallingford," didn't you? If so, we have no record of it. She was born in Syracuse, N. Y., Sept. 6, 1897, and has been on the stage in a number of productions, among which were "Princess Pat," "The Girl in the Limousine," and "The White Villa." She has appeared in numerous motion pictures. She is 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs 125 pounds, has brown hair and gray eyes, and her home address is 850 West End avenue, New York. "Interesting facts" you asked for. Do these qualify?

MIKE: Not this year.

E. L. G.: Well, Lee Shumway isn't on our married list so——? Address Gertrude Olmsted at 6024 Hollywood boulevard, Los Angeles. The little chap you mention was killed in an accident some time ago. Enid Bennett has a child.

FRANKE: O, you will, will you? Vurr' well. Viola Dana receives her mail care of Metro studios, Hollywood. I have your "thanx." Here's my T'wokkum.

INKIOUS IKE: O, no. Nevair! We merely accept his apology.

L. S. V.: "A hard working wife and mother!" Well, you're doing your bit in the world! And to think you took the time to write that letter! You don't know, Mrs. S. V., how much I appreciate your thoughtfulness. Robert Harron is dead. He shot himself while cleaning a pistol. Good luck to you and yours.

MUSIC AND THE MUSICIANS

McCormack, and, during his lifetime, David Bispham sing in English, and I know how clearly the English language can be pronounced in song. I heard Edouard Cotreuil, at a time when he spoke little English, sing the translated version of King Henry in an Englished "Lohengrin" and pronounce the words more distinctly than many of the native born.

I am certain that a singer who cannot pronounce English distinctly in song is to that extent an imperfect singer. I grow decidedly ill tempered when I hear it maintained that the language that produced Shakespeare, Milton, Keats, Shelley, and Rudyard Kipling is not a good language for singing or any other purpose.

Also, the Chicago Opera association, which at present upholds the doctrine of opera in the language in which it was written, gave itself completely away this season when the news came out that Prokofieff's "Love for Three Oranges" had a libretto written in Russian by Prokofieff and translated into French by some one else.

But the unwillingness of the company to enter into an Englished experiment has some justification, and it is not the fault of the company but of the public. The public stays away.

This department offers its own suggestion, a timid one. Suppose a group of ticket buyers large enough to have influence pledged itself to buy tickets for English performances and to stay away from all others. That would create an issue with all the cards showing.

Gatty Sellars, English organist-composer, and Signe Hagen, Danish soprano, will give recitals today at the Wicker Park Lutheran church at 4, and at the Unity Lutheran church at 7:30. At each recital Mr. Sellars will extemporize on a requested theme from the audience. Admission is free.

One of the items on the musical program of the Sunday Evening club at Orchestra hall tonight will be a composition by Philo A. Otis, secretary of the Orchestral Association of Chicago. It is called "Christ Is Knocking at My Heart."

Sinai Social center will inaugurate a series of ten orchestral concerts tonight at Sinai temple.

Dickinson and Deagon:

"You say your mother sent you out here to sing, little girl?"

"Yes, sir., She thought maybe I could support the family."

"Well, you're going to miss a lot of meals. Look here, why are you crying? Has something happened to your papa?"

"Yes, sir. He got so tough we had to kill him."

"What business was he in?"

"He was an importer."

"An importer? From where, Europe?"

"No, sir. From Canada."

MAJESTIC.

Babe Ruth and Wellington Cross:

"Well, Babe, here you are in vaudeville."

"Yes, and I want to show you the contract I've just signed."

"Let me see. What are all these figures?"

"Why, that's my salary."

"O, I thought it was your batting average.

"A couple of weeks ago when we were in Washington Marshal Foch came to see Babe in vaudeville and after the show he came back stage. Babe said to me, 'What am I going to talk to him about?' I said, 'O, say anything at all.' So Babe asked him if he had been in the war."

Andreyev's "He Who Gets Slapped" Transcends Prosaic Stagecraft

like swelling sounds out of darkness. They take shapes on the screen, float iridescently in a measure dictated by the performer's sense of rhythm, and modulate into flower hues and flower shapes as they float.

I can perhaps give you some suggestion of them by telling that they have a remote likeness to the spots and splashes of color which speckle the inner lid of your eye when, after staring at the sun, you drop it. They are effective, but hypnotic, intensely emotional, entirely mystical. They seem to be a realization of a perfect abstract art, in which form is present but perfectly flexible, the appeal to the senses acute but pure, and the personality of the performer projected without projection of his person. It is art winnowed of all chaff—without the distressing pant of the singer's lungs, the frog in the actor's throat, the bubble in the orchestral horn, the corn on the dancer's toe.

Back stage in the playhouse after the performance Wilfred told the history of his creation. He has lived all his life in Huntington, a small town of Long island, where, when he was a boy, he started experimenting in optical science with a hole in an empty cigar box, through which he tried projecting light through colored glass. A bit of beer bottle and a candle were thus the parents of the huge steel box of mystery which he was closing for the night when I accosted him.

He told that he had trained to become a singer at one time, always cultivating, however, his idée fixe of a soundless symphony for the sense of sight. He had made a thousand abortive experiments before he hit on his present idea of electricity as the fluid medium of his color expression.

The keyboard of the clavilux is a series of suspended discs, sensitive to the slightest impulse of touch. The inventor told that they take inspiration from the performer's finger tips more delicately than the keys of a concert piano or the strings of a violin.

"An unpremeditated tremor of a muscle," said Wilfred, "would throw some angry splotch of color on the screen that would look worse than a sour note sounds."

Scriabine, the Russian composer, when he wrote the famous "Prometheus" overture with a color obbligato which no orchestra conductor has ever been able to decipher, dreamed the vision this Long island boy has realized. Wilfred hesitated when he was asked if he could play the Scriabine notation. He confessed that he studied the Russian's score, but admitted that he had not been able to fathom its meaning.

He has a system of notation for his new art. Scriabine had none. His fear is that he might make nonsense of Scriabine's intent, not that his clavilux is not equal to the task. But for those who were in Wilfred's first audience the first impulse, after complete surrender to the emotion of the new art, is to speculate on the scope of its application. It will ultimately be an ally and alloy of fine music.

MEETINGS TODAY.

Dr. Albert Jansick will address the North Shore Society of Applied Psychology this evening at 8 o'clock on "A Practical Demonstration of Applying Hydrotherapy and Dieting in Acute Diseases" The society meets in Terminal hall, Wilson and Clifton avenues.

The Fellowship Devoted to Science, Religion, and Social Progress will meet this morning at 11 o'clock in hall 613 Masonic temple. The Rev. Ellis Carr will speak on "Intellect—Origin and Evolution—How Thoughts Are Made—Mental Growth, Success, and Healing."

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Smart Set Dusts Guide Books as Social Tide Ebbs

By Mme. X.

LORADO TAFT'S "Fountain of Time" on the Midway depicts Father Time as standing still watching mankind pass before him in a formless mob. It is the correct interpretation of the relationship between us and time. The latter, being without either beginning or end, is by its nature stationary. It is we who move with varying speed toward our unknown destinies.

The only correction I would suggest in Mr. Taft's allegorical work is to depict the throng of humanity in his fountain as whirling by in a mad rout. That is Chicago's natural pace.

Here it is already on the way to spring before we realize that winter has come. The peak of the season is passed. The days are growing longer. The social tide is on the ebb. Many of the smart set, the American equivalent for Europe's leisure class, are scattering for their annual search for sunshine and warmth.

The Chicago contingent, so numerous in southern California, is gathering in Santa Barbara, in Pasadena, and in the other popular resorts on the western coast. Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson, Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. McGann, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Patten, Mrs. William P. Nelson have already moved their households, their chauffeurs, their motors, and so forth to the pleasant glades of Montecito valley outside of Santa Barbara, Cal. Mr. and Mrs. John J. Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lewis Cochran, and Frank Cramer are soon departing for Pasadena. Mr. and Mrs. Hugh J. McBirney, Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson, and Mrs. L. B. Phelps are sailing together in ten days for France, the balmy Riviera being their special destination. Arthur Aldis is organizing a caravan for an expedition to start for the center of Sahara in February. One would think our enlightened land furnished enough of a desert for him.

The Call of the Moon.

Mrs. C. M. Ely and Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman have been for a week or more basking in the overwhelming sunshine and sea breezes of Bermuda. Mr. and Mrs. Honoré Palmer, in spite of the destruction of their Florida house last month, are again there superintending the rebuilding of it and enjoying the soft and restful air of Sarasota. Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Pike, not daunted by reports of unrest in Egypt, are on their way to a private seance with the sphynx and to climb the pyramids. Mr. and Mrs. George A. McKinlock are dusting their guide books which deal with the lands lying about the Mediterranean, a territory which has from time immemorial lured travelers from their homes and domestic affairs. The Arabic, which sails next Saturday, will carry with it to Italy Mr. and Mrs. Frank Waller, Mrs. Charles I. Pierce, Miss Pierce, and William R. Moore. Mrs. Cyrus Bentley left Chicago last Friday on her way to Hawaii and China.

This is not intended as a complete list of the beau monde now on the wing; it is merely a passing glimpse of the hurrying horde in which a few familiar figures are present for a moment. Time, with veiled lids, stands watching a restless humanity, a surging tide which answers, without knowing it, the call of the moon. And the moon bids it travel in distant lands where a surcharged antiquity makes life intricate and difficult but alluring to the eager American surfeited with the luxuries of his modern and extra comfortable country. The urge to travel is a phenomenon older than the days of Ulysses.

That Sense of Superiority.

The social season of 1921-'22 will go down in local history as a more than usually lively and tumultuous one—an epoch making period. The Chicago Medicis have occupied rather more of the stage than is their custom, though not to the exclusion of other social soul stirring events, events which unfortunately attracted an unintended widespread publicity overshadowing for a time even our distinguished municipal problems.

But, as a well known Chicago belle of a former generation said, "I don't much care what people say about me provided they say something."

Some noted ex-Chicagoans, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Poole, who, having known us only in the days of our callow, formless immaturity, found ours poor soil for art and literature, and so went to New York for a home, have been sojourning here lately and profess to find in the new Athens, which is rising out of the marshes along the "River of the Skunk," a wonder city.

Personally, we are prone to suspect folk from New York when they praise our looks. Even a short stay in Gotham seems to infuse the average Chicagoan with an ineffable sense of superiority, an unmistakably urbane quality which makes Chicagoans feel uncouth and provincial.

It is an undeniable fact that the average Gothamite is better groomed, smarter looking, more highly polished than we of Chicago. Perhaps our richer, more carboniferous atmosphere may account for this difference. Or it may be that our more strenuous life—many of us feel as if the reformation of the world was our particular job—gives us litle time for personal adornment. Whatever the reason may be, it is undeniable that when we Chicagoans go to New York we take a sudden inventory of our persons and generally find much that needs attention.

A Chicago woman who had been spending some months in New York returned to her home town and went shopping. She was carefully marcelled and wore what she usually did in New York for like expeditions. She met a Chicago friend, who exclaimed:

"Mercy, how grand you look! Are you going out to luncheon?"

Mrs. Richard T. Crane Jr. of 1550 Lake Shore drive is co-chairman with Harold F. McCormick for the gala charity concert tonight at 8:30 o'clock at the Auditorium theater. The largest number of world famous stars ever gathered together at a Chicago concert will donate their services. They are Galli-Curci, Muratore, Schipa, Van Gordon, Pavley and Oukrainsky, Prokofieff, and John Alden Carpenter. The beneficiaries are the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society and three French war charities.

MISS HELEN REND.

Miss Helen Rend, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Rend of 70 Scott street, made her debut at a ball at the Blackstone Dec. 21. Miss Rend's beauty and charm of manner have made her as popular as her elder sister, Miss Mary Rend, who came out several winters ago.

Colonel and Mrs. William V. Jacobs of Glencoe announce the engagement of their daughter, Katharine, to Tom Edwards Hough, son of Mrs. Walter Hough of Evanston. The wedding will take place on March 30.

An Insight Into China.

Seldom has a more interesting visitor come this way than Admiral Ting-kan Tsai, the distinguished representative of China, who spent a few days here with Mr. and Mrs. William Bush last week on his way home from the disarmament conference. He was delightfully wise and witty both in private conversation and in his public addresses.

Born in the southern part of China, he was brought up in the north, so he has the lively disposition of the south Chinese and the courtesy and dignity of the Manchus. In appearance he is rather short and with the round outlines of the Cantonese. The Manchus are tall and spare, with slanting eyes. He speaks English perfectly, with that wide choice of words which the educated foreigner often has.

Nothing could be more entirely of his nation and race than the insight into Chinese life and traditions which a small and informal luncheon party was vouchasfed last Tuesday. He was the guest of honor and was telling of the customs of his country.

His face radiated happiness as he described the reburial of his parents two years ago, thirty years after their deaths. The first funeral, he said, was all white to express the profound grief of their children at their departure from life. The second one was in red to show the joy which their descendants felt at the memory of such fine parents. He had had made for them two beautiful new coffins out of fragrant cypress wood.

While he was having these two made he ordered one for himself of the same sweet smelling wood. He has it now in his library. He took out many of his books to make room for it in the place where he spends hours each day. He got into it when it came "and I found it," he said, "comfortable, roomy, and fragrant. I shall be content to sleep there. And when I go into my library nowadays I like to smell that sweet, spicy odor."

Why They Lagged Behind.

There were over 300 guests at his parents' second burial and ninety tables of food served them. It was a great occasion. The worship of ancestors is one of the most deeply rooted characteristics of the Chinese people. By many it is considered as one reason for their lagging behind in the procession.

But Admiral Tsai says they are not lagging now. They are running fast to catch up. Over 130,000 public schools in China have been established in the last ten years besides the many private and missionary schools. And the old method of education has been abandoned in favor of the European curriculum of reading, writing, arithmetic, and geography.

In his address at the Casino last Tuesday evening on the occasion of the founding of the latest body of friendly souls, the American Friends of China, he made a powerful appeal for the loosening of the bonds with which foreign nations have tied the Chinese giant. He impressed all his hearers with his sincerity and eloquence as well as with his humor.

The organization which was born that evening has as its objects the promotion of a better understanding between us and the other great republic bordering the Pacific, and the study of Chinese art and ideals. Also it purposes to purchase from time to time Chinese art treasures for the Art institute.

An Affair of Five Stripes.

To a committee on organization, of which Mrs. Arthur Ryerson is chairman, was confided the task of settling on a permanent president. Charles L. Hutchinson was made treasurer and Henry J. Patten was temporary secretary.

A large company of people was at the dinner which preceded the evening reception. Among those who gathered at this inception of what may prove to be an influential and helpful society were Mr. and Mrs. William H. Bush, Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hamill, Mr. and Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. John Farwell, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Tyson, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh J. McBirney, Capt. and Mrs. Wurtsbaugh, Mr. and Mrs. George Higginson, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Haines, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Peabody, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lewis Cochran, Miss Mary Waller, Miss Frances Keep, Miss Insull, Watson Blair, Samuel Insull, Arthur Aldis, Col. Gulick, Harry Pratt Judson, and Charles L. Hutchinson. The flag of the Chinese republic adorned one end of the room. It is an affair of five stripes, a red one for China, a yellow one for Manchuria, a blue one for Mongolia, a white one for Turkestan (or Mohammedan China), and a black one for Thibet.

More Engaging than Fiction.

I don't see how any one could read the report of the Chicago Visiting Nurse association without a swelling of the heart and a moistening of the eyes. It is a record of suffering on the one hand and heroism on the other which makes more absorbing reading than any fiction can. In 1921 the 104 nurses of the society made 248,955 calls on 33,073 patients, covering cases in every poverty stricken part of the city.

The stories of their experiences in this beautiful work are infinitely various and touching. Wherever they go they encounter unbelievable ignorance, pathetic want, intolerable suffering, and radiant gratitude. There is no finer class of women than this band which is devoting itself to bringing skilled care, comfort, and sympathy into thousands of darkened homes.

I am only sorry there is not space in this column to relate some of the poignant incidents contained in the many reports made by the nurses and supervisors, as well as by officials of the association. Some of these stories will be given at the annual meeting which will take place on Tuesday afternoon at the Blackstone hotel at 3 o'clock. There will be screen pictures also to add to the vividness of the accounting which the society is giving of its work this last year.

The Visiting Nurse association was incorporated in 1890, so it is entering on the thirty-second year of its splendid career. Its present president is Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy; Mrs. Henry Tuttle is first vice president; Mrs. A. A. Sprague is second vice president; Mrs. Robert G. McGann in recording secretary; Mrs. Uri B. Grannis is corresponding secretary; Mrs. Albert H. Wolf is treasurer, and Miss Margaret Conover is assistant treasurer. Thirty-five members with varying terms of office compose the board of directors. Miss Edna Foley has for years been the superintendent of the nurses' staff. She has made a record in this field of labor which is known all over the country, and has set a standard for this kind of work from Maine to California. Chicago has reason to be proud of this band of devoted women whose uniform carries with it the promise of so much moment to the poor and suffering.

Tonight at the Auditorium.

Tonight's grand concert at the Auditorium is a wonderful opportunity for those who want to see the brightest stars in the world of operatic music in close conjunction. As a rule one only sees and hears one or two of these luminaries at a time. This evening one can enjoy Mme. Galli-Curci, Lucien Muratore, Tito Schipa, Cyrena Van Gordon, Serge Prokofieff, John Alden Carpenter, Pavley, and Oukrainski, all in one performance.

Accompanying himself on a Spanish guitar, Schipa will sing Mexican songs. It sounds like a delightful combination. A flute will be the instrument accompanying Mme. Galli-Curci. It almost sounds like a challenge from the flute to the lady, for never was there a more deliciously flutelike voice than that of the Italian diva. Any flute might tremble for its particular kind of supremacy. In such operas as "Rigoletto," "Traviata," and "Lucia" there is nothing more interesting than to observe the flute pursuing that exquisite voice up, up, and still up.

All Chicagoans will be particularly interested to be present at an occasion like tonight's program when John A. Carpenter will on the piano accompany Miss Cyrena Van Gordon's singing. She is a delightful singer, while Mr. Carpenter's renown in the world of music grows from year to year adding great luster to his native town. Generations hence, when the names of Mrs. William G. Hibbard is one of the directors of the Illinois League of Women Voters, which opens its second school of citizenship to the women of Chicago and the state on Jan. 23 in room 1010 Fine Arts building. In addition to her interest in the school Mrs. Hibbard, who is a Bryn Mawr alumna, is working for the success of the Pan-American Conference of Women, to be held next April, delegates to which are to be entertained by President M. Carey Thomas at Bryn Mawr college. They also will be guests of honor at a massmeeting to be held in Washington on April 28, at which Secretary of State Hughes will be a speaker.

You May Enroll Now in School for Women Voters

By Kate Webber.

INTERNATIONAL relationships and their especial influence upon various governmental questions will be one of the pertinent topics presented during the school of citizenship sponsored by the Illinois League of Women Voters which opens on Monday, Jan. 23, and continues until Feb. 5.

The success of the school conducted by the league last year, in which 150 women devoted daily study to questions pertaining to both the theory and actual working out of civic principles, has led to this work becoming a permanent part of the league's program. This year's course is so planned that it will answer the purpose of a post graduate course for last year's students and at the same time give an understanding of the rudiments of citizenship work to persons who have not heretofore made a study of the subject.

Following the registration on the opening day, which, like the daily morning and afternoon sessions, will be held in room 1010 Fine Arts building, Mrs. Henry W. Cheney, state president of the league, will outline the purposes of the school. John F. Bass will explain "The Economic Relation of the United States to Europe." Prof. James A. James of Northwestern university will discuss "American Ideas in Reconstruction." Mrs. Hannah [illegible] Solomon and Duncan Clark of the City club will present phases of the present day European situation. At the afternoon session William R. Moss, chairman of the executive committee, Chicago Association of Commerce, will be one of the speakers.

A series of quizzes will be inaugurated at the Tuesday afternoon session; for instance, "Why Has Democracy Failed More in City Government than Elsewhere?" Other topics for that day are "Why Men Do Not Vote," by Charles E. Merriam; "Political Parties in American History," by William E. Dodd, and "City Government - Its Powers, Responsibilities, and Forms," by Mrs. May Wood Simons of Northwestern university.

Mrs. William S. Hefferan will preside on Wednesday, when immigration will be discussed by Miss Genevieve Forbes, Mrs. Frederick Macnish, Miss Frances Wetmore, and Harris Keeler, in addition to the second in the series of lectures by Mrs. Simons on "Standards of Efficiency in Municipal Administration." Miss Florence Nesbit will speak on "The Consumer."

"Paying Chicago's Bills" will be explained by John A. Richert on Thursday. Judge Harry Olson also speaks on "The Municipal Court" and Mrs. Simons lectures on "Special Municipal Problems—Finances, Judiciary." On Friday Miss Mary Bartelme will speak on "The Relation Between the Courts," Miss Kate Meade on "The Bureau of Social Service in Cook County," and Mrs. Simons will lecture on "Organization and Function of County Government." Mrs. George C. Sikes will conduct a round table on the teaching of citizenship.

In addition to a debate on "Equitable Representation in the State Legislature" on Saturday the "Short Ballot for Illinois" will be discussed, and the first week's session will close with a luncheon given by the Chicago League of Women Voters at the Chicago Woman's club.

The second week will continue with a definite program presented by civic leaders and faculty members from Chicago university, Northwestern, and the University of Illinois. Prof. David Kinley of the latter institution speaks on "Federal Aid to Public Schools" on Feb. 3. Mrs. James W. Morrisson, first vice president of the league, presides on that date, and a further discussion on international relations will be held.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS

On Wednesday at 2 o'clock Stuart P. Sherman of Urbana, Ill., will address the Chicago Woman's club on "The Worship of the Great God 'They.'" This afternoon will be student fellowship Sunday at the meeting of the Sunday open door at 3 o'clock. Mrs. Wallace Bruce Amsbary will preside, Bishop Samuel Fallows will give the invocation, and there will be a musical program, which will be followed by tea. Tomorrow at 1 o'clock the municipal recreation committee will meet, and at 2:15 o'clock Prof Arthur Lunn will address the philosophy study class on "The Einstein Theory." Wednesday at 10:30 o'clock the art and literature department will hold a business meeting. Thursday at 10:15 o'clock the English study class will meet with Dr. Herbert Edwin Lewis. The education and philosophy department will give a luncheon at noon Saturday, which will be followed by a discussion on music in the public schools by Miss Mary Wood Chase and Osbourne McConathy.

There will be a meeting of the board of directors and chairmen of committees of the Woman's City club tomorrow at 10:30 o'clock. Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock the citizenship class will meet in the lounge with a talk by Miss Anna E. Murphy, Twenty-sixth ward superintendent. John A. Richert will speak on "The Budget as It Applies to Ward Appropriations." The Seventh Ward league will meet at 12 o'clock Wednesday for luncheon. The Park Ridge branch will meet at 2:30 Wednesday afternoon. There will be a buffet supper in the club café on Wednesday evening from 6 until 7:30 o'clock, which will open the membership drive. News....of.... CHICAGO SOCIETY those most talked about now in our public life will have passed into oblivion, it is the names of such as John Carpenter that will be still recorded. Who knows now or cares for the name of the mayor or of the richest man or the most fashionable woman in the town where Mozart was born?

Composer to Take Part.

Another composer who will take part in tonight's entertainment is Serge Prokofieff the Russian, whose opera, "The Love for Three Oranges," was produced recently. The two leaders of our opera ballet, Pavley and Oukrainski, are likewise preparing a terpsichorean "divertissement" for the occasion. It is hoped that a generous sum will be realized for the three French charities and for the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society.

Members of the Junior league will have charge of the selling of progams tonight. Miss Mary Waller, who is, bar none, the best amateur publicity agent in the city, as was proved in the days of the women's branch of the State Council of Defense, has been in charge of the publicity for this entertainment.

On next Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock that valuable organization, the Antiquarian society, will have its annual meeting in its rooms in the Art institute. Mrs. J. Rowe Earle of Boston will give a talk on "Old Lace," showing slides of samples of lace from 1650 to 1800. There will also be a loan collection of rare laces, lent by members.

The women pouring tea will wear pieces of old family lace or old time costumes trimmed with lace. The Essex institute of Salem, Mass., is lending for the occasion nine colonial gowns, which will be placed on figures around the room. The tea tables, too, will be set forth in ancient fashion. It promises to be a picturesque occasion.

The officers of the society are: President, Mrs. Potter Palmer; secretary, Mrs. B. F. Ayer; treasurer, Mrs. Noble B. Judah; while the directors include the Mesdames S. E. Barrett, William R. Linn, W. O. Goodman, John H. Winterbotham, Chauncey McCormick, Harry Pratt Judson, Martin Ryerson, and Charles L. Hutchinson.

Twilight of a Forest.

Although it took place ten days ago, this column must make a mention of the Jungle ball, which set a new standard for costume balls. It was quite the most brilliant thing of the kind which has been done here. The ballroom decorations were the last word in the artistic. The same sultry glow which illumines the desert of Sahara at sunset pervaded the main ballroom, while opening off from it, through a hanging fringe of palms and Georgia moss, was the jungliest sort of supper room, where dusky attendants served recumbent guests. The latter partook of their supper somewhat as the ancient Romans did, in reclining positions on low couches set about tables as low, in the moonlit twilight of an African palm forest. The fantastic, many hued costumes in these tropical surroundings were enormously effective.

It is promised that this is merely the inauguration of an annual ball. It will not be, however, a twelfth night affair. It is decided to have it on the first Friday after New Year's day.

As the dance hall was so crowded that at times locomotion was difficult, the "explorers" are going to limit still further the list of invited, threatening to include only the real dancing contingent of Chicago society. Already plans are on foot to make the next one outdo this initial ball, though just in what way is not yet hinted.

Rousing Civic Consciences.

Dances, charity entertainments, and politics all in turn occupy the attention of the modern Chicago woman. On Wednesday afternoon next the Woman's Roosevelt Republican club will meet at 3 o'clock for the purpose of forming a Twenty-first ward branch.

The notice sent out by the club announces it is formed for the "sole purpose of improving political conditions in Chicago and Cook county, and that it needs the active coöperation of every woman who believes in good government."

D. Allen Albert, friend of Roosevelt and well known lecturer, will speak on "A Civic Conscience for Chicago." Mrs. Ira Couch Wood will talk on "Practical Problems in the Coming Election." Mrs. Murry Nelson will preside, and Mrs. Julia Manierre will sing. The meeting will be held in the residence of Dr. George S. Isham, 1340 North State street.

BEST SELLERS OF THE AGES

By Eye Witness.

Sixth Paper—Dumas the Younger's "Lady of the Camellias."

"ALEXANDRE is Dumas fils but you are not Dumas pere," said that Marie Duplessis who was the original of the Lady of the Camellias to the old Dumas, and added, "and you never will be!"

The son caught up the remark and gave it the deft and deathless turn, saying:

"No, he is a big child of mine, born when I was quite young."

The little Marie, dead now this many a year but on whose grave in the cemetery of Montmartre the Parisians were laying flowers up to twenty years ago, was, it is obvious, not alone witty but the source of wit in others.

Another time, when the play that grew out of the novel young Dumas had written four years before was very new, somebody said the play was so good that he was surprised that the father had no share in it.

"O, but I had," upspoke Papa Dumas—"the author is by me!"

Yes, like the Duplessis girl who veritably posed to Dumas fils for Marguerite Gautier, and so has an immortal name in the annals of sentiment, like her this novel and this play have been enormously provocative—of sermons and sentiment and sentimentality, of controversy that often descended to billingsgate, of tears copious and not all idle, of wit and of ribaldry, and of traditions of acting so glorious that they carried the names of two women of our time around the world, acting such as most of us who have followed the annals of the art since the early '80s expect never to see again.

I much doubt if any other tale of sentiment has taken such hold of the last two generations of mankind all over the occidental world as has this narrative of the love of a youth for a wanton woman who began by laughing at him and ended by dying for him. The eighteenth century had "Clarissa Harlowe", the nineteenth had "The Lady of the Camellias" to assuage with tears that divine—or at least is it not laudable?—impulse, nay necessity, of the human heart to pity something. It is a fact, curious though meaningless enough, that they appeared precisely a hundred years apart—Richardson's story in 1748, Dumas' in 1848.

Among books that actually are sold to, and read by, generation after generation of readers of all sorts—men of letters and shop girls, young women and old of the world of fashion, courtesans and critics, this "Lady of the Camellias" is an outstanding book on four points. They are: the youth of its author coupled with the astonishing perspicacity of his insight into a certain kind of human nature; its influence both as a literary form and as a document in ethics (it was really the parent of the tender humanity of "Trilby"); the hold it took upon the popular heart in all countries (I have found a tattered copy of it in a sequestered Polish inn down by the Pripet marshes, and once I picked up another, with the king's book plate inside, from the plaster-strewn floor of a Servian palace after bombardment); and, lastly, the theatrical history it has made—Doche, Bernhardt, Duse, Matilda Heron, Modjeska, Clara Morris, Rejane, Nethersole, Anglin—ah, such first nights those were! In my time—I mean when I took a passionate and officious interest in such things—you could see the play in the most squalid of little stock and hole-in-the-wall theaters (not always ignobly done there, either), and then there would be nights of radiant Sarah of the voice of gold at the historic Monnaie in Brussels and the old king of the Belgians hurrying up from the castle in the Ardennes to see the most exquisite, the most delicious, the most heart-searching acting then vouchsafed to Europe.

Glamour! glamour! yes that was partly the spell, my children—so much glory and so many tears—but that spell went deeper. Let us discover. Once, when I was younger, but my question not on this occasion wholly bumptious, I asked Anthony Hope why Dickens survived, why all the faults were as naught when it came to the love and the point of view of the millions—and of the choice spirits, too, who just then were beginning to formulate their anti-Victorianism. That grave, sweet man, who never snubbed anybody, replied in his grave, sweet way: "He had great humanity. I think it is that—the great humanity."

That is the key, it seems to me, to the secret of the survival of Dumas' book, a book, ignoring which, you ignore much that is of surpassing interest in the history of nineteenth century morals and taste and art. The book suffered from the over-sentimentalizing of its central figure by imitators and lovers of the book and by actresses of the play that grew out of the book. The consequence of that was a reaction to ribaldry, and it came to be considered an acute thing to make a jest and a mockery of so much sorrow and so much pain. None the less is the book's inherent quality the quality of an almost consuming pity for human error and human grief. In short, tenderness touches it almost everywhere to beauty. The fault which made it a masterpiece of the second order instead of the first was not mawkishness but excitability. There is an extenuation of the fault. Dumas fils was 24 when he sat down to write it, and his Armand, who, as he once told Mme. Bernhardt, was himself, was not only a youth but a Parisian youth. At 24, in Paris, the blood beats high—and the son of the musketeer could not be austere. In any event, whatever the excesses of his loving and his style, he was in his book being himself. There exist documents to prove this, and in a long course of collecting camelias, as it were, I have obtained copies of them. But first there is this reminiscence by Mme. Sarah:

> At Marly, about 1884, I asked Alexandre Dumas to give me a personal description of Armand Duval. 'That will not be difficult,' he said smiling; 'I have only to send you my portrait when I was twenty years old.'

Now a document, for on Jan. 28 of the same year Dumas, still having ten years to live, wrote Mme. Sarah this letter:

> My Dear Sara: Permit me to give you a copy of an edition of the "Dame aux Camélias," which is now very rare. What makes this volume unique of its kind is the autograph letter which you will find inserted at page 212, and which is pretty nearly the same as the letter printed on that page. This letter was written by the genuine Armand Duval about forty years ago. He was then the same age as your son. The letter is the only palpable thing that remains of the story. It seems to me that it belongs to you of right, since you have just brought the dead man back to youth and life. Keep it, at [illegible] pleasant evening of Saturday last, and as a feeble testimonial of my great admiration and profound gratitude. A. Dumas fils.

And here is the letter written by the real Armand Duval (Alexandre Dumas fils) to the real lady of the camellias (Marie Duplessis) when he parted from her, not as Armand did, in wrath, but in a wholesome access of self-respect:

> My Dear Marie: I am neither rich enough to love you as I should like, nor poor enough to be loved after your fashion. Let us forget, then, on your part, a name which must be almost indifferent to you, and I a happiness which becomes impossible to me.
> It is useless to tell you how sad I feel, since you know already how much I love you.
> Farewell. You have too big a heart not to understand the significance of this letter, and too much intelligence not to pardon me for it. A thousand remembrances. Alexandre Dumas.

And let us have this glimpse of the youth as he wrote:

> I wrote this book, in three weeks, on the corner of a table at Saint-Germain-en-Laye, in a chamber for which I paid a franc a day, in the inn of the Cheval Blanc, the only one that I found open one evening when I had missed the last train. . . . I was accompanied by a friend who had come to dine with me, at my father's, at Monte Christo.

A curious controversy was caused by the book. It raged for years—raged, in a way, until William Winter died in 1917 and he still was raging on it—raging all alone.

The contention was that the book was immoral, that it consecrated depravity, that it incited to vice, that it—ah, the pitying God knows what it did not do! The charge is worth examination, for it is one duty of those who love letters to keep the smirch of misreadings and misunderstandings from masterpieces, and the way to examine it is to examine the book. Dumas, sensing, no doubt, the impending storm, closed it with these words:

> I am not the apostle of vice, but I will make myself the echo of noble misfortune whenever I hear it appeal. The story of Marguerite is an exception, I repeat it; but if it were the usual thing, it would not be worth writing.

What is that story? A woman endowed with beauty and charm, beaten by her mother "during twelve years of her life," ignorant—she could not write her name six years before her Paris notoriety began—trafficks in love until a genuine love comes into that life of hers which Dumas, with one of his great phrases, describes as "a boisterous solitude." She is, fleetingly, rehabilitated in body and spirit, but, convinced that her love will be the destruction of her lover and of his pure sister's prospects in life, she resolves to disavow and disillusionize this lover by, beyond doubt, the only method that will accomplish the purpose. She returns to her old life. In a few months the soul is tortured from the body. The psychology of this sacrifice and this expiation is epitomized by Dumas in a few strokes (chapter XII.):

> Then, when God permits a courtesan to love, this love, which seems at first a pardon, becomes almost always for her a chastisement. There is no absolution without repentance. . . . A creature who has all her past to reproach her feels herself suddenly filled with a love profound, sincere, irresistible, of which she would never have thought herself capable. . . . Then she does not know what proofs to give. . . . They have lied so many times that no one is willing to believe them, and they are devoured by their love in the midst of their remorse.

Those tortures of expiation are in this book set down to the ultimate pang. Than the sixteen pages of Marguerite's journal toward the end of the volume there is not in literature a record at once so piteous and so exact. It ends in a gasp:

> They brought me home half dead. I coughed and spat blood all night. Today I can no longer speak, I can scarcely move my arms. Mon Dieu! Mon Dieu! I am dying. I expected it, but I cannot conceive the idea of suffering more than I do suffer, and if . . .

In some parts of tropic America there grow above dark pools, in deep glades, flowers of such loveliness that the traveler halts in wonder and delight at so much beauty in so fearsome a place. The reptile glides by the edge of the pool; the venemous insect hovers above it; the very air is heavy with miasmatic odors to which the flowers seem to add a sickly sweetness that is more stench than perfume. The native, superstitious, furtive, is bidden to pluck this beautiful thing.

"Ah, señor, it is nothing!"

It is brittle, too, this nothing. Before the outstretched hand it breaks, falls, lies limply upon the surface of the black water, sinks, and is seen no more.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

Last week's composite list of best sellers at five leading Chicago book stores were:

FICTION.

"If Winter Comes," by A. S. M. Hutchinson.
"Cytherea," by Joseph Hergesheimer.
"To the Last Man," by Zane Grey.
"Young Enchanted," by Hugh Walpole.
"Rich Relatives," by Compton Mackenzie.
"Simon Called Peter," by Robert Keable.

NONFICTION.

"The Outline of History," by H. G. Wells.
"The Americanization of Edward Bok," by Edward Bok.
"Working North from Patagonia," by Harry Franck.

AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Six books most in demand at the Chicago public library last week were:

"If Winter Comes," by A. S. M. Hutchinson.
"The Briary Bush," by Floyd Dell.
"Brass," by Charles G. Norris.
"The Outline of History," by H. G. Wells.
"Queen Victoria," by Lytton Strachey.
"Mirrors of Washington," anonymous.

By Fanny Butcher.

"THE Story of Mankind," by Hendrik Van Loon, is probably the most important book that has ever been written for children. That is a grandiloquent statement, perhaps, but one which a reading of the book will prove to be just, I believe. Unfortunately "The Story of Mankind" appears in the wake of Mr. Wells' "Outline of History" and naturally finds itself labeled a child's Outline.

As a matter of fact, it was contemplated and some of the work done upon it—"Ancient Man" was published—before the Outline was a dream come true for Mr. Wells.

HENDRIK WILLEM VAN LOON.

That it does for the child a thing comparable to that which the Outline does for the grownup is undeniable, but its method is absolutely different and, for a child, far more effective, completely effective.

You all know the Outline, either from your personal affection for it or from the dinner table comment which it has excited. You know that Mr. Wells focuses history to prove the onwardness and upwardness of man's progress, as a premise for future development. In the Outline you get a sense of man's importance, of the essential sapiety of humankind. Mr. Van Loon starts his book with a picture of the sun and a few assembled planets—the earth a spot less important than the little mentioned Uranus—a picture which bears this caption:

"The scene of our history is laid upon a little planet, lost in the vastness of the universe."

He ends it with the assurance that a hundred years from now the historian will not bother about the apologies and recriminations of the Great War, that a thousand years from now children will be mixing us up with the Carthaginians. He gets the "feel" of history into his book—the sense of the eternity of time of which we, each generation, have our tiny share, the sense of time's flow which Carlyle celebrated so unforgettably.

That "feel of history" is the most important gift which any one can give to a child.

There are so many things to say about "The Story of Mankind" that one chafes at the restrictions of a paragraph or two. I would like to take each chapter and praise its broadness of view. I would like to say that now and then he makes a statement which may be a little incomplete, but which somehow never shatters the illusion of the period. He recaptures, somehow, the atmosphere of each group. For example, he says that Cleopatra killed herself by taking poison, while we have been assured in song and story that she died dramatically with the aid of the now famous asp. For example, again, he says that "In the fifteenth century the kings once more became strong enough to exercise those powers which belonged to them. Then the feudal knights lost their former independence," and he does not mention the invention of gunpowder, which in our simple childhood days was supposed to have been the death of feudalism. But he has recreated feudalism for us in such a vivid manner that actual mental pictures of it remain.

About his actual pictures I would like to write at length, of their vividness and their "feel" also. He has drawn all of his own illustrations and his maps, and they are inimitable. No child, of whatever age, can remain insensible to their charm.

I should like to write about his humor.

He has made a fascinating and at times very amusing story. He has written what every child believes in his heart that the word means—his story.

It is needless to say that this person (as the Chinese say), well past the official years of childhood, was bewitched by "The Story of Mankind" and that others even more remotely removed from their childhood will succumb to its fascinations.

To those readers who must have their authors labeled and authenticated I add that Hendrik Van Loon is a Dutch scholar not long ago a professor of history at Cornell university, in Ithaca, N. Y.; that he has a collection of letters after his name—to wit: A. B. and Ph. D. (which do NOT appear on the title page to frighten children away); and that he is now engaged in teaching history in an Ohio university.

Settling the Case of M. Rolland.

"Romain Rolland: the Man and His Work," by Stefan Zweig, is at once a biography and a critical estimate of the man who, if he had died before the great war, would have been remembered as one of the great literary figures of his time, but whose position "above the battle" during the years when his country—with much of the so-called civilized world—was fighting the spread of the plague of militarism tempered the enthusiasm of many of his admirers.

ROMAIN ROLLAND.

The greatest human tragedy is, I suppose, to be misunderstood when one is filled with the conviction that one's ideals are essential to the well being of the world.

Perhaps, however, it is not so deep a tragedy to a man so removed from life as to be able to do his fighting for right from a mountain top in Switzerland when his fellows were either throwing their bodies against the enemy to be maimed or their souls against the entire idea of war and suffering intense spiritual and physical discomfort as a declaration that they believed in their ideals enough to die for them. Europe and America, whether pro or anti war, were mainly just a little unsympathetic toward Romain Rolland in his safety above the battle. Mr. Zweig, without actually excusing or explaining his position in the war, makes a very good case for his hero in this biography. He shows the early influence of Tolstoy on Rolland and convinces one of his idealism. Critically he writes an excellent biography, dividing his work into cycles and showing how he evolved from one group of writing to the next.

Will Rostand Live? Anyway, a New, Good Edition.

Henderson Dangerfield Norman has made a translation of the plays of Edmond Rostand which preserves their poetic quality without making them sound like high school verse. As has been said by far wiser ones than I, the position of Edmond Rostand in the history of French dramatic and poetic literature is still undetermined. His Cyrano will probably live, mayhap his Chanticleer, and in the precious heights of the Little theaters his other plays. Some enthusiasts are as sure of his permanence as his friends were of Christopher Marlowe's immortality or of Ben Jonson's preëminence. Whether we are reading dramas which our great-great-grandchildren will read with awe or which will be devoured by the bookworms which make an end of books on dusty, untouched shelves, just now these plays of Rostand are interesting for their near historical light.

The roses of Sharon are remembered. The roses of yesteryear forgotten.

These plays delighted our mothers. They were even considered a trifle outre. They possess, from that angle, an interest quite outside their inherent dramatic excellence.

As to Pseudo-Antiques.

"The Gentle Art of Faking," by Riccardo Nobili, is a volume of ironic interest to the ordinary reader and perhaps a reminder of at least one old time to a collector. It is a thorough statement of "the methods of producing imitations and spurious works of art from the earliest times up to the present day." It tells how the husband of the on the other side of the street richly dressed walking lady (to quote Mark Twain on the German language) got caught in the net of the old masters fakers while his wife added to her rich dressing to the extent of a genuine handmade copy of a genuine antique, for which she paid a genuine genuine antique price. To even a skilled collector the book may bring a memory of some forgery or substitution so cleverly done as almost to warrant its existence. To the unskilled one it will give excellent advice and warning.

Poor Fish!

The Compleat Angler will own "Fishing from the Earliest Times" two minutes after first sight. William Radcliffe found references to fishing as far back as old Homer. He makes such a good case for fishing as an historical diversion that the nonfisherman (if he can be persuaded to read the book) will immediately equip himself with rods, lines, flies, bait (live and gaudily gay lures for the poor fish), and join the historic pageant.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

THE SONG FOR JANUARY.

Last summer when purchasing coal by the ton
You felt as the sordid transaction was done,
You felt as you gazed on the mountainous pile,
You'd have enough coal for an 'eleva while,
But what your astonishment! What your dismay!
When slowly, then swiftly it melted away.
And dawns the day of calamitous dole
You beginta
Walk inta
    The bin for your coal.

How bravely it billows at first to the door
And scatters its largesse of lumps on the floor
Uprearing a proud carboniferous crest
To leap o'er the bars at your simple behest;
And then on a magical, mystical morn
You look in your bin and a third of it's gorn,
And weeping a bit as you gaze in the hole
You beginta
Walk inta
    The bin for your coal.

ZANE GREY'S
New Book
TO THE LAST MAN

By the author of "The Mysterious Rider," "The Man of the Forest," etc.

TO the Last Man is the stirring story of a feud—a feud waged by two unforgiving factions who only realized its utter futility when it was too late. In the grip of a relentless code of loyalty to their own people, they fought the war of the Tonto Basin, desperately, doggedly, to the last man; and through it all runs the golden thread of a clean man's love for a pure woman.

Leading the Isbels against Lee Jorth and his band of cattle rustlers was Jean Isbel, who at the same time found himself madly in love with a girl from whom he was apparently separated by an impassable barrier.

Here is a situation based on fact that Zane Grey has handled supremely. All of the literary quality that has characterized Zane Grey's former books has been embodied and enhanced in To the Last Man.

Whether you read this book because you are one of the millions of Zane Grey's admirers or for the literary vigor of its exciting romanticism, you will enjoy every page. To the Last Man is now on sale wherever books are sold.

SEVEN YEARS OF A DIPLOMATIST'S LIFE IN THE STORM CENTRE OF EUROPE

SECRETS OF THE BALKANS

By CHARLES J. VOPICKA

United States Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Roumania, Serbia and Bulgaria, 1913-1920

A RARE CONTRIBUTION TO THE ANNALS OF THE WORLD WAR

FOR five years Mr. Vopicka upheld the honor of his country and, as one after another of the powers were drawn into the maelstrom, he assumed the responsibilities of their legations and consulates until at one time he was representing the interests of eight nations—the United States, Roumania, Germany, Turkey, England, Russia, Italy and Serbia. How he maintained the difficulties of his position, and how he worked always for right and justice, is told in these pages.

IF WINTER COMES

By A. S. M. HUTCHINSON

The novel that every one is reading. Over two hundred thousand already sold, two hundred and fifty-second thousand on press.

Harry Hansen in The Chicago Daily News says: "A. S. M. Hutchinson's 'If Winter Comes' accomplished a curious amalgam. It pleased both those who liked 'Main Street' and those who didn't like it. And the most interesting thing about it all is that 'If Winter Comes' deserved all the popularity it got."

Hutchinson's other novels. Once Aboard the Lugger—The Happy Warrior, and The Clean Heart, are also well worth reading.

Each $2.00 wherever books are sold.

If you are sick and want to Get Well and Keep Well, write for literature that tells How and Why this almost unknown and wonderful new element brings relief to so many sufferers from Constipation, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Gout, Neuritis, Neuralgia, Nervous Prostration, High Blood Pressure and diseases of the Stomach, Heart, Lungs, Liver, Kidneys and other ailments. You wear Degnen's Radio-Active Solar Pad day and night, receiving the Radio-Active Rays continuously into your system, causing a healthy circulation, overcoming sluggishness, throwing off impurities and restoring the tissues and nerves to a normal condition—and the next thing you know you are getting well.

Sold on a test proposition. You are thoroughly satisfied it is helping you before the appliance is yours. Nothing to do but wear it. No trouble or expense, and the most wonderful fact about the appliance is that it is sold so reasonable that it is within the reach of all, both rich and poor.

No matter how bad your ailment, or how long standing, we will be pleased to have you try it at our risk. For full information write today—not tomorrow. Radium Appliance Co., 373 Bradbury Bldg., Los Angeles, Calif.

A Radio Automobile

Is being demonstrated all this week on our Eleventh Floor—a wonderful scientific attainment—although not as yet perfected for commercial use—

The power is furnished and the Auto is controlled by radio—the ether waves of the wireless telegraph—

See it start, stop—being steered, the lights turned on or off, the bell rung, the horn sounded—just as you desire. A wonderful demonstration showing the possibilities of radio in furnishing the power and control for autos, boats, street cars, airplanes, railroads, etc.

PROLOGUE.

As Mrs. Swanson, clairvoyant, explained to Mamie Potter, we are surrounded by Unknown Forces, Forces which are . . . which are . . . well, in the words of Mrs. Swanson, which are unknown to us . . . many and dire are the predictions which Mrs. Swanson scattered on Mamie . . . Mamie staggers out dazed by these tidings of ill fortune . . . can they be true? . . . is there anything in this clairvoyant stauff? . . . well, there must be, or there wouldn't be so many working at it . . .

Scene I.—On the Car.

Mamie is homeward bound from the clairvoyant's . . . the car is crowded, but Mamie gets a seat just the same . . . as the poet might have said, if only he had thought of it:

She who smiles in manner sweet
Is almost sure to get a seat,
But she who scowls upon her map
Is lucky if she gets a strap.

MAMIE (to herself):
How does she know the things she said?
How did she know his hair was red?
How did she know that he's untrue
And stepping out with Gladys, too?
How did she know that she's to blame?
And how in the world did she learn her name?

VOICE (irately):
I tell yu I already paid my fare.

CONDUCTOR (conductorishly):
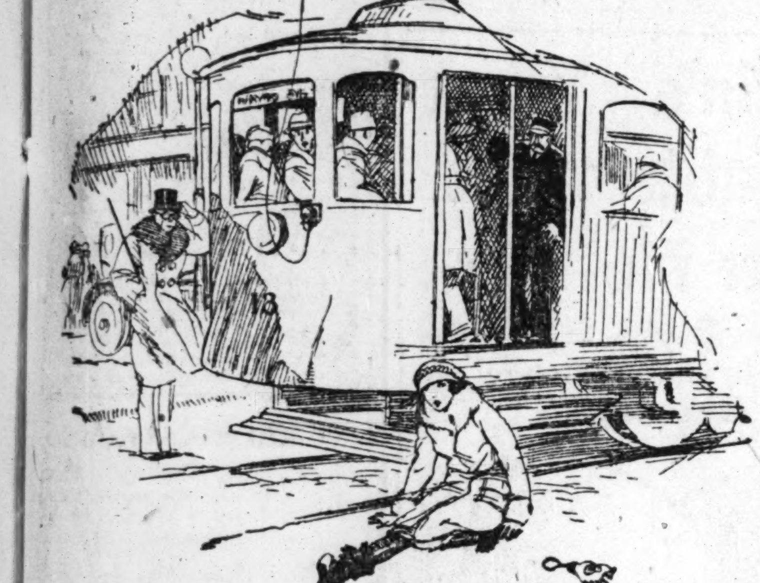
C'mon, c'mon, step lively there.



"She said it would. . . . She knew. . . . She knew."

MAMIE (to herself):
D'ye s'pose there's really a chance I may
Have a street car accident, too, some day?
And will mother really be very ill?
I wonder, now, if she really will . . .

CONDUCTOR (loudly):
Brassh rassh cafoosh.
Brassh rassh cafoosh.

MAMIE (rising hastily and shouting to conductor):
Wait a minute, here's my street . . .
(To passenger):
The aisle's no place to park your feet . . .

(Conductor after desperate struggle succeeds in stopping car two blocks past Mamie's destination . . . Mamie, after desperate struggle, succeeds in getting off car backwards . . . she almost got off the right way, but thought of it in time, and reversed . . . a mirror, strategically placed on the left hand side of the exit would solve this problem . . . look out, she's going to fall . . . there! she turned her ankle . . . down she goes on the icy street!)

MAMIE (whose first thought is not how serious she is hurt but how soon the clairvoyant's first prediction has been fulfilled):
The accident! It's coming true
She said it would . . . she knew . . . she knew . . .
Ouch, my ankle . . . I can't stand . . .
(To bystander):
Please . . . oweoooooch . . . give me your hand . . .

(Somebody calls a cab and Mamie is taken home.)

Scene II.—At Home.

BILL (helpfully, as Mamie limps into the house):
Your dogs give out? . . . Expected that . . .
Probably danced your arches flat . . .
Well, I should say it's all for the best . . .
The poor little pups sure need a rest.

MAMIE: I slipped and fell, if you must know.

BILL: You must have been chasing Red . . . Ho! Ho!

MAMIE (icily):
O, is that so?

BILL (mimicking):
Yes, that's so.

MA'S VOICE (from bedroom):
I want that medicine, William . . . go!

MAMIE (in alarm, rushing into bedroom as fast as her ankle will allow):
Medicine, Ma? What's the matter with you?
(To herself):
The second prediction's coming true!

MA (who immediately begins to feel much worse as soon as any one takes an interest in one of her "spells"):
Well, just an hour or so ago
I got the awfullest pain, you know.

(An hour or so! That was the time the clairvoyant was telling Mamie her mother would soon have a serious illness!)

Sometimes in my stomach . . . sometimes in my head . . .
So I sent for the doctor and crawled into bed

MAMIE (now absolutely convinced of the clairvoyant's omniscience, dragging herself into living room and sinks on couch to think):
"You'll have an accident . . . That came true.
"Your mother will soon be ill" . . . That, too.
"Your best friend is deceiving you."
"Your sweetheart's false" . . . She knew . . . she knew!

(And just at this psychological moment who should come tripping in but . . . one guess . . . yes, it is she . . . Gladys Rankin . . . well, not so good.)

GLADYS (gayly):
Hello! . . . Why all the gloom? . . . Hello!
Guess who I met . . . some one you know.

MAMIE (internally):
She's been with Red again, I'll bet . . .
(To Gladys, coolly):
How should I know who you just met?

GLADYS (puzzled by Mamie's coolness):
Why, you should know by what I said.
The only one I could mean is Red . . .

MAMIE (internally):
Ha! I knew it . . . it's so . . . it's so . . .
(To Gladys, still colder):
O, Red's not the only man I know.

GLADYS (to herself):
They've had a quarrel . . . I think I see,
But Red didn't say a thing to me.
(To Mamie, soothingly):
O, I wouldn't worry, if I were you . . .
Red will come back . . . they always do.

MAMIE (to herself, in seething rage):
It's already gone as far as that!
She'll give him back when she's through . . . the cat!
(To Gladys):
I should worry 'bout Red . . . not me,
There's plenty of other good fish in the sea.

GLADYS (utterly baffled by Mamie's strange behavior, decides to withdraw as gracefully as possible and talk to her again when she's in a better mood . . . glances at wrist watch . . .):
My, it's late . . . I've got to go . . .
I've a date to see a movie show . . . (Hurries out.)

(Hah! says Mamie . . . the date's with Red, of course . . . how can she have the nerve to flaunt her deceit so brazenly . . . wait till she sees Red . . . she'll tell him a thing or two . . . if she could only get out . . . but, of course, she had to twist her ankle now of all times . . . why doesn't Red call up or come to see her, anyway? . . . Brrrrrrrring . . . Brrrrrrrr . . . The door bell . . . It is he . . . her heart begins to pound . . . what will she say? . . . what will she do? . . . decides to hide . . . jumps up, forgetting her ankle, and sinks back on couch again with a screech . . .)

RED MILLER (who has been let in by Bill just in time to hear screech . . . rushes in):
What's the matter? . . . Hurt over there?

MAMIE (frigidly):
How does it happen that you should care?

RED (puzzled):
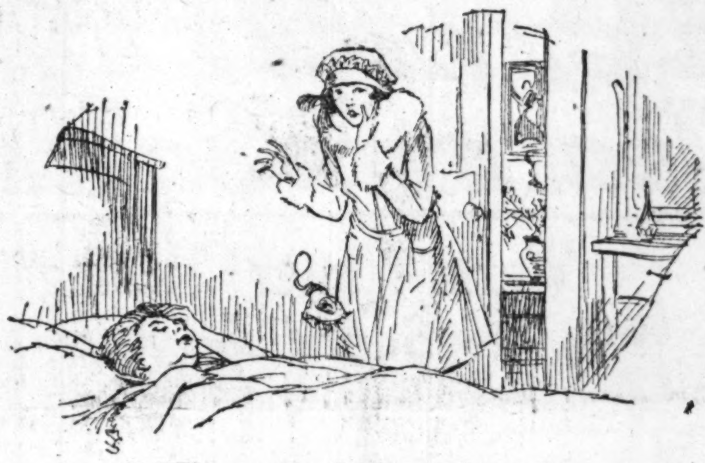
Whuh . . . whuh . . . whuh . . . whuh . . . waddidja say?



"The second prediction's coming true."

MAMIE (airily):
O, it makes no difference anyway.
(To herself):
And yet he looks so honest, too;
Can what she said be really true?

RED (himself again):
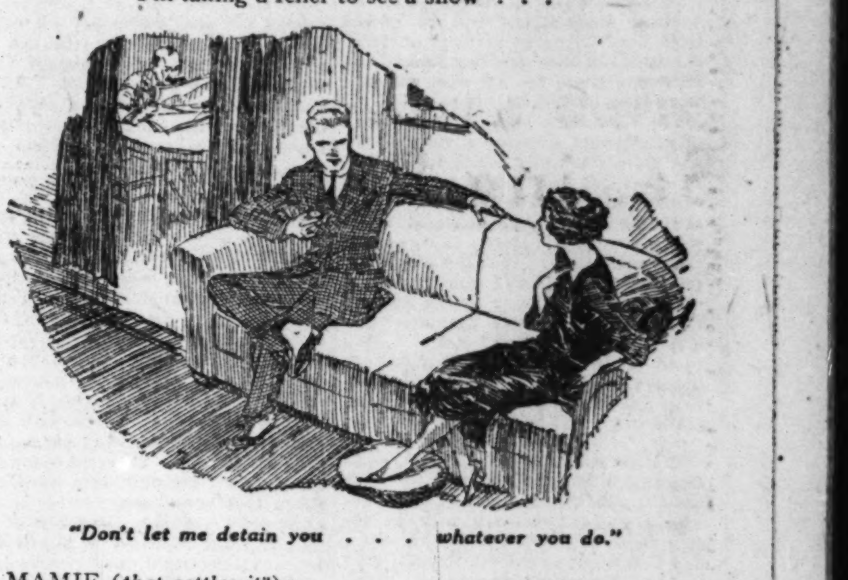
I thought I'd drop in and say hello,
I'd like to stay, but I've got to go,
I'm taking a feller to see a show . . .



"Don't let me detain you . . . whatever you do."

MAMIE (that settles it!):
Don't let me detain you . . . whatever you do.
Good-by and good luck to your friend and you.

(Turns away quickly so Red won't see the tears which just would brim up, doggone 'em!)

RED (puzzled again . . . there's no understanding these girls, no way, no how, you never know where they stand . . .):
I wish you wouldn't talk like that,
It sounds just like you want to spat . . .

MAMIE (embittered, but determined to be brave to the last):
Why should I spat, I'd like to know!
Don't let me keep you . . . gwan to your show.

(She'll show him whether she'll beg him to stay or not . . . beg him, is it? . . . not she . . . there are better men than he is, Ghunga Dinn!)

RED (hurt, but still peaceable. . . . the best way when they act like this is to go away and let 'em get over it . . .):
It's getting late . . . I'd better go.
I'll tell you all about the show.
I'll call you up at ten or so.

(Starts to kiss her good-by and decides he'd better not try . . . in her present mood she might bite him . . . shuffles around uneasily and fiddles with his hat . . . finally makes a break for the door and slams it behind him . . .)

MAMIE (throwing herself on couch and letting loose . . . between sobs):
They're all alike! It's true, it's true . . .
She told the truth . . . She knew! She knew!

(Dear . . . dear . . . what a pity that Mamie Potter should let such silly little things wreck her happiness . . . and to think that there are so many, many Mamie Potters who have done and are doing the same thing . . . perhaps they will all know better some day . . . perhaps Mamie, too, will learn that most of our troubles in this world never happened . . .)

A Clear Thinker.

George Washington must have possessed extraordinary reasoning powers. He was a man who would study a question, concentrate on it, and come to a conclusion that was almost perfect. In his famous farewell address he told of many future dangers to America which have been realized. For instance, he told of the sectional rivalry which might result in war. Sixty-five years later the great civil war broke out. He prophesied the strikes which are now destroying unity of government in America. He told of the party jealousies which he feared. He also predicted the entangling alliances which were likely to be made between nations. He warned us against them and to a certain extent we have heeded his warning.

Where could he have received all this information? He took note of the past and present conditions, and skillfully came to his own conclusion. His conclusion was invariably the correct one. Having as few known facts as he had with which to work, his reasoning had to do the work and do it alone.

While commander in chief of the American forces, Washington showed great mental ability. Time after time he outwitted the enemy. It was the changing of his plans, which took good, clear thinking, that saved the day at Yorktown. Without a doubt, George Washington was one of the clearest thinkers the world has yet seen.

Founder of a Nation.

For the last two centuries the shining sun has cast its golden rays upon red, white, and blue flag whose peaceful folds embrace a free, independent, peaceloving nation.

We owe this to a man whose endless faith in the great cause of humanity has made possible a constitution of justice and freedom. His name was George Washington. As a soldier, patriot, citizen, and President his name is honored in every American home. Children worship him, men and women respect him, foreigners admire him as the man who established the foundation of a nation so loved and respected today.

As he rests in his heavenly home the nation for which he had sacrificed so much continues to progress, but not without that everlasting thought, "He died and a great nation lives."

Believed Right Made Might.

Although it has been almost two centuries since the immortal father of our country was born, his life and what he did for humanity and his country are still fresh and great in our minds, and thus it shall always be.

We can speak of Washington freely and with ease, without having to think and think and then recall an almost forgotten being who lived several centuries ago.

He was a great man, yet never thought himself too great to ignore his home and friends, or too high to help the poor. He was patient and home loving; pure and clean in all ways; a devoted son and a God fearing man; an unflinching patriot.

Washington was always for what was right, and believed that right made might. He never gave up hope, even in the depths of despair. He had a broad and noble mind, heart, and soul, big enough to take in the feelings of all people.

If in our minds we imagine the greatest man we are capable of doing, we cannot imagine any one any greater than Washington, except our Savior.

He possessed all the qualities any one can ever wish for, and was a master example for all people. Such is the way I like to think of him.

Spirit Still Guides Us.

When enumerating the many noble characters who beautify the pages of our enviable history we find prominent among them the name of George Washington.

Could we find a more desirable ideal than the father of our country? In him we find brotherly love, trust in God, and true patriotism—the American spirit.

No man has shown a stronger affection for his fellow men than our first President. The winter spent at Valley Forge is only one of the many striking examples of Washington's belief in the fact that each one is his brother's keeper.

And what else than trust in God could have prompted him to attempt the perilous journey across the Delaware?

As for patriotism—well might we say that he was patriotism personified. Why should he refuse to be compensated for the many services rendered to his country if it were not that his sense of patriotism told him that the government which he had established needed it worse than he?

Washington still breathes the American spirit among our people. Though he left for the great beyond many years ago, his spirit still lives and guides the people of the present generation.

There are many kinds of services, but the service to one's country is the one most highly honored and remembered. Among the figures, along this line, no one stands out as bold and plain as George Washington.

From childhood he prepared himself for great achievements by building up his morality and his character.

During the French and English war he was of great service. He safely accomplished his errand to the French camp. He commanded the little army and as one statesman said of him, "It was the volley fired by a young Virginian that set the world on fire."

After his service in the French war Washington retired to private life, but at the outbreak of the revolution, he again was drawn into the midst of public life, and was made commander in chief of the continental army.

In 1787, when affairs reached such a state of feebleness that it seemed as though the government might bring the country to ruin, Washington presided over a convention, in which he helped to form a strong central government and to frame a constitution, which, with a few amendments, governs us today.

Even when granted the Presidency he was called "not merely to preside over a nation, to administer a government, but to make a nation, to create a government." He more than any other one man helped our country to strive toward an ideal, so that

"When freedom from her mountain height
Unfurled her standard to the air,
She tore the azure robe of night
And set the stars of glory there."

Molded a Nation.

The name of Washington signifies America, for around that great man is wound all the greatness that these United States glory in today. The whole world has looked upon him as a light to be guided by.

He found the colonies a struggling wilderness, and he molded them into a nation with the greatest form of government that had yet or since been instituted.

Lincoln was great; he held a nation together.

Roosevelt fired the people with patriotism, but the great Washington created and made a nation out of nothing.

Some men are born to lead, some are born to govern, and some are born to serve. These three did Washington do; he served obediently, he led daringly, and he governed wisely—truly a great man. He did not become a dictator when all the power was given to him; he chose rather to become the people's servant, carrying out their wishes.

He took delight in serving his country until he knew his work was done, and then meekly he retired to give his place to other men that they might carry on the noble work of making America as he had seen it, the greatest nation on the earth.

The mention of his name thrills us with pride; to gaze upon his picture burns within us the fires of patriotism, and his fame spoken of makes known to all the world that Americans can never forget the work of this wonderful man—George Washington.

Believed in Prayer.

George Washington is the best model of a real American we have ever had. I think Washington attained the highest plane of true Americanism that any one could aspire to attain.

He was willing to work. The word shirk did not exist in his vocabulary. His father died when he was young and he was left to "row his own canoe."

When the trouble between England and the colonies arose Washington was ready to volunteer his services for the country he loved so well.

One of the stories of Washington's life that I like best is this: During the revolutionary war an old Quaker farmer heard a voice while he was in the woods near his home. He investigated and found it was Washington, his cheeks tear stained, praying to God for help and guidance. The farmer returned home and told his wife he was sure George Washington's army would be victorious. When his wife asked why he thought that his reply was, "I have heard him pray out in the woods today, and the Lord will surely hear his prayer."

Aren't these words a fitting tribute to a man like our first President?

Every true American loves, respects, and honors the name of George Washington. Long may the memory of Washington live and never may it die! Let every true American shout his praise!

Strict but Kind.

Who has not heard of a fine looking man over 6 feet tall, straight as an arrow, with fair complexion and blue eyes, broad shoulders, long arms, and big hands that showed his strength? This man was George Washington.

Washington's character was as fine as his appearance. Every one has read and heard stories that show his truthfulness. Washington early proved by his adventures in the wilderness that he was brave and determined. Though somewhat inclined to be grave and serious, he also liked a joke and a good time. Many men considered him a worthy leader.

Washington always thought no man was too good to manage his own business. Before sunrise, both in summer and winter, he was up and about. Many of his slaves proved that he was a strict but kind master. Tobacco was his crop, and in order to have the tobacco plentiful and good the slaves must work hard. Their master set them a fine example.

It seems that his life was full of adventure and no fun, yet there was plenty of fun and enjoyment in Washington's life. He loved horses and dogs, and nothing pleased him better than to ride out hunting with a good pack of hounds.

Washington, however, never did neglect his religious duties. Each Sunday found the Mount Vernon coach bearing Martha Washington to church with George on his fine horse trotting alongside. Religion was no mere form to Washington; it was the guide of his great, manly life.

His devotion to his church was like his devotion to his country. As H. C. Lodge says, "No man has a higher and truer conception of the destiny and possibilities of the country."

Fame Is World Wide.

Everybody knows George; you don't need to repeat his name to even the most ignorant foreigner. His fame is worldwide.

The reason for this is that what he has done for our country has been of the greatest importance to the whole world as well. Where would we have been if we had not shaken England's rule? It was as important to us as the repulse of Persia to the Greeks. If Persia had conquered Greece and put her under oriental rule, all the great developments of art, architecture, music, science, literature, and government would never have been worked out; and look where we would be today—centuries behind.

So would the United States have been a half a century or more behind if it had not been for Washington. Just imagine what it would be like. Perhaps your favorite stories and books would not be here to read. The automobile, airplane, telephone, telegraph, wireless, phonograph, good transportation—most things we consider necessities nowadays would be lacking. One hates to think of it.

It is no small wonder, then, that people honor him. Some people say Lincoln is the greatest of American heroes. Maybe he is. I won't argue. But read up on it, and then draw your own conclusions. The fact that Washington's birthday is the only person's birthday recognized as a holiday by every state is pretty good proof as to who is the more highly honored.

Then, should it not be easy to choose from the whole list of our heroes the greatest one yet?

First on the List.

To most schoolboys the name that stands first and foremost in the list of great Americans is George Washington. One of the reasons for this is because he was an honest, perservering man who devoted his life to the founding of a great nation. He did more for America than any other man. His name has been venerated for over a century and will be as long as America remains a nation.

During his boyhood he showed his superiority over his playmates by acting as the commander of the play armies and by showing a disposition toward work.

When he was a young man his brother, Lawrence, secured a position for him in the British navy. Just at the last minute, when he had his trunk aboard the boat, his mother pleaded with him not to go, so, regardful of her wishes, he returned home, an act which changed the course of his whole life.

During the revolutionary war he showed his worth as a general by doing many skillful things. People were a little doubtful at times when Charles Lee and other rival officers told falsehoods about him, but when they knew the truth they saw that he was their only hope.

So, take it all in all, I think George Washington has fully earned and well deserves the beloved title which he now bears, the father of his country.

ELBERTON SMITH,
5015 North Kimberly avenue, Chicago.
Age 10. Mayfair school, grade 7-A.
Teacher, Miss Rogers.

The Chieftain of America.

America never had a greater, a nobler, nor a truer man than George Washington. Every land has honored him; every race has sung his praise. As the years go by his real worth becomes more apparent, and needs none of the overwrought stories we know so well to strengthen his character or give point to his record. His life is fine enough and full enough to interest, to inspire, and to help every true American.

Even as a lad Washington had qualities of mind and of brain. Courage, caution, and determination made him in after years a leader among men. These same qualities led Washington to leave his home and fight for the freedom of the states, and such a life did he lead the British that after four years they were willing to give up their claims.

The American people now believed in him; they felt that he was honest, pure, and strong, and that whatever he wished to do or whatever he tried to bring about would be best for the country and for them.

On Aug. 30, 1789, George Washington, the farmer boy, the soldier, and the stateman, was inaugurated as President of the United States.

The name of Washington is one before which America will stand, hats off, uncovered in memory, respect, and love.

No Tribute Too Great.

I am going to take you on a little voyage, my friends, on the boat of Father Time. We shall start on Feb. 22, 1722, when a baby, later so justly called the "father of his country," was born.

Then let us sail on and see what George Washington—for it could be none other than he—did for his country.

George Washington! Yes, it was he who with his powers of leadership won for us our independence from England—the independence and freedom which we, the people of America, so crave and cherish. Then let us sail on a little farther. Again, it was he who as our first president put our then newly born nation on a footing that enabled it to become the foremost nation of the world.

What enabled him to accomplish these things? The secret, friends, lies in his character, that magnificent character of unselfishness, honesty, perseverance, and all the qualities that tend to make and add to an ideal person, and such he certainly was.

Is it any wonder, then, that he has the love and respect of every American? Can we pay too great tribute to such a man? No; decidedly no!

However, let us resume our voyage and progress to that dismal date of Dec. 14, 1799, when the beloved father of our country passed away. Although he is gone, Washington is not forgotten, nor can he ever be.

And thus our voyage ends, friends, although Father Time will pursue his course forever.

Be Like Him.

Some evenings are terribly lonesome in the country, most of the time in winter. We children sit around the stove and eat apples while we tell stories of Washington the Great.

When I think of him my heart beats faster than ever.

We tell how he saved America from the British and Hessian soldiers and other soldiers, too. When we go home from our neighbor's we go through a dark, gloomy woods, but we kids are never afraid—we just think of Washington. We want to be like him—brave, true, and kind.

When spring comes we go to the orchard and eat lots of the cherries and then mother comes to pick some for canning and there are only a few left.

Mother said, "Who ate the cherries?"

I just thought of Washington and I answered, "Mother, we kids ate them and we are sorry."

I did not get punished, because I told the truth. Ever since that I try to be like Washington—brave, true, and kind.

New York Motor Exhibit Closes After Attaining New Records

By J. L. Jenkins

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Eyes of the motor world focused on Chicago today when the national automobile show in Grand Central palace closed its doors following the biggest exhibition of vehicles ever before attempted. Four hundred glistening cars that present the ultimate achievement of twenty years' industrial development will be moved from their gorgeous settings on Monday to begin their journey toward the Coliseum where the big west will welcome them on Jan. 28.

The New York show, both in point of attendance, number of cars shown and industrial spirit, has been historic. It convinced the public beyond any further doubt that automobile makers are offering higher values at lower prices than ever before. It convinced the manufacturers that the public appreciates this fighting spirit and will stand by the industry to the limit in 1922. It demonstrated that the "second national industry" has not hesitated in investing its last dollar to bring about normal conditions in its field, and it inspired business men generally to go and do likewise.

This serious note in New York, as in Chicago, is but one result of the huge annual exhibit. Thousands of people who jammed their way through the four floors of the Grand Central every day and night this week did not care particularly about economics. They swarmed to the exposition to enjoy its brilliancy, color, and lavish disregard for expense. They wanted to see the motor car dressed up in its very best, and they were not disappointed in the new year's fashions.

The woman fan found unusual entertainment this year. Her taste, it has been estimated, influenced the sale of 90 per cent of the automobiles sold last year, and her wishes have been catered to by every manufacturer of distinctive passenger cars. They realized that millions of women graduated from the back seat during the war and became discriminating critics, so they put comfort, accessibility of working parts and refinement of coach work well to the front in their new models.

Dark blues, blacks, grays, and greens are the predominating colors. A few show cars are finished in bright tints, but the women who formed at least 50 per cent of the New York show crowds made it plain that they know the darker shades withstand weather conditions better and lend richness to body lines.

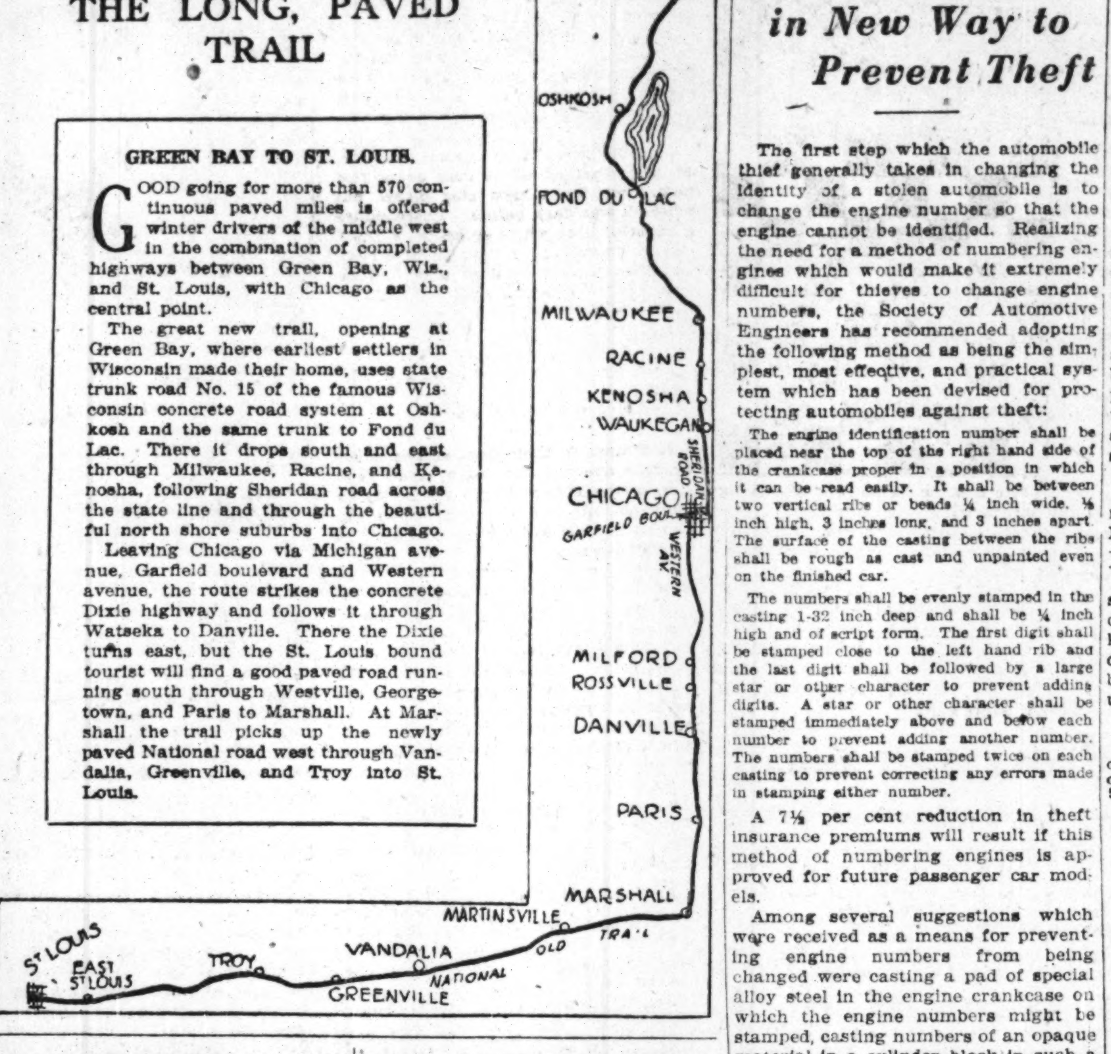
They also exhibited immediate interest in the accessory features that form "standard equipment" on so many of the models this year—the ailerons, disk wheels, wind shield wings, shades, awnings, improved grouping of dash instruments and remarkable developments in upholstery. More than 250 displays of parts and accessories proved one of the biggest drawing features of the Gotham show.

Manufacturers, in checking up results for the week, reported today that more orders for new cars have been taken this year than ever before at show time. A large number of the visitors came prepared to buy if they found values right, and took advantage of the final drop in prices announced just before the opening. These reductions, they believe, will stabilize prices for a long time to come. They placed orders now rather than this spring when the buying rush may bring about another shortage in new cars.

SWAT 'EM.

"Road hogs" in motor vehicles and "jay walkers" on highways are the two worst enemies of automobiling.

THE LONG, PAVED TRAIL



GREEN BAY TO ST. LOUIS.

GOOD going for more than 570 continuous paved miles is offered winter drivers of the middle west in the combination of completed highways between Green Bay, Wis., and St. Louis, with Chicago as the central point.

The great new trail, opening at Green Bay, where earliest settlers in Wisconsin made their home, uses state trunk road No. 15 of the famous Wisconsin concrete road system at Oshkosh and the same trunk to Fond du Lac. There it drops south and east through Milwaukee, Racine, and Kenosha, following Sheridan road across the state line and through the beautiful north shore suburbs into Chicago.

Leaving Chicago via Michigan avenue, Garfield boulevard and Western avenue, the route strikes the concrete Dixie highway and follows it through Watseka to Danville. There the Dixie turns east, but the St. Louis bound tourist will find a good paved road running south through Westville, Georgetown, and Paris to Marshall. At Marshall the trail picks up the newly paved National road west through Vandalia, Greenville, and Troy into St. Louis.

IN PASSING.

Never "cut in" short after passing a vehicle.

ECONOMY.

A cheap mechanic usually proves the most expensive.

Number Engines in New Way to Prevent Theft

The first step which the automobile thief generally takes in changing the identity of a stolen automobile is to change the engine number so that the engine cannot be identified. Realizing the need for a method of numbering engines which would make it extremely difficult for thieves to change engine numbers, the Society of Automotive Engineers has recommended adopting the following method as being the simplest, most effective, and practical system which has been devised for protecting automobiles against theft:

The engine identification number shall be placed near the top of the right hand side of the crankcase proper in a position in which it can be read easily. It shall be between two vertical ribs or beads ¼ inch wide, ⅛ inch high, 3 inches long, and 3 inches apart. The surface of the casting between the ribs shall be rough as cast and unpainted even on the finished car.

The numbers shall be evenly stamped in the casting 1-32 inch deep and shall be ¼ inch high and of script form. The first digit shall be stamped close to the left hand rib and the last digit shall be followed by a large star or other character to prevent adding digits. A star or other character shall be stamped immediately above and below each number to prevent adding another number. The numbers shall be stamped twice on each casting to prevent correcting any errors made in stamping either number.

A 7½ per cent reduction in theft insurance premiums will result if this method of numbering engines is approved for future passenger car models.

Among several suggestions which were received as a means for preventing engine numbers from being changed were casting a pad of special alloy steel in the engine crankcase on which the engine numbers might be stamped, casting numbers of an opaque material in a cylinder block in such a way that X-ray photographs would show the numbers, and casting on a small thin brass plate with edges crimped down one-eighth inch and knurled so as to anchor the edges securely in the crankcase, the number being stamped on the brass plate in the usual way.

THE SLIP.

Many fatal accidents have occurred to operators who thoughtlessly step on the accelerator instead of on the brake.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

Charles H. Domville, who several months ago joined the Commonwealth Motors company as district sales manager, has been appointed assistant sales manager.

A new car has made its appearance at the showrooms of the Rochford Motor company. It is a four passenger sport model of the Auburn Beauty Six. Among the large number of features on this car are windshield wings that are built integral with the windshield, bumpers both front and rear, nickel plated radiator, five disteel wheels, with cord tires, barrel type headlights and cowl lights, and trunks on either side, each trunk fitted with a suitcase.

The Wire Wheel corporation has moved to larger quarters at 2900 South Michigan avenue.

Roads Show Ready.

Special trains from New York and Washington will bring to Chicago many of the 20,000 delegates to the twelfth American Good Roads congress and thirteenth National Good Roads show, opening tomorrow at the Coliseum.

Delegates have been appointed by the mayors of 4,730 cities, the governors of all the states, territories, and insular possessions, and the Canadian provinces. County commissions will be represented from 1,000 counties in fifteen middle states. In addition to these will be government officials, engineers, highway commissioners, road material and machinery manufacturers, and experts from all parts of the country.

Uncle Sam will be the largest individual exhibitor, having sent on the huge testing machinery used to determine the nature of subsoils, and to measure the amount of wear and tear on paved roads under heavy traffic. Actual demonstrations of these tests will be conducted during the week.

PUMP LEAKAGE.

When the water pump begins leaking do not assume that necessarily it is because the nut is too loose. Frequently the nut is not to blame at all, but poor packing is the real cause of the trouble. Packing for this part consists of candle wick soaked in tallow heavy twine similarly treated, or special packing material. After the nut has been turned to press the packing down do not turn it further, as excessive squeezing is apt to damage some part of the body of the pump.

MOTORDOM

Colorful Setting Evolved for 1922 Show in Chicago

Unique Decorations Add Interest to Big Auto Exhibit.

ARTIST C. J. TIETZEL and his staff of assistants are nearing the end of their monumental labors preparing the decorations for the twenty-second annual Chicago automobile show, which will be held at the Coliseum, Coliseum Annex, and 1st Regiment armory Jan. 28-Feb. 4. For years Mr. Tietzel has produced the decorations for many of the greatest industrial shows and expositions in America at his studios in Evergreen Park.

It has taken many months to design, cut, and paint the tons of trimmings and trappings. These decorations probably will be brought in from the suburb in giant motor trucks the week the auto show opens.

For this season Mr. Tietzel has gone back for his ideas to the Moorish and Flemish renaissance period and has selected as his color scheme carmine, green, white, gold, and lavender, with touches of bronze. The combination is unusually striking and beautiful.

The balcony fronts of the Coliseum will form the most elaborate note, having nineteen large panels of tapestry, depicting in scene and story the evolution of the automobile and the part it has played in modern America.

Overhead a vast curtain will hide the rafters and girders of the building. At the north and south ends of the enormous building will be art glass mural paintings of huge size.

The mural art glass painting effect at the south end of the Coliseum will measure 110 feet wide and 3 feet high. It will depict labor and science offering their achievement to Chicago, "I Will," with the subject seated on a monumental throne.

At the north end the painting will be exactly the same size, the subject being "Industry and Agriculture," all executed in vivid colors.

The space under the balcony in the Coliseum will be covered for the first time in the history of the auto show by a painted ceiling. The same effect as in the Coliseum will be noted in the Coliseum Annex, while in the armory the character of design will be substantially the same. The main difference will be in the colorings.

Mr. Tietzel, speaking of the decorations, said yesterday: "In the eleventh century Cordova leathers, superbly gilded and painted, were introduced into Flanders. The Spanish leathers were usually in high relief and Saracenetic in design. The general formations and decorative effect as were used in the design of the Spanish Cordova leathers have been applied to the complete decorative equipment of the auto show."

The floor space of the Coliseum will be marked off into booths twenty feet high for the various makes of cars by columns bearing clusters of five lights each on the top. Tapestry effects will be worked in to harmonize with the rest of the plan. The names of the cars will be shown in tapestry style.

The Inquiring Reporter

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Question.

Do you prefer an open or a closed type of car?

Where Asked.

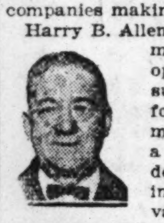
Madison and Dearborn streets.

The Answers.

W. L. Koschnig, 2552 West 63d street, salesman—I used to drive automobiles in races, and since then I have preferred an open car. I love to feel the cool breezes flying by my ears and to inhale the good, fresh ozone, regardless of whether it is summer or winter.

Joseph Nagle, 4223 Wilcox street, salesman—I prefer a closed car for the reason that one never knows when a storm is coming up. The weather may be clear in the morning, but before you return from your trip it may be raining buckets or snowing and blowing and freezing.

F. A. Stephani, western representative Chase Metal works, Tribune building—I wouldn't consider driving an open car for all year round business service under any consideration on account of the wear and tear on person, clothing, delays, as well as appearance. I think the coupe bodies, for general all around business service are by all means most desirable, and I believe the sales for all companies making same bear this out.



Harry B. Allen, 5906 Prairie avenue, manager—I consider an open car the best in the summer, but I have found that for eight months out of the year a closed car is the most desirable. A closed car in addition has the advantage of being the more attractive of the two and is more convenient for the passengers, especially if you have ladies with you.

C. A. Petella, 1327 Elmdale avenue, advertising—I prefer the open car, especially in the summer, when one's thoughts drift to beautiful countrysides. I find by lowering the top the view of the hills and scenery in the country is unobstructed. However, when my wife is with me on a trip I'll admit I have to put up the top to keep peace in the family.

CLUTCH SPINNING.

Clutch spinning is often due to excessive friction in the spring thrust bearing, though sometimes faulty alignment on the flywheel and clutch cone prevents the engaging surfaces from entirely clearing each other. A bent clutch shaft might also cause this trouble.

Modern Pavement Revives Life on Historic Highway

BECAUSE of Atlantic City's wide fame as a healthful playground and for the further reason that most every one now and then cherishes a desire to visit the seaside resort, there was more than strictly local gladness and concern in the recent opening of a splendid new boulevard between Philadelphia and the resort. Hence a national interest in the reconstruction of the historic old White Horse pike, familiar to nearly every motorist who has trekked eastward to Atlantic City.

The opening of the new White Horse pike, now known as state route No. 3, and which reflects credit upon New Jersey, occurred and was fittingly celebrated Oct. 1.

White Horse pike, which extends from Camden to Atlantic City, was one of the first travelable New Jersey roads, and in days gone by, before automobiles became so numerous and highways building marked any considerable progress, it was one of the few good motor roads of the country. But during the last several years it had been allowed to degenerate until motorists endeavored to avoid it, rather than seek it out. Today it is a concrete boulevard that can be traveled without a jolt, and henceforward will probably be one of the most popular highways in all the eastern states.

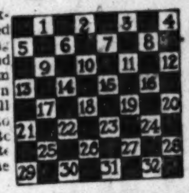
Heretofore the road has been gravel surfaced and maintained as such by Camden and Atlantic counties. In 1918 it was taken over by the state highway commission for improvement as one of the fifteen state routes. In that year construction was begun. The length of the road is sixty-one miles, and it ranges in width from eighteen to twenty feet. The graded width throughout is thirty feet; the concrete is six inches thick at the sides and eight and three-fourths inches at the center. In the reconstruction there are two important relocations—one five miles in length between Atco and Ancora, which eliminates steep grades and dangerous curves, and the other two miles around Hammonton, greatly improving the alignment and completely avoiding the congested streets of this town.

The average cost of the new road per mile was $43,500, and while the total expenditure seems to be appalling the people will undoubtedly find the returns worth the money spent. While the whole state of New Jersey will benefit indirectly, every hamlet on the route from Camden to Atlantic City will receive direct benefits of the road in increased business and a consequent boost in realty values.

Straighten Front Axle.

A method of straightening a front axle that has been bent in a vertical plane is to take two lengths of 4x4 inch joist, long enough to reach from the upper side of the axle, just outside of each spring plate, to a cross timber of the ceiling or roof of the garage. Then if the jack is placed beneath the axle at the bend, enough pressure may be applied by means of it to force the axle back into shape.

CHECKERBOARD PUZZLES by P. H. Ketchum



Squares on the checkerboard are numbered from 1 to 32, beginning at the upper left hand corner and running from left to right, as shown on the diagram. It will be necessary to refer to this for the solution to the puzzle. The white squares are used so the checkers will show.

No Cause for Worry.

One day Mrs. James rushed into her husband's presence with a wild look of excitement and exclaimed: "Oh, John! Nora made a mistake and tried to start the kitchen fire with gasoline."

"Gasoline, eh?" calmly replied John. "Did she get it started?"

"Did she get it started?" cried the amazed Mrs. James. "It blew her out the kitchen window!"

"That's all right, my dear," returned the philosophic Mr. James. "It was her afternoon out, anyway." R. C.

Explained in Full.

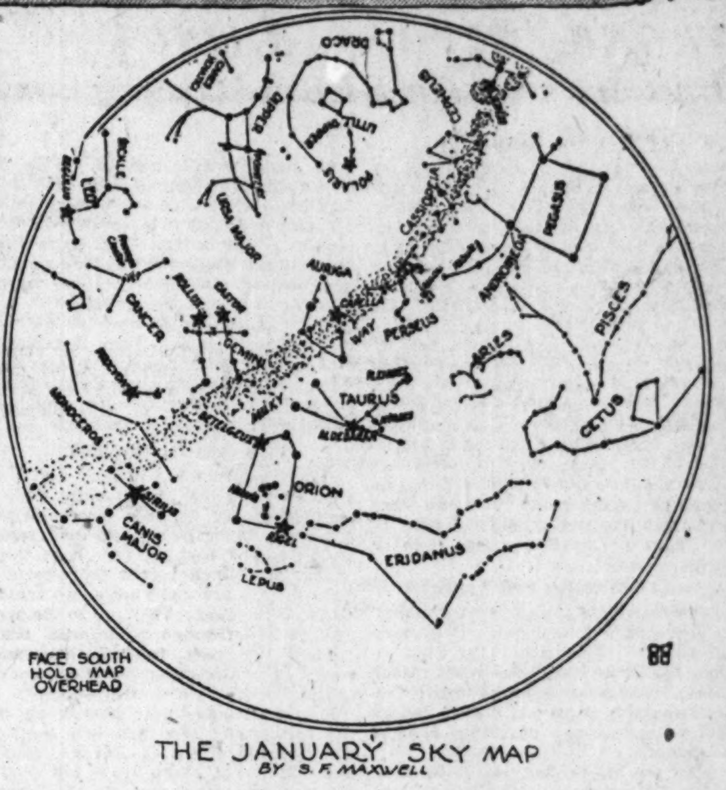
Lavish use of the word "phenomena" by a colored preacher brought a member of his congregation to him at the close of the service to inquire its meaning.

"What do 'phenomena' mean? Well, Brudder Brown, Ah'll 'splain by tellin' you fust what it ain't.

"Now, ef you comes down de road an' passes a briar patch, dat ain't no phenomena. An' ef you goes on an' sees a cow, dat ain't no phenomena. Den 'sposing you goes a little fudder and hears a mockin' bird a-singin' in de tree, dat ain't no phenomena.

"But, Brudder Brown, ef you comes by a cow a-settin' in a briar patch a-singin' like a mockin' bird, now, dat am a phenomena." S. Q.

ASTRONOMY



THE JANUARY SKY MAP
BY S. F. MAXWELL

THE CYCLE OF EVOLUTION.

EVOLUTION is a cycle. The matter of our bodies has been used from time immemorial to make the cells of living things. The waves of energy which give us breath were carried to the sun by nebulæ and meteors, which in turn collected them from the light in space, and when we, in turn, are dead, they will wander on until picked up again. There comes a birth, a life, a death, and a rebirth to every grain of matter in the universe.

Once in every dozen years or more, so often that all of us may see a few before we die, a new star blazes out where it was dark before. There comes a burst of blue white splendor, a rapid rise in magnitude, a fierce, white heat, and then a slow decline, with fluctuations in its reddening light, and back to darkness and to nebula. As the star leaps into light its spectrum shows a land all white with flame, and as it cools it leaves a cloud of blazing scarlet hydrogen and helium, and tossing banks of green nebula gas.

Red stars in their final stages of extinction are not affected by their relation to the Milky Way. All the dying suns we see are near us, those far away are invisible in their dullness. A star gathers speed as it grows old. It is born standing still, from nebulæ gathered in from all sides, and then, as it ages, it moves at an ever faster rate until, when dark, it passes like a huge black monster, rushing headlong to its doom. The swarms of space are snares to catch the stars. There are fields in Cygnus and Aquila that are stellar graveyards in the truest sense, where mighty suns have been observed to die.

As it speeds on, it meets the swarm. There comes a burst of brilliant light. The meteors pelt its face by myriads. They make great flames leap out to tinge the deadly cloud with red reflections. The star's air strives valiantly to turn their thrusts. They pour down in a rain of fire, and strip the gases off. They beat upon the star until it has no power to resist them. They pound upon its rocks, they churn its mass to flame, they fleck off bits of land, they rend and tear like ants upon a victim moth, until they grind it to pieces.

As meteors are consumed by their impact on the lesser molecules of air, so is the star consumed, and like the meteor is burned to dust. Great product clouds of nebulæ hang about the spot, like buoys among the stars, to show where a tragedy has happened.

In Perseus in 1902 we saw the swarm itself, lighted by the burst as the start crashed in, and as the light waves traveled out to the limits of the swarm they made an ever widening set of rings, like ripples about the spot where a stone has fallen into the water. Nova Persei was about 300 light years away, and the event occurred near the year 1502 A. D. Many such destructions have occurred since then, and the advancing faces of their lights are still in space, while we, looking toward the spot, can see nothing till they reach us.

The end of a star means nothing to the mundane of us upon the street. It does not affect our food, or clothes. It does not make us laugh—perhaps it does not even make us think. But to some world, somewhere, it was the end of all. Time was turned backward to the genesis, and the long, weary steps of evolution must be gone through once more. And sometimes, stray bits of these suns and worlds whose matter forms the bulk of meteors and comets come to us, and we can see mute evidence of the greatness of the past, of living volcanoes, and of water, in a setting of time that knows neither start nor finish, as we hold them in our hands.

FARM AND GARDEN

WHAT'S WRONG WITH FARMING TOLD BY FARMERS

By Frank Ridgway.

Diagnosing the ills of agriculture and seeking some remedy that will be good for all has become a national pastime for farmers, agricultural leaders, rural economists, and others directly and indirectly interested in farming. The best diagnostician so far seems to be the farmer himself. He is uncovering many things that have been overlooked in attempts made to prescribe a tonic for farmers throughout the nation.

Several have been able to find the outstanding symptoms, but up to this time none has prescribed a satisfactory remedy. Various sorts of concoctions have been stirred up and left on the patients' table with specific directions, but few of the farmers are willing to take their medicine.

Corn acreage reduction is the epidemic that has caused more trouble than any other one thing. The diagnosis was correct—overproduction of corn—but when acreage reduction was prescribed individual farmers threw their hands in the air and refused to take such treatment.

They apparently have good reasons for refusing. In a letter to The Tribune Churchille Barr of Tipton, Ind., gives several of the most outstanding reasons why many farmers cannot take part in carrying out the corn acreage reduction policy that has been suggested.

This and other letters that have been coming to The Tribune recently clearly indicate the great need for closer coöperation between farmers. Probably the most hopeful sign for the future of agriculture is that farmers themselves are digging to the bottom for facts that will help in bringing relief.

The following letters, the second installment of a series of letters written by farmers and printed in The Tribune, indicate the thoroughness with which farmers are analyzing their own business:

ALL CAN'T LIMIT CORN.

With a big supply of corn in the country and grain prices as they are today let us limit production of corn and increase the acreage of clover and other legumes.

CHURCHILLE BARR

This sounds good, but let us look at this proposition from the standpoint of the different classes of farmers. It is true that the big farmer—I mean the farmer that owns his land and has a bank account besides—could, if he desired, limit production of corn and increase his clover and other legume crops.

Corn is the big money crop on our farms today—I'm speaking of Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, etc. The more corn we raise the more cattle and hogs we can fatten out, therefore the more money. Corn is the crop that the big majority of us farmers think the most about, and plan other crops to fill in the rotation plan of farming.

The big farmer with the bank account is financially fixed so he can buy corn, etc., and feed it to his hogs and cattle, and let his ground rest by growing clover, etc.

Now, what about the small farmer who has forty to sixty acres or the large farmer who is heavily in debt? Can the little farmer let his ground rest (grow clover and other legumes)? Probably his farm isn't paid for. He may owe $300 or $400 on his place. And the last two years his debt has increased. Interest is high; many things he needs and must have are very little lower. For instance, two years ago or thereabout I paid $5 for a pair of overshoes. Corn was then in the neighborhood of $1.50 per bushel. A few weeks ago I bought another pair of the same brand of overshoes at the same store and from the same clerk. I paid $5 for them and corn was less than 30 cents per bushel.

Costs to Let Soil Rest.

These farmers cannot borrow money to buy corn and hogs, etc. They have already, in some cases, borrowed to their limit. Anyway they would rather lose a couple of hundred next year than to go in debt a thousand dollars and take a chance on losing $300 or $400 more.

Now the big farmer who is farming 160 to 300 acres and is heavily in debt cannot slow up on corn production, the main revenue from which he has been paying his interest on $10,000 to $15,000 mortgage and keeping his boys and girls in college. Can he afford to let his ground rest at this time?

I know full well the importance of crop rotation, but this is more than just crop rotation, and it will take more than just clover to pay all his debts and keep the boys and girls in college, etc.

Here is another class, the city farmers. They own farms, but live in the city, and have a city business besides—stores, real estate businesses, etc. They, in all probability, have a living coming from their city business and could limit corn production if they cared to.

Corn Is Still King.

Of course there are exceptions to all rules. Maybe some men in this class are not good business men, or for many other reasons their city business has failed. They couldn't afford to slow up on corn production.

The renter who pays cash rent must raise the crops that he can realize the most from. You couldn't expect him to pay his $8 and $10 per acre and just raise clover. It is to be remembered that most renters haven't capital enough to do business on and are always hard run.

On the other hand, if all the farmers would limit corn production it would, no doubt, solve the problem to a great extent, but as I see it all the farmers can't do this.

It has been said that "corn is king." It's just as true today—"corn is still king."

CHURCHILLE BARR,
Tipton, Ind.

GOOD TIME TO BUILD SOIL.

The farmers believe it is good business and judgment on their part to curtail the production of corn to a reasonable degree and increase the acreage of legumes—clover, soy beans, and alfalfa—and thus build up the fertility of the soil at the opportune time. We must not forget the debt we owe the coming generation—that of maintaining soil fertility.

It is a well known fact that there is a great surplus of corn at the present time, and until we reduce production to fit the demand corn cannot sell at a profitable price. At current prices corn removes more fertility from the soil than the value of the corn.

During the war period the corn acreage was increased in most localities from 15 to 20 per cent, while the legume crops were decreased. This, if continued, will result in a depleted soil fertility. When a factory's machinery becomes impaired it is shut down for repairs. This is the very thing the farmers are contemplating doing in a small degree. On the other hand, when a factory's production exceeds the demand it materially lessens the output to fit the demand. When a factory does this we do not say it is striking; never should any one say the farmers are striking, as they are only applying businesslike methods to farming.

Cites South as Example.

It is an economic necessity that we should do this just as the cotton growers of the south did. They were overproducing when the bankers and farmers coöperated and put on a reduction campaign, which again put cotton growing on a profitable basis. In many localities the bankers refused to finance the growers if they did not curtail production, for they realized the prosperity of business depended upon the prosperity of the cotton growers.

It is gratifying to see how many of the bankers of the corn belt realize the necessity of a corn acreage reduction. However, there are a few business men who are foreboding want and starvation. Such is not the aim, for the farmers will always do as they have in the past—feed the nation. With the surplus we have at present a 2,000,000,000 bushel crop of corn would be entirely sufficient for 1922.

During the war many farmers bought lavishly of "blue sky" stock and speculated in high priced land. These farmers have no one to blame but themselves for their rash act. But, on the other hand, many tenant farmers bought land with the aim of having it as a permanent investment, but today they are unable to meet their payments and therefore lost their farms and the money they had paid. In other terms, many farmers are bankrupt.

Farms Heavily Encumbered.

Today the farmer's buying power is only about 76 per cent of normal, yet he is compelled to pay inflated prices for what he buys. In less than ten years the indebtedness on farm land has increased over 100 per cent and nearly 50 per cent of our farms today carry encumbrances greater than their cost fifteen or twenty years ago.

High taxes—the natural aftermath of war—exorbitant freight rates, and limited credit have all added to the farmers' worries during these depressed times. It is imperative that public expenditure of money be reduced to the minimum in order to aid in the reduction of taxes. Road building should be reduced to the minimum at the present time; that is, we should maintain what we have and keep them in good condition, but curtail the construction of new roads or buildings until such time as the price of material and labor warrants.

Freight rates must be materially reduced before we get back to normal. Present freight rates are a great burden to all, but especially so to the farmer, who is extensively engaged in marketing as well as buying.

Marketing System Wasteful.

The War Finance corporation has aided the farmers in some districts; if not directly it has done so indirectly, as the local banks in many cases are much more generous with their loans.

The farm bureau is today looked to by the average farmer for help, notwithstanding that many are expecting returns too quickly.

It is a well agreed fact that our present system of marketing and distributing our products is wasteful and expensive. We market about two-thirds of our grain within a period of about ninety days, which overloads the market and plays into the hands of the speculator. These are all great problems of the farmers, and it is little wonder they are anxiously awaiting the perfection and operation of the work of the grain committee of seventeen, the national live stock committee of fifteen, and the dairy committee of eleven. With sufficient support from the farmers all of these projects have a great future, and will aid not only the producer but also the consumer.

BURTON HONAN, Ockley, Ind.

A BRIDAL IDYLL.

By Guy Lee

I love you not because your dad
Has money at the birds to sling;
I'm quite an independent lad
And proud as all git-out, bing, bing!
No wedding chimes could ting-a-ling
For me, if that was all you had.
But then, of course, the fact you bring
A hefty bankroll's not so bad.

You're recently a sweet girl grad,
And life for you is in the spring,
But that's not why my pulse is mad—
Your other attributes I sing.
To deeper qualities I cling
Than juvenile, to make me glad.
But when the fact you're rollicking
With twenty's joy is not so bad.

A handsome brow I think is sad
If from it mind has taken wing;
Mentality's my greatest fad,
My hobby over everything.
To outward charms I couldn't swing
Alone. But still and yet, egad,
The fact you're beautiful and fling
A nifty form is not so bad.

Sweetheart, you bet I've bought the ring:
To Wealth and Youth and Brains you add
A siren's lure . . . So, balladiing,
Again I say, it's not so bad!

AVIATION

Air Mail Service to Move to New Field on May 1

ON the first day of next May the air mail service will move ships, hangars, and repair buildings from Checkerboard field. The new field is located on the old Speedway track site, west of 1st avenue and south of 12th street, Maywood. The field will be one of the largest air mail stations in the country. It is an "L" shaped field. One of the legs measures 4,000 feet, while the other measures 2,000, and each leg is more than 1,200 feet in width.

"It will be a great improvement over Checkerboard field," said D. B. Colyer, division superintendent, last week. "I do not want to say anything to discredit Checkerboard, because it is a good field and has served the mail service well. The new field will be larger and, therefore, much better.

"We plan to have it fully seeded by the time the April showers start falling. The hangars will be completed before the first of May, which we have set for our moving day. We have not rebuilt the hangar that burned a month ago. The old hangars are being used to store the ships until the change comes."

Mr. Colyer asserts that the fire which destroyed five mail ships a month ago, did not upset the schedule at all.

"We just put reserve ships into service, and the mail was flown with the clocklike regularity that has always characterized the service," he said. "You know, we maintain an average of performance that will compare with a railroad."

AIR MAIL CHIEF

The picture shown above was taken last summer when D. B. Colyer, superintendent of the Chicago division of the air mail, was just starting the boom that has put the aerial postal service on such a high scale. Now he announces that the mail will move to a larger field and that the efficiency of the service will be increased by more space and greater facilities.

Ashburn Busy.

Ashburn field has been unusually busy during the last month, according to John Metzger, keeper of the Aero Club of Illinois hangar situated there. Ships have been flying from that airdrome every day during the last two weeks, says Mr. Metzger.

"Quite unusual for the time of year," he said.

Nimmo Black Opens Ground School Tomorrow

THE first class in the ground school of the Nimmo Black Airport, Inc., gets under way tomorrow when Black, an able pilot and chief instructor, takes the first group of students into the shop at 1503 Devon avenue and commences to show them how to build airplanes and motors. Twenty students have signed with the Black school.

Classes will be instructed in the building of airplanes, motors, and all of the accessories to flying. They will actually cover wings and fuselages, shape propellers, shoot trouble in motors, and do everything necessary to show them "why airplanes fly and why they stop flying." Night classes are to be held.

"Most of the students are boys from 14 to 20 years of age," said Black. "They want to know what goes inside an airplane. Of course they all want to become aviators, but they are sensible enough to want to know all about the construction of a ship before they start in to learn actual flying. That is why I am instituting the winter ground course. They will take up flying when summer comes around."

AVIATION QUERIES

Questions regarding aviation will be answered in this column of The Sunday Tribune. If a lengthy or personal answer is desired, send a stamped addressed envelope. Address Aviation Editor, The Chicago Tribune.

Altitude.

"In midsummer, when the temperature on the ground reaches 98 degrees why is it that an aviator flying at 40,000 feet becomes so cold that his eyeballs freeze? W. R. G."

The atmospheric pressure decreases as you ascend. The rate of decrease is rather slow for the first 15,000 feet. At 40,000 feet the pressure is somewhere around three pounds per square foot. The decrease in pressure causes a decrease in heat. The little molecules in the air that collect the heat of the sun are fewer, consequently there is little to carry the heat of the sun. R. W. Schroeder found the thermometer registering 69 degrees below zero at 38,000 feet.

Stability.

"Have gyroscopes ever been used successfully on airplanes? "K. H. G."

Several inventors have tried the gyroscope to insure stability on airplanes, but to date have met with but little success.

Duration.

"How long can a naval plane stay in the air? K. H. G."

It depends upon the type of ship. Some can stay for ten hours. The average duration flight of a naval fly-

Avoid Trouble

The Solution

Sediment, water and dirt in fuel cause delays and repair bills. The carburetor becomes clogged with dirt which results in increased operation costs and poor running motor.

There is a solution. The Stromberg Gasoline Filter solves the problem. It cleans the gas—removes all dirt—takes out water. Filters the gas just before it enters the carburetor—after it passes vacuum tank. Reduces repair bills—eliminates delays. Attached to bottom of vacuum tank, carburetor or gas line. No mechanical knowledge required—connect it yourself.

A well made necessity that outlasts car and pays for itself. Large screening area—does not interfere with gas flow.

Needle valve shuts off flow of gas when sediment chamber is released for cleaning.

Prevents theft—It locks the car.

ART AND ARTISTS

Anisfeld Drawings of Opera Settings Given to Institute

By Eleanor Jewett.

ONE of the most fascinating little exhibits that has been seen for some time at the Art institute is the group of stage settings, done in color by Boris Anisfeld, that hangs in the corridor on the second floor. The drawings the the gift of the Friends of American Art. Unfortunately they are placed in not the most favorable position as to lighting. The large windows directly above them cause shadows to fall over their brilliant surfaces, dimming the rich tints and obscuring the outlines of many of the fantastic conceptions portrayed.

In spite of this serious drawback however, there is a great deal of fairy poetry to be enjoyed in the settings. The fact that the opera for which they were made—"The Love of Three Oranges"—has already seen the light of day upon the stage does not take away from their enchantment. It but enhances it. You can discover easily in these tiny impressions why that opera is the opera it is, full of quaint persons and quainter incidents, relying for their appeal upon their picturesque weirdness rather than upon any harmony of music. The group is a splendid addition to the permanent collection of drawings owned by the museum.

In Gunsaulus hall has been installed the Buckingham collection of English luster ware. This collection was assembled by Lucy Maud Buckingham and was presented to the institute by Miss Kate S. Buckingham. It contains a number of extremely rare examples as, for instance, an entire case of silver "resist" on a canary yellow background. This is almost all Bristol ware.

An exhibit of oriental objects, designated as the Oriental Loans exhibit, is scheduled for the coming week, and promises many pieces of unique interest. Among those who are lending specimens of importance are Mrs. William J. Calhoun, Mrs. Richard T. Crane, Russell Tyson, and Mrs. George L. Smith.

"The Spanish Belle," by Nicholas Muray, one of the fascinating prints in the exhibit of photographs shown recently at the Chicago Camera club.

The time has come for us to bid farewell to another group of institute exhibitions. On Wednesday the exhibits which have made the east wing so gay during the last month will be taken down to make room for the twenty-sixth annual exhibition of paintings and sculpture by artists of Chicago and vicinity, which opens Jan. 26. The twelfth annual exhibition of etchings under the auspices of the Chicago Society of Etchers will be opened at the same time.

One of the younger artists and architects, Charles L. Morgan, has recently done a clever thing with etchings and sketches of places of interest here and at the University of Illinois. Following in the footsteps of the Municipal Art league, which late last fall issued a set of postal cards illustrative of the best points Chicago can boast, he has printed a number of cards equally artistic and dealing with such sites of municipal significance as Grant park, the Wrigley building, the Fourth Presbytrian church, the new Field museum, and various intersections of our busiest streets. The group is beautifully done and of great interest. His drawings of the new memorial stadium to be built at the University of Illinois make that wonderful undertaking a matter of practical beauty and immediate necessity.

The Chicago Architectural club has a special competition annually, known as the annual foreign traveling scholarship, which is open to all active members of the club. A. S. Morphett, the winner of the 1921 scholarship, is at present in England, just starting on his tour. The winner must keep the club in touch with his movements and must submit an itinerary of his proposed trip before he leaves. The money, which this year it is hoped will amount to $1,000, is to be used to help out the expensive side of travel abroad. The program of the 1922 competition will be announced next Saturday. The program committee is composed of the city's foremost architects.

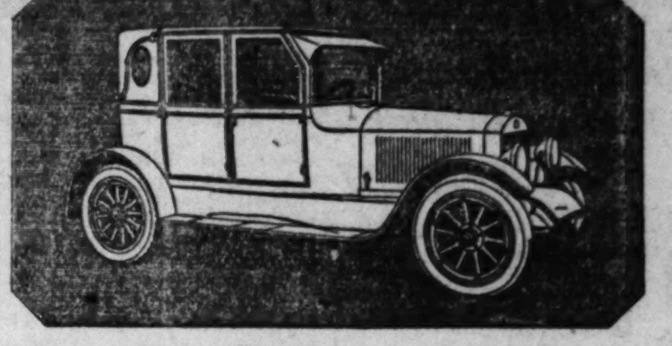
At the Art institute there has been hung a group of drawings in the corridor outside the Old Masters room. They were purchased, with exquisite discrimination, by Miss Alice Roullier with funds given her for the purpose by the Friends of American Art and Robert Allerton. Miss Roullier bought the drawings on her last trip abroad.

Two studies by Puvis de Chavannes and three by Degas, the gift of Mr. Allerton, are among the most interesting. Of the drawings purchased by the Friends of American Art several call for special mention. One of the loveliest is a Millet—a peasant woman leaning on her crook, with sheep feeding in the background. A pen and ink sketch by Vincent Van Gogh is impressive; Jongkind's "Le Café" is a delightful glimpse of shawled ladies and rush bottomed stools, and "Les Demoiselles en Bleu," by Constantin Guys is a charming thing.



Our New Four-Door Brougham

OUR new Brougham anticipates the requirements of exacting motorists for equally comfortable seats, for from one to five passengers, with excellent vision for all, and with four doors to make all seats equally accessible.

To those who know Stanley performance—the ability to pull smoothly and powerfully in slow, hard going; to stand at the curb in zero weather with no misgivings as to a quick, quiet start; to take a rightful place in the traffic and hold it without offending or delaying others, and always comfortably, always with unmatchable silence and dignity—to those who know these things there is little to add.

To others, we suggest coming to our salesroom to make a complete investigation of Stanley closed cars. Ride in one. Drive it yourself. Then you will realize what Stanley stored power, supplemented by coach work of the highest class, means to you in the actual, every-day use of a motor car.

How Does Your Car Start These Cold Mornings?

If you only knew how much correct spark plugs have to do with the successful performance of your car you would install a new set of AC Plugs today.

Most of the trouble you blame on piston rings and the carburetor really comes from worn-out or incorrectly designed spark plugs.

If your engine starts hard, if it misses and splutters and jerks along, don't blame it on the piston rings or the carburetor; probably all you need is a new set of AC Spark Plugs.

There's nothing in the world like the old reliable AC to make a car perform like new.

Put in a new set of these plugs this very day and note the big improvement in performance.

Most manufacturers of fine cars, trucks and tractors equip their engines with AC Plugs at their factories because they have tested all plugs and found AC's best.

Aviators, speed-boat pilots and racing men insist that their engines be AC-equipped because they know they can depend on these plugs.

Follow the example of these experts and see that nothing but AC Plugs go into your car.

There is a specially designed AC for every make and style of engine. There is a special AC for the car you drive.

Go to any good dealer today and get a complete set of AC Spark Plugs specially designed for your car.

Ford Owners Note: For the Ford car we build a special Carbon Proof AC. You will find it the best Ford Plug you can buy. If the Ford dealer will not supply you, all other good dealers can meet your needs promptly.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Religious Drama Feature in Many Churches Today

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE religious drama as a means of instruction and the deepening of religious impressions will be used in various Chicago churches today and tomorrow.

This evening at 8 o'clock a pageant of Christian liberty, entitled "The Striking of America's Hour," will be given in the Wellington Avenue Congregational church, Wellington avenue, near Broadway, the Rev. Von Ogden Vogt, pastor. The cast includes fifty persons. There is no admission, as it is regarded as the evening religious service of the church. The drama will be given in the chancel of the church without the use of curtains. Selections from the old English miracle plays and modern works in the spirit of the medieval mystery will be given on future Sunday evenings. These include "The Dust of the Road," by Kenneth Sawyer Goodman; "The Hour Glass," by William Butler Yeats, and the medieval "Abraham and Isaac."

Tomorrow evening the drama of "Isaiah" will be given at the Congregational club banquet at the Hotel Sherman by the Community club of Winnetka.

The fifth annual Presbyterian midwinter institute will stage a religious drama as the first number on the evening program following a fellowship supper at 6 p. m., the drama being given from 7 to 7:45. The institute will meet in three centers on the three sides of the city. At the Edgewater church, Kenmore and Bryn Mawr avenues, the drama will be under the direction of Mrs. A. Starr Best. At the Crerar Memorial church, Prairie avenue and 57th street, Miss Mary Taft, daughter of the sculptor, Lorado Taft, will have charge, and at the Central church, Warren avenue and Sacramento boulevard, Mr. and Mrs. Howard R. Cannon will have charge. The Presbyterian institute will continue Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings.

Dr. Howard Agnew Johnston, president of the Chicago Church federation, has sent a request to churches not to forget that tomorrow marks the second anniversary of the enactment of the eighteenth amendment to the constitution, and to stress law enforcement. The Methodist Episcopal church, through its board of temperance, designates today as "Crush Nullification" day. The various ministers' associations which meet tomorrow morning will take up the matter for discussion.

The Rev. R. A. Torrey, D. D., dean of the Los Angeles Bible institute, formerly dean of the Moody Bible institute, Chicago, will speak at the Moody institute Tuesday at 11 a. m. and 8:15 p. m., Wednesday, 10:30 a. m., and Thursday, 9 a. m.

In membership the Chicago presbytery stands third in the Presbyterian Church of the United States of America. The four largest presbyteries are Pittsburgh, 61,602; Philadelphia, 46,797; Chicago, 40,362; New York, 37,186.

THE REV. E. LUTHER SPAID, D. D.

Dr. Spaid is the pastor of the Calvary English Evangelical Lutheran church, Berteau and North Keeler avenues, which has launched a building program to cost from $50,000 to $75,000.

The present brick structure will be remodeled and enlarged. A subscription of $31,000 was taken under the leadership of the previous pastor, the Rev. J. M. Bramkamp, D. D., president of the Illinois synod. Further subscriptions will be taken so the work of building can proceed next summer.

Dr. Spaid became pastor Oct. 1. He came to Chicago from a fourteen year pastorate at Carey, O. Other Ohio pastorates were in Newark and Springfield. He received the degrees of A. B. and A. M. from Wittenberg college and in 1919 the degree of D. D. from Hamma divinity school, Springfield. Dr. Spaid is active in the social and reform movements of the Lutheran church, but is especially devoted to preaching and the pastorate.

Special evangelistic meetings will be held today at 11 a. m. and every evening until Feb. 1 by the Rev. Dr. Ernest Crabill and party in the Irving Park Baptist church, Irving Park boulevard and North Koster avenue.

Samuel McChord Crothers of Cambridge, Mass., eminent as an essayist, humorist, and preacher, will speak at 8 p. m. at the Sunday Evening club, Orchestra hall, on "The Unknown Citizen." "Christ Is Knocking at My Heart," by Philo Otis, will be given by the choir.

The big brothers of the Holy Name society of the Catholic archdiocesan union will meet at 3 p. m. today at Holy Angels hall, Oakwood boulevard and Vincennes avenue. Judge T. D. Hurley will preside and the Rt. Rev. A. J. McGavick, bishop elect of La Crosse, will be present.

An all nations program will be given at the annual meeting of the Chicago Tract society, interdenominational, tomorrow at 12:30 in the First Methodist Episcopal church, Clark and Washington streets. Mrs. Kopachuk, a Ukrainian, will sing, dressed in the native costume. Dr. George L. Robinson will speak.

The pension fund of the Episcopal church, in addition to the regular pension allowances, has authorized a grant of $1,000 to the widows of all ministers of the church who die in 1922. If the funds will warrant it the grant will be made to widows in future years.

The Rayfield Thermostat

furnished complete, ready for attaching. Standard size for use on practically all motor cars, costs but

$10

How the Rayfield Motor Thermostat Operates

When the motor is cold, the butterfly valve is closed and the circulation of water from the radiator is stopped. As the water around the motor heats, it rises through passages and circulates around the diaphragm.

The diaphragm, which contains a sensitive liquid, expands when the water circulating around it reaches a predetermined temperature and is fully expanded at a higher temperature.

The expansion of the diaphragm opens the butterfly valve by means of the pin and circulation of the water to the radiator is allowed until the water temperature falls below the predetermined point, when the diaphragm contracts and the butterfly valve again closes.

Here is a device that warms your motor quickly and keeps it warm

RAYFIELD THERMOSTAT assures easier starting and smoother performance even in the coldest weather

These are the days when an easy start—a quick getaway—and a smooth performance depend upon a warm motor.

Motor temperature governs, more than any other factor, the pleasures of winter driving. Automotive engineers have agreed that a motor to operate efficiently at any time must be maintained at a uniform temperature of approximately 178 degrees—that any device that forces this temperature and holds it is a necessary addition to all water cooled engines.

This is exactly what the new Rayfield Motor Thermostat does.

Any water cooled motor with a pump circulating system can be kept always at just the right temperature, winter and summer, with a Rayfield Thermostat.

In zero weather it forces the required temperature almost immediately, assuring a quick getaway.

It maintains this temperature constant throughout the running time, assuring smooth operation.

It keeps the motor warm long after it is stopped, assuring easy starting again for several hours.

In addition the Rayfield Thermostat materially reduces the cost of operation.

It saves gasoline because gasoline combustion is more complete in a warm motor.

It reduces repair bills because with better vaporization and combustion, unburned gasoline does not escape into the crankcase to thin out the lubricating oil.

It saves oil because draining of the crankcase is necessary only about one-fourth as often.

It insures more efficient performance because carbon deposits and fouled spark plugs are minimized.

And the installation of a Rayfield Thermostat insures the same efficiency every day in the year. While its advantages are more noticeable in zero weather, they are just as effective in summer at 80 degrees when 15 to 20 minutes of running time is necessary before the motor reaches the required temperature.

The fact that Rayfield Thermostats are now used as standard equipment on many of the high grade cars of today is unquestionable evidence of their ability to perform efficiently on different types of motors.

They are built and guaranteed by the same company that for years has manufactured the great Rayfield Carburetor, a product admittedly without a superior in the industry.

The Rayfield Thermostat is simple, automatic and free from all adjustments and can be installed by anyone in 10 or 15 minutes. Simply cut out two inches of the upper water hose and put the Thermostat in its place.

Put a Rayfield Thermostat on your motor today and do away with your cold weather troubles. Give your motor a chance to perform at its best. Save from 10 to 30% in operation and receive an entirely new sense of driving pleasure.

The Rayfield Thermostat is for sale by all the leading garages and accessory dealers. If, however, your dealer cannot supply you at once, you can order through the Rayfield factory, if you mention your dealer's name.

TRADE SCHOOLS.

LEARN THE AUTOMOBILE TRADE IN OUR REPAIR SHOP. THE STUDENT ACTUALLY DOES THE WORK

When we say we teach the Automobile Trade by practical methods, we mean that students are taken into our Repair Shops and taught to repair all makes of Automobiles by actually doing the work required on these cars. We obtain our jobs just the same as any repair shop in the city. We advertise our work at extremely low prices—just enough to cover breakage—and car owners bring their automobiles into our shops to be repaired, overhauled, etc. This work is all done by the student, supervised by instructors who act as shop foremen. We do not have a bunch of junk cars that is pulled apart by one gang of students, put together by another gang, pulled apart by a third gang, etc. Ours is fresh; new, clean work, coming in just as fast as we can handle it. When a student finishes one job, another is waiting for him. Fords, Dodges, Buicks, Cadillacs, Hudsons—everything with a gas engine—are taken into our shops, repaired by our students, and sent out as good as new.

The driving also is taught right out on the road, by actual practice. The student is placed behind the wheel, an instructor at his side, and drives up one street, down another, etc., until he actually knows how to drive. NO MATTER HOW MANY LESSONS ARE REQUIRED.

THERE IS NO CHARGE FOR BREAKAGE. The money that the car owner pays for having his work done covers all breakage of any kind. YOUR TUITION FEE IS ALL THAT YOU PAY.

School is in session every day in the week, beginning at 9 a. m., and every evening, beginning at 7. The student comes as much of this time as he can. OUR COURSES ARE UNLIMITED. THE STUDENT STAYS WITH US UNTIL HE FEELS PERFECTLY CONFIDENT THAT HE UNDERSTANDS THE TRADE.

Courses, $15, $25, $30, $45. Can arrange time payments.

We will be glad to have you come and spend a day or an evening with us FREE OF CHARGE, just to see what we do and how we do it. YOU WILL BE UNDER NO OBLIGATION WHATSOEVER, AND WE WILL NOT EVEN ASK YOUR NAME.

HOMESEEKERS INVESTORS BUILDERS

I have subdivided the finest and most desirably located tract in the heart of the most exclusive residential section of beautiful and will immediately offer to those who are looking for a choice, highly restricted homesite or investment, large lots 60x160 feet at unusually low prices of $395 to $600, and will sell on very easy terms to responsible parties. There is no other property in Park Ridge for sale at anywhere near these prices, and adjoining property is now being offered at nearly three times my prices. Each lot has a 40 ft. building line, $4,000 restriction and is one of the very few places around Chicago where you are absolutely protected in the future against any undesirable element.

To those who are not familiar with Park Ridge, let me say that it is a completed and restricted community of artistic homes and fine improvements situated on the very edge of Chicago, in the direct path of the city's greatest growth. It is reached by sixty trains daily on the Chicago and Northwestern, only 29 minutes from the loop and a monthly commutation fare of less than 12 cents.

In convenience, beauty, healthfulness, social life and everything that makes a home location attractive, this property presents a combination of city and country advantages that cannot be surpassed.

To those who are interested in building I have a building and financing plan that is unsurpassed, I can afford to build at an extremely small profit and have over 100 choice plans to show you.

You could want no better, more attractive, more convenient location for a real home and by buying from the owner you could hardly find a more desirable investment.

The time to buy to the best advantage is now. Write today for map and full particulars. Address S N 264, Tribune.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Florida.

I CAN PROVE THAT VERY LARGE PROFITS ARE BEING MADE BY GROWERS IN THE SCENIC HIGHLANDS OF POLK COUNTY.

Here we have hills 300 feet above the sea, beautiful clear lakes filled with sporty bass. No freezes have ever damaged our fruit. Schools and churches close by; two hours to Tampa.

If you are interested in a sound business proposition whereby you can have a grove developed by experienced men at small cost [all sums for development to be deposited in State Bank] I will invite you to be my guest at Hesperides Clubhouse and will agree that your expenses, including railway tickets, meals, automobile trip, etc., will be limited to $75. Special inducements to those joining my next party leaving Saturday, Jan. 28.

You can then see for yourself our wonderful groves, learn what profits they return, meet the men who will care for your grove until you care to come down permanently.

Hesperides is an ideal community of Northern people who either spend their winter vacations at our clubhouse or are planning on making their homes here. Their bungalows are situated in the pines on a hill overlooking a beautiful lake. I have several new, artistic bungalows ready for occupancy, as low as $2,500. The groves are on an adjacent tract. Largest commercial orange grove in the world is located at Hesperides.

You will be interested in reading a booklet of facts entitled "An Income Producing Home," outlining this square business proposition. It will come within the financial limitations of the self-made man of moderate means, with $1,000 or more to invest safely. Choice property is doubling in value and returns are equal to 50% on investment. Bank and character refs. exchanged. Write or telephone for full information.

This is a message for everyone who uses The Tribune Want Ad Section

When you use a Want Ad to bring you BUYERS, don't ruin its chances for success by choking it to death! Most of the few Want Ads that fail to produce good, quick returns are those that have been cut or squeezed to two or three lines, regardless of the demands of the offer. Let your offer ITSELF determine the size of the Want Ad. Give people an exact, definite idea of what you have, whether it be an auto, a house, a job, a business, a set of books or a suite of rooms.

Because

The more you tell the quicker you sell!

HERE are a few examples of how this principle works out in actual practice. It is NOT just theory that "the more you tell, the quicker you sell." It is being used right now, every day, to bring increased returns to Want Advertisers.

This campaign, in which we urge every Want Advertiser to make sure that the wording of each Want Ad is correct, is but one phase of the service rendered to the people of Chicago by The Tribune Want Ad Section. Think of the hundreds of ways in which Want Ads serve, in business, in the home, in personal affairs! Take a slow look through the Section today and try to visualize the enormous sums of money, markets, material, and men that are represented there!

And then, how convenient it is to place a Want Ad in The Tribune. Just Call Central 0100 and ask for an Adtaker! Or if you are near Madison and Dearborn you can insert your Want Ad at The Tribune's big Want Ad Store.

The Tribune's close coverage of the able-to-buy people in this community places before you big, rich markets for almost any kind of an offer. Sunday circulation over 800,000 and the largest morning daily circulation in America. Read—and use—The Want Ad Section—where hundreds of thousands of Tribune readers buy, sell, hire, and exchange, to mutual profit. Check your Wants—now—and let The Tribune Want Ad Section supply them, and save you expense and effort at the same time. Call Central 0100 and ask for an Adtaker!

Mrs. A. C—— had nine housekeeping suites to rent. The Want Ad she was running was altogether too brief; there wasn't any news in it! Features peculiar to Mrs. A. C——'s particular housekeeping suites weren't even mentioned in the Want Ad. And so there were no returns!

A Tribune representative called, inspected the rooms, and wrote a Want Ad that included sales features—items of high interest to a person looking through the Want Ad section for housekeeping rooms. The results produced by this second Want Ad were, to her, astounding. She received over seventy personal calls and rented all nine of the suites, within a few days after this ad appeared!

> HARPER-AV., —— —TO RENT—THE MOST unusual one and two room suites for housekeeping in the city of Chicago. They are beautifully furnished, including gas range, Leonard ice box, linens, silverware with each suite. These suites are all newly decorated. Ideal laundry furnished. These suites rent for $13.50 to $16.50 per week and will appeal to couples of refinement. MRS. A. C—— I. C. express and surf.; near beach.

* *

Renting a two-flat building in River Grove, Ill., isn't such a complex job, apparently, but Mr. W—— ran this Want Ad for over a month and did not succeed in renting his place, which he advertised as follows:

> TO RENT—MOD. 2 FLAT BLDG., ST. HT., garage. M. W——, River Grove, Ill.

It seems that the building had just been completed; there was a fine brick two-car garage; corner lot; railroad station only a block away; yet he didn't have a word of this information in his Want Ad! His ad was rewritten, including information that would really interest a person susceptible to an offer of a home in River Grove. Here it is:

> TO RENT—MOD. 2 FLAT BRICK BLDG., just finished; elect. lt., gas, st. ht., hdwd. floors; brick 2 car garage; corner lot; C., M. & St. P. R. R., 1 blk. to station; reasonable rent. M. W——, River Grove, Ill.

Mr. W—— accepted the revised Want Ad enthusiastically. The day it ran several people responded and the place was promptly rented!

* *

Mr. L—— wanted to sell his printing shop. He was using Want Ads in the Business Chances classification of The Tribune Want Ad Section. A quick sale was highly desirable. For three days during a week he ran this Want Ad:

> PRINT SHOP—FOR SALE—CHEAP. —— Fulton-st.

He received not an inquiry. He called a Tribune Adtaker and she advised him to put the Tribune Want Ad slogan to work. Accordingly he gave a brief list of the equipment in the shop:

> PRINT SHOP—FOR SALE—25 INCH CUTter, 8x12 press, 7x11 press, type stand and cases. Motors for presses. Ph. Columbus ——. —— Fulton-st.

This Want Ad was inserted once; on the following day he sold the shop. Mr. L—— says, "If I had used the Tell More Want Ad in the first place, I would have saved myself much trouble and waste of time."

* *

Mrs. W—— also will testify to the wisdom of The Tribune's Want Ad slogan, "the more you tell, the quicker you sell." She had been running this Want Ad in the Board & Lodging classification for a week and had received but two phone calls, neither of which amounted to much:

> PARK-AV., ——, 3D—LGE., PLEAS.; NR. Garf. Pk.; excel. table; best trans. Kedzie ——.

A Tribune Adtaker phoned her. It seems that not only was the apartment "large, pleasant, and near Garfield Park," but there were three rooms, living room, bedroom, and a model kitchen; two beds completely furnished; just the place for four girls to get together, share the expense, and have a fine, cozy time of it! But her Want Ad had not contained this information, so necessary if any one was to know just what she was offering!

> PARK-AV., ——, 3D—TO RENT—3 ROOM apt.; real kitch., pantry, ice box, porcelain sink, porch, liv. rm. and bedrm., 2 beds comp. furn.; suit. for club of 4 girls; very desir.; $5 per week each. Kedzie ——.

This was the Want Ad as rewritten. Where the first ad had run for a week without results, this one rented the place the day it appeared! The reason is simple: The market was there; the apartment was a good one; the price reasonable; it remained for Mrs. W—— to tell it in her Want Ad. When she did, she got results!

Mr. G. L—— was in a hurry to leave the city and take up the business of existence elsewhere; so he inserted this Want Ad in The Tribune to sell his house:

> FOR SALE—7 RM. RESIDENCE ON NORTH Side. If interested call Ravens. ——.

It was a good house, with plenty of features that would interest a person looking for a house in Ravenswood, but all Mr. G. L—— said about it was that there was a "7-room residence for sale on North Side." And, as there were probably many houses on the North Side for sale that day, and as many of these were described and dwelt upon in sufficient detail, while Mr. G. L——'s house was not, he received no response to his ad. A Tribune Adtaker offered this Want Ad as a suggestion:

> FOR SALE—RAVENSWOOD 7 RM. FRAME residence on concrete; 30x125 ft. lot; h. w. ht.; hardwood finish; newly decorated; large front porch; 2 car garage; 2 blks. "L," ½ blk. surf. Owner leaving city, sacrifice; part cash, balance terms; imm. poss. See any time. —— N. Campbell-av., Ravenswood ——.

This Want Ad was inserted and returns were quickly forthcoming. Good prospects were secured and the house sold. Next time Mr. G L—— will apply The Tribune's Want Ad slogan first!
